They're Home Again by Telephone

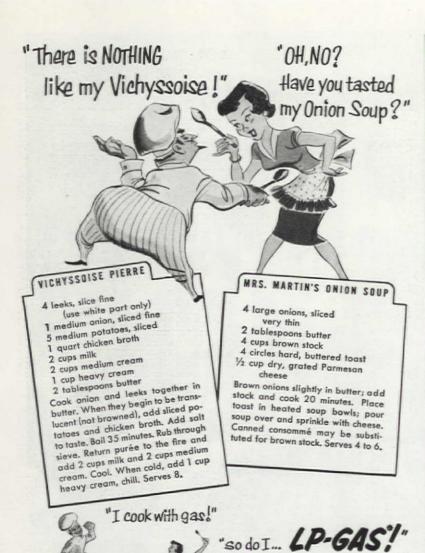

"Hello, Mom! I'm OK." These are precious, priceless words—spoken thousands of times a day by our men in uniform.

Wherever they go or whatever they do, the telephone is their link with home. Over it go the voices of loved ones, the cry of a baby, the news that all is well. That's why providing attractive, comfortable telephone centers at army camps and naval bases is such an important and heart-warming part of the work of the Bell System.

We like to have soldiers say, as one did recently—"It makes a guy feel good to know he can call home and be treated nice while doing it."

HIGH PRAISE

Dear American Home:

Jean Austin is making me lose my figure, God bless her.

-MRS. ROBERT S. ALLISON

Dear Madam:

What happened to the food article "American Home Cheapies"? I thought it clever, original, and very much needed in these days of high food prices. I hope you have not discontinued it, but it is not in the August issue received today.

—MRS. J. M. BEEBE No, Mrs. Beebe, "Cheapies" are definitely here to stay!—ED.

Dear Mrs. Austin:

Want to let you know how much your magazine means to me . . . Like a child with an all-day sucker, I just try to make it last as long as I can . . . I always place myself in the center of every beautiful home.

— JEAN OUINN

Dear Mrs. Austin:

We think it is a grand feature of your excellent magazine that you carry no advertisements for alcoholic beverages such as are found in many of the popular magazines and newspapers of this day.

We believe it is for the safety of public welfare that you are willing to forego the lucrative remuneration you would receive for such service.

-MRS. JESSIE C. GREEN

TOO "FOLKSY?"

Dear Mrs. Austin:

Whenever we daughters pay our monthly visit to our parents' home, we eagerly reach for The American Home to learn and benefit from your delectable concoctions... Heretofore we have been enchanted by the charming way you pen them....

How shocked we were to find . . . the insulting reference to "folks." In our homes we entertain guests, not folks . . . The word just does not seem to have a place in the vocabulary of an editor.

-MRS. OLIVER T. HOLMES, JR. England

Dear American Home:

While at first I considered your magazine clever, I have been lately not much impressed . . . I merely refer to your cultural approach . . . Our standards have been already lowered enough and the editors of any magazine should consider it a duty to raise the standards of the readers, mostly the substantial kind, by using good language.—MRS. SERENE SUNDAY

Dear Editor:

I have put this off as long as I can. I just must voice my objection. In the July issue, you mention "a beautiful Sunday morn . . . allows you to remain serene and selfpossessed . . . " What I am wondering is this: just why do magazines assume that people have quit going to Sunday School and church on Sunday mornings? Repeated references are made to "lazy brunches," etc. Well in my family, these things just aren't possible, nor do I know any families where they are. We have three daughters, and Sunday is just like any other morning, only more so, because Mama has to get dressed up too!

My hair is getting shorter, not only from having it cut to keep cool (physically!) but from pulling it out, from the futile feeling I get, especially on Sunday mornings. Fixing four heads of hair (none of which curl properly without a lot of coaxing, laying out four pairs of white gloves, among other sundry items, and someone nearly always manages to lose a shoe!

You see what I mean? I would be very interested in knowing more about this remaining serene and self-possessed.—MRS. DALE DURRETT

Beautiful new dinettes-with chairs you can treat like a floor

Koroseal brings you and your family easier, better living

It's the new style in dinettes to have light, bright cheerful colors—even in soot-flaked cities.

The newest kind of chair is soft, comfortable but washable with its Koroseal upholstery. You can spill anything on these chairs and wipe it right up again; the kids can walk on them. A few swishes and they're clean—as easy to wash as the table tops!

Koroseal upholstery is practically scuffproof too. It lasts for years without change—looks new when any ordinary material would be scratched, worn and old looking. Loose dirt comes off with a damp cloth, and you can use soap and water as often as you like. With little effort, almost no work, it's like having new furniture a dozen times a year.

Koroseal flexible material makes raincoats so light you can fold them into a pocket or purse—yet they won't stick even if you put them away wet. It makes garden hose a third lighter than ordinary hose, shower curtains, garment bags, baby pants and dozens of other things.

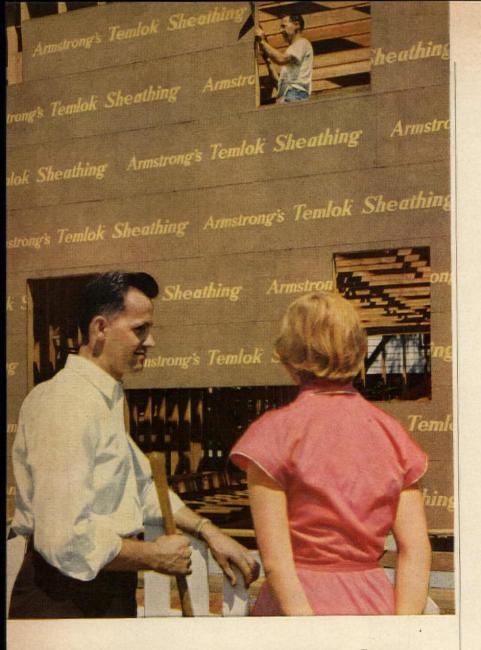

You can find Koroseal upholstered furniture in most stores (any store can get it for you) and you can get Koroseal for reupholstering—make your favorite furniture new again!

Whenever you want things that stay new looking, that are easily cleaned, give protection against almost any stain or damage, look for the Koroseal label. (If they don't have the label they aren't real Koroseal.) The B. F. Goodrich Company, Koroseal Division, Marietta, Ohio.

"Looks like we're going to have smart neighbors"

This new way of building has been attracting a lot of attention. People are learning that Armstrong's Temlok Sheathing gives them a stronger, more comfortable home.

Temlok is an unusually strong and durable material, made by compressing tough pine fibers into large boards. Nailed to the frame of a house, Temlok gives the whole structure added rigidity. Its light weight and large size make application quick and easy with little or no material waste.

Savings don't stop there. Temlok has valuable insulation properties which cut fuel bills in winter and help to keep your home comfortably cool in summer.

You'll never have to worry about dampness harming Temlok. Each pine fiber is thoroughly waterproofed with asphalt.

If you are planning a new home, you'll find it pays to be sure that Armstrong's Temlok Sheathing is used. For complete information see your local lumber or building materials dealer.

struction, with no holds barred. Carnivals and window-painting contests had only limited appeal.

It was Bruce O'Neal, young school-board member and energetic president of the local Amvets organization, who first proposed that the entire community pool their efforts in a gigantic Halloween celebration. "What we need is an 8 o'clock curfew!" countered businessmen. But 3 months of pavement-pounding finally won out and 75 local clubs and organizations, each sponsoring a game or contest, put on a program designed to keep the kids in perpetual motion. There was plenty of everything for all, and by 9:30 parents could usually convince a weary and overstuffed youngster to call it quits. That's when the orchestra took over for the teen-agers, with more free food and dancing.

The big party has given the entire community a chance to work and play together. It is eagerly anticipated annually, and merchants dig down and donate with hardly a phone call to remind them. Everybody has fun, and Santa Barbara's once-horrible Halloweens are now happy ones.

The police officers on duty Halloween night can relax and stop worrying now that the big community party takes the kids off the streets. Officers sit around and reminisce about the old days when a hundred volunteer policemen were sworn in just for duty on Halloween

WORDS to the WISE NO. XVII, URGING FINAL DIVORCE of ALL WOMEN from ALL CONTACT with GAME COOKERY, VERBAL OF MANUAL

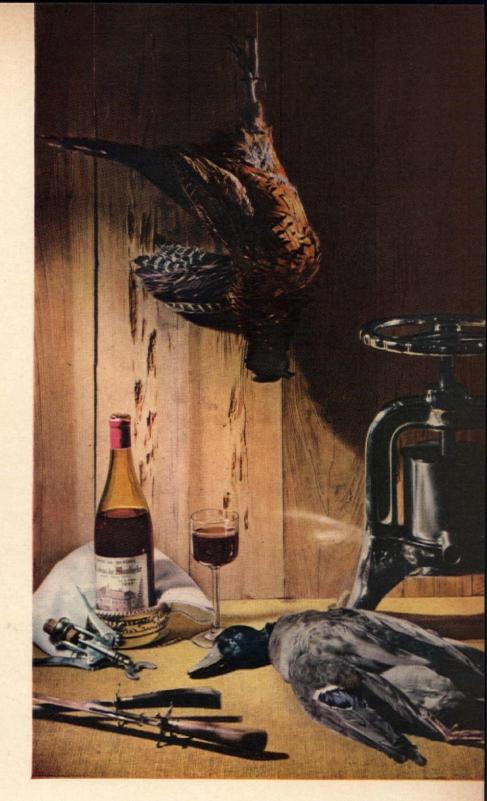

May heaven shield us for setting this down in cold print, but employ no female aid or advice when cooking game. . . . Women, by and large, seem to lack the proper psychology or respect for this serious business. Actually it probably isn't their fault, poor dears. They really haven't gotten much chance to cook game, for most men after coming to shaving age are bright enough not to take wives, sweethearts, or other feminine attachments, on camp-hunts or into duck blinds. . . And women who don't get taken hunting aren't sympathetic or interested in cooking game, except to confuse the male who is eagerly trying to whip up some amateur masterpiece. . . . Give them easy indoor games and let them go away and play until the dish is ready to serve.

*From The Gentleman's Companion by Charles H. Baker, Jr. Copyright 1946, Crown Publishers. Used by permission of Crown Publishers, Inc.

blast is nonetheless not very constructive. Most women would adore going away from the kitchen to play—but unlike the gifted Mr. Baker, an overwhelming majority of our twelve million huntsmen dump their bloody feathered friends in ladies' laps. This repels most ladies. But that, too, is not very constructive, for figures prove that feminine distaste deters not the male huntsmen. Let us, therefore, arrive at some sensible compromise and recognize that if Daddy will a-hunting go, Mama must a-cooking.

In the sincere hope that American women may appreciate that what provides exciting, healthful sport for her menfolk also provides superlative eating for her table, I have shown some mighty fine game eating on pages 66 and 67. Not the dull roast and on-toast variety these—but the sort all too often confined to fabulously expensive gourmet restaurants. I beg of you, no longer deprive your hunter of the sweet pleasure of boasting, sharing, and enjoying with his friends the gratifying results of his gaming skill. Here are recipes that show you how to proceed with confidence, food to serve with pride—and fie on Baker. We'll make him eat crow, that we will!

Buy with a Change In Mind

GERTRUDE BROOKS DIXSON

It's a woman's prerogative to change her mind, and we'll defend this charming inconsistency of the feminine sex right down to our last breath. But, oh lady! Can it cost you money if you happen to make the wrong change! Particularly in the costly business of furnishing a home. Let's face it: good goods and chattels these days cost a whale of a lot of dough. The thickness of carpets might be measured in dollar bills, not inches; the spring of a sofa measured in gold, not steel.

Unless your bank balance is mighty fat you've got to thread your way carefully through the mystic mazes of selecting furniture and assembling it all in a pretty picture by means of a lovely color scheme. Once the nerve-wracking task is completed and the last picture hung you may collapse in a chair and breathe, "Never again!" But that's discounting human nature, the toll of time and, in particular, the changeable nature of the female mind.

If you stop to consider it, you know full well that in three to five years the arms of that sofa are going to be quite soiled in spite of every doily you can (and we hope you won't!) muster. Sun and grime will have done their work on your pretty curtains. Little hands, and big hands too, will have made a mess of your walls.

If you're as smart as we hope you are, you'll keep this change in mind when you set out originally to furnish a room. You'll not only think twice—you'll look twice!

To show you what we mean by this second look we got in a huddle with Bamberger's, a big store in Newark, N.J., and produced the pairs of rooms you see here. In each case we started with the carpet. We took one room and furnished it the way you might if you were starting out to decorate your living room. Then we took the same room, keeping the original carpet and the major pieces of furniture, and redecorated it as it might appear five years later.

Your carpet is the logical foundation for any scheme for several reasons. It is one of your most expensive purchases. It's not one that you can afford to change often, and if you buy quality carpet, there's no reason why you should have to. The moral of our little tale is this: when you first buy your carpet do, please, take the long view. Create one color scheme around your carpet, then put that color scheme aside and do a completely different scheme, then another. If the carpet you have chosen proves compatible enough to harmonize perfectly with several schemes, then you can be sure it will stand the tests of changing tastes, times and temperaments.

Begin with a good carpet color

It can be any color—gray, beige, green, and this rose are the reigning favorites—but there are infinite shades for every taste. Here we chose a rose foundation on which to build a lovely pink room. The important fabrics are a flower-scattered chintz, silk antique taffeta, and a luscious nubby pink cloth which appears on the sofa. The one contrasting accent is turquoise velvet—on the barrel chair and as a sofa pillow. Accessories are in character with this formal scheme: the painting above the mantel, the elegant black and gilt sconces, the interesting pictures with gold-leaf mats. The effect is beautiful but not everlasting—such a delicately colored scheme will soil, should be bought with a change in mind.

Test it with several schemes

To prove the versatility of our rose carpet we created another color scheme around it, completely opposite in character. It's the same room but with a very different look. Whereas the other room is fragile and feminine, this one is robust in color and masculine enough to be a library scheme. And, we feel, a far more livable and durable room. The rose of the carpet is picked up in the flowers scattered across the rich brown paper, and in the draped valance. Brown-textured fabric gives substance to the small-scale sofa, and the club chairs have a much more tailored look slip-covered in the broad stripe. Simple picture arrangement looks best with strongly patterned wallpaper.

Change in Mind

Allow for changing tastes

Gray is one of the best home bases any room can have. This gray cotton carpet is extremely versatile, can switch from modern to traditional without turning a tuft. Remember that even though you may be a traditionalist today, changing tastes and circumstances may make you more modernminded tomorrow. The room at right began as a Colonial room, and very pretty it is. On our cover and repeated below we show you a more contemporary version—same carpet, same furniture, but with a completely different approach to color.

See "Where Credit Is Due" on page 156

Experiment with patterns

● Don't think that the long view need limit you only to plain carpet. Patterned carpets create more attention in themselves, but many variations are possible if you'll try the experiment. A green leaf design was the starting point in the room at left. Almost as much texture as pattern, it is subordinated to the bold print at the window. In the room at right, it becomes the dominant design as all other fabrics are confined to solid colorings. These rooms are on view at L. Bamberger & Co., Newark, N. J., September 23rd through November 1st.

ne of the real signs of spring is the brilliant display of tulips around many suburban homes, as well as in parks and other public places. Many people who admire them, even though not garden-minded, wish they had some around their homes. Why don't they? Well, in some cases because, at flowering time when the urge is strongest, bulbs cannot be had for planting. Others mean to buy some but, by planting time, forget their good intentions. Remember that, though spring may be the beginning of the gardening year, next spring (as far as tulips are concerned) begins right now, this fall. There is ample time to plant before hard frost arrives, but none to lose in deciding what to plant and where to plant it, in making up a list, and in sending in an order.

No flower is more foolproof than the tulip, calls for less specialized knowledge and skill, and, normally, is troubled by fewer enemies. Few home grounds lack suitable conditions—namely, a good garden soil, plenty of sunlight, and good drainage. Tulips will not tolerate wet feet nor do well in shade. Their flowering season starts in April (or, if the spring is mild, even in March) with the species, or Botanical kinds. The Early Singles and Doubles carry on through April and are followed by the Mayflowering varieties which often last until Memorial Day. This last

(and by far most popular) class includes the Darwin, Cottage (and Lily-flowered), Breeder, Parrot, Triumph, Rembrandt, Bizarre, and Bybloemen types and also the fairly new Late Double or Peony-flowered. The first four or five are the most widely grown, the rest having a more or less specialized appeal for connoisseurs. Parrot tulips, though May-flowering, are really distinct with gracefully fringed and wavy petals and enormous blooms that are at their best when wide open. Their brilliant colors and lack of formality give an exotic touch to any garden. The modern Lily-flowered hybrids, usually included in the Cottage class, have long, slender, graceful flowers and tapering petals that flare in lilylike fashion. Much hybridization has made it difficult to keep the former classifications distinct, so many dealers now list simply Early and May-flowering kinds; this seems sensible and is certainly less confusing for the average buyer of tulips.

What kinds and how many to buy will be determined partly by the space available, partly by your budget. As with other plants, large sums can be spent for rare novelties, but there are plenty of fine standard varieties (a few are listed in the table) to be had at reasonable prices. If you cannot afford all you would like, do not be tempted by so-called "bargain offers." That way lies here's been another swing 'round in window fashions-with the result that well-dressed windows are looking oh-so-rich and oh-so-handsome, these days. Not so long ago, you weren't supposed to have valances, or festoons, or fringes-just wallto-wall draperies hanging straight from the ceiling and as full as you could afford to make them-simple, and very prodigal in their own way. Now, such treatments are wonderful in modern rooms where wall-wide windows are met at the top by the low part of a pitched roof. But they look just plain silly when the ceiling is high, or the window is narrow, or, for some other reason, you get an awkward gape of wall showing above the window. You just have to have a valance in a case like that, so the valance staged a comeback, and picked up a number of clever tricks on the way. When you use one with draperies, don't forget the lesson the wall-to-wall variety taught you-make your draperies plenty full (at least double fullness), for stringy little side "drapes" are still a thing of the past.

How to Dress a Window

1 The valance has learned to turn corners and frame three sides of a window for a trim treatment which makes the most of a froth of sash curtains—an excellent way to let in the light and block out a bad outlook. Frames like this may be made of wallboard or plywood, with the fabric tacked on. Make it yourself if Dad has a jigsaw and a steady hand, and if Mom is deft enough to make a good job of covering intricate curves

2 A plain valance may look awkward if you want it to reach from window top to ceiling of a high room. Here's a gracious solution: top the valance handsomely with a piece of crown molding onto which fabric is pasted with wallpaper paste. Note niceness of padded scallops at the bottom, richness of crewel-embroidered linen, another old favorite which it's so nice to see again!

3 The French festoon, complete with cascade and fringe, lends its opulence to windows again. Here, dark green satin is lined with lighter green, and one cascade is light-side out for added shimmer. Tieback draperies play a return engagement—but don't rob them of splendor by making them skimpy. Note that curtains echoing wall's tone are richer than white would have looked here

4 There's no news in this kind of curve on a valance bottom, but see what excellent sense it makes at the top, when valance doesn't reach ceiling. Don't miss heavy outline of padding

> You can dress a window in shutters every bit as well as you can dress it with fabric, and using several tiers allows great variety. Short café curtains add softness

Fall is the time to Build s you enjoyed your garden last summer, how many times did you think A of additional features which would add to the charm, or the livability, or the usefulness of your property? Fall, when the need for them is still fresh in your mind, is an ideal time to make such improvements as the half-dozen we show here. It's a more leisurely time than spring when so many hours must be spent in actual gardening, and it's a more comfortable season for outdoor work than is winter. What's more, the ground is in good shape for digging, and planting can be done, but needn't be done on the minute as it must in the spring. Paint dries well, and bothersome bugs are fewer-and the fine autumn weather invites you to get started!

1. HAVEN IN A GARDEN: Curved, legless bench is made of 1" x 2" redwood strips, set on edge ½" apart, and supported, cantileverwise, by 4" x 6" tapered redwood beams set right into brick wall 3' apart

2. GARDEN POOL for goldfish, lilies, or reflecting, creates a center of interest. See how effectively this one serves to terminate the brick wall and paved terrace, to separate them from the rest of the garden

3. HANDSOME, SIMPLE GATES to mark the entrance to the driveway of a modern or ranch house, and excellent with a post-and-rail fence. (Note that even the shadow of the one that doesn't show is interesting)

4. SOPHISTICATED GATE for a Georgian or French house also blends well with a post-and-rail fence. Note how ball motif is picked up from post tops and repeated at the top of each round gate picket

5. LEAD UP TO A FLAGGED PATH with a flight of stone steps—but don't leave them bare. Note that these are planted so skillfully that both plants and stones look as if they had been there forever

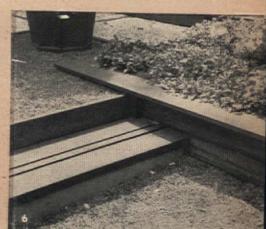

6. MATCH STEPS TO RAISED BEDS: Step made of two 2" x 6" redwood planks, separated for looks and drainage by a 2" x 2". Raised bed for violas is made of split redwood with a 1" x 8" redwood cap

Pattern for a Change

This old Swedish folk-art motif is just the thing to give a bright new look to such dated items as Victorian cupboards. We made it into a painting pattern with a repeat border. Pattern 1370 houses which belong to the Victorian "Life with Father" era. Whether or not they were good for Great-grandpa, they're too stiff, too dark, too dour for us. But Gramps built well, and expansively, so his houses are often too sound to tear down, too spacious to pass up—and too stolid to live in. To live in as is, that is. But here you can see how the deft use of color and pattern alone can remodel such a house without tearing down walls. Just paint out the bad features and highlight the good. Take the bay window, for instance—it was the pride of this room when it was new, and it still is its best feature dressed in a modern manner, draped in a printed fabric which matches the wallpaper exactly—and note how the drapery treatment is echoed in another room. The Victorians never brought sunlight into a house as we did here by splashing the sun's color on the walls, but see how such a play of color and pattern transformed this room into a pleasant place for moderns to live.

The Victorians doted on heavy, dark woodwork, and their elaborate built-in cupboards look just plain forbidding to us. But restrain that impulse to tear them out, for they are the ancestors of the built-ins we dote on today-and a little paint and a measure of pattern can make them into decorative assets which earn their keep as storage units. This glamour treatment was in three parts: first, the cupboard was joined to the ceiling, like a modern storage wall. Then its stain was stripped off, and it was given several coats of light paint. Finally, it was graced with AMERICAN Home Pattern 1370-a gay and timeless motif we borrowed from Sweden and translated for you.

Much a Cinderella-switch in her small, out-of-date bedroom would make any girl feel like a princess. At one end, a floor-to-ceiling built-in both masks the ugly wall jog and becomes the room's most interesting feature-visually, and otherwise. It not only houses her books and the bric-a-brac she loves to garner, but it contains her record player, record collection, and a special loud-speaker as well. The furniture which lines the walls has hidden wonders: a drop-leaf desk has storage drawers and sliding glass doors; a small chest opens up to reveal a dressing table with mirror. Off-white walls and carpet and good, close-to-the-wall furniture arrangement make the small room seem much larger than it really is.

Which WASHER for you—and Why?

EDITH RAMSAY

of all the automatic household help you can buy, the washer, which can make all the difference in your life between Blue-Monday slavery and push-button leisure, repays the most knowing consideration. When you buy other major appliances—an electric range, for example—you judge by size, price, and a wealth of convenient extras—but basically, every electric range (or gas range, or refrigerator), is essentially like every other in operation. In the case of washers, however, there are fundamental differences in operation: some require your presence, others work in your absence; some types are best if you have dirty work clothes (or play clothes) to launder, others are best with delicate fabrics; some need more hot water than others; some need more water pressure; some need professional installation, others can just be moved in.

So study this Buying Guide to determine which type fits your own needs best. If you've gone into the question before, you'll note that every type has been enormously improved since the earliest washers first proclaimed freedom for women by relieving them from the one job which most vividly symbolized household drudgery—the hand-washing of clothes. Data about the washer's companion, the dryer, is coming up next month.

DOES A WASHER EAT UP HOT WATER?

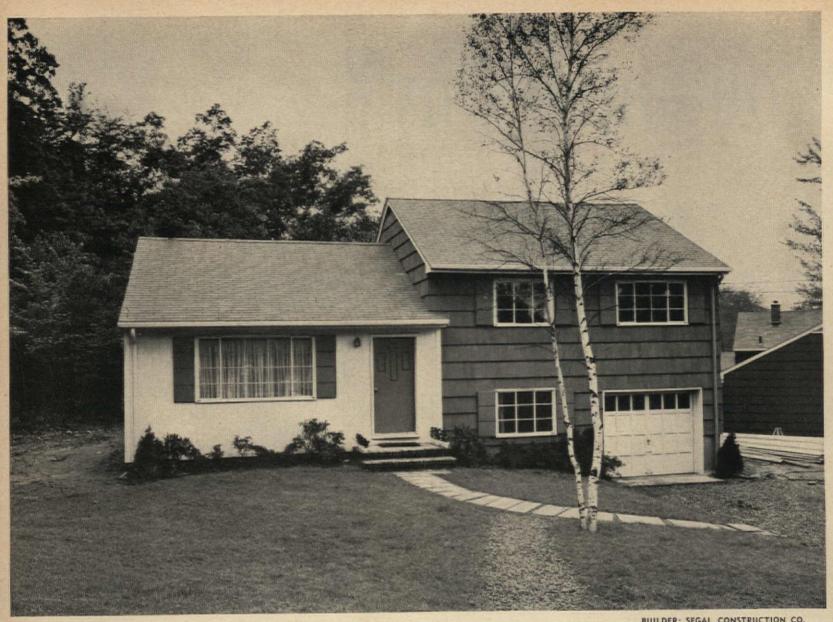

In brief, the answer is that if you have a 40-gal. hot water tank, you can use any type of washer, and some types require much less hot water than that. As to whether or not washers use more hot water than hand methods, the answer is that they don't—for a good job that gets clothes really clean.

The average household washer's capacity is an 8-lb. load of clothes. If you were to wash such a load by hand, and do a proper job of it, really rinsing out all of the soap or syndet, you'd need about 30 gals. of hot water (plus about 25 gals. of cold water, depending upon what is being laundered). Now, a wringer or spinner type of washer requires the same amount of hot water for a comparable job. The automatics vary in their hot-water requirements, some taking more, some less than a good hand job. But if you have an average-sized hot-water tank, you can use any automatic washer to do an average family wash. Remember that we are discussing hot water, for cold water is also used for part of the job. With small heaters, stagger the washer load. Laundry needn't all be done the same day, and you can do it during hours when baths aren't taken and dishes aren't washed.

WHAT ARE THE TYPES? HOW MUCH DO THEY COST?

The wringer type, the Great-grandma of them all, is still extremely popular and the least expensive to buy. Among its great improvements is the fact that the wringers are now so engineered that they are absolutely safe—they can't harm the fingers of adventurous moppets and they won't break the buttons on shirts. They can best be used in combination with two laundry tubs for speed rinsing. One wringer washer has two tubs of its own so that rinsing is done in one tub, while another load of washing is done in the other. The extraction of water by the new types of wringers is very good, so washing can go right from them into a dryer. Wringer washers are especially convenient in areas where water supply is low.

Price depends upon the size of the tub, the type of wringer, the PLEASE TURN TO PAGE 88

BUILDER: SEGAL CONSTRUCTION CO. INTERIORS BY KOOS BROS., RAHWAY, N.J.

On the Level—3 Ways!

The split-level house is a comer for the best of good reasons: it gives you more for your money-and so the American homebuying public, a canny lot, is grabbing them up faster than they can be built. That's why we went shopping for a split-level with an eye on your future, and found this honey to offer you as a Blueprint House. In northern New Jersey, where land costs are high, the man who built this frame house can't keep up with the demand for its twins at about $16,000 each. But wherever you live, you can have it built for yourself at moderate cost-and live and grow in it for years to come (see Blueprint Order Form, page 155). And we do mean "wherever you live," for you can adapt this house to any terrain, and the concentration of windows front and back shields it from neighbors on a narrow lot.

For just about the price of a smallish, 1,100 sq.-ft., one-level house with half-basement, you get nearly 1,300 sq. ft. of living space, plus a sunlit laundry and an extra-long garage. What's more, it gives you three living areas, three different places to eat (plus a possible fourth out of doors), three bedrooms, three different entrances to control the traffic through any one room, and three levels which keep members of a growing family out of each other's hair. A big order for a small house!

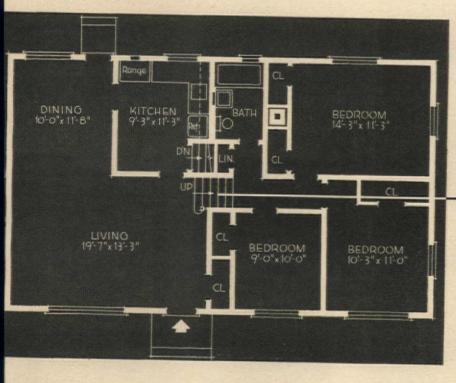

That's the beauty of a split-level house: it's expansive but not expensive, for it's a happy cross between the costly rambling ranch house with several wings, and the traditional two-story job which has the advantage of construction economy, and the disadvantage of long flights of stairs and a too-cramped feeling. That's why, the split-level, originally designed to take advantage of a sloping lot, has proved to be so attractive that you find it springing up on meadows and plains throughout the land.

In this case, only six short steps (which you take in your stride before you can say "climb") separate one level from another-yet each is an independent area. At grade level is the work and play department: the garage, which has room on one end for a workbench; the heater-laundry room; and the good-sized recreation-TV room, a major "extra" in this plan. Six steps, and you're in the heart of the house with its sweeping L of living and dining space, its great-big windows, its tidy front entry, and its convenient back door opening onto a perfect space for a dining terrace near the charmer of a kitchen. Another six steps bring you up to the three bedrooms and bath which have the privacy and the quiet of a level of their own. Yet note that the bath is still handy to the living room.

And now that you've toured the house with us, let's go back and

On the Level (Begins on page 50)

It's gay enough to charm a bride—and good enough to win the complete approval of an experienced homemaker who knows that beauty in the kitchen means more than mere looks. Here the modern equipment is compactly arranged, there's plenty of pine cabinets where they are needed, and there's a cheerful corner for dining examine some of it in detail-with especial attention to that ground-level, all-purpose room which you couldn't have in a one-level house of this size, at this price. The need for a family room, in addition to the living room, is making itself felt more and more among families who try to get along without it—for no matter what "areas" you plan, if you try to combine the elements of a gracious living room and a let-your-hair-down family retreat in a single room, you end up with something which is neither completely gracious nor completely relaxing. So furnish this one for Papa, and put the TV set here-and then just watch the extra jobs the room will take on. For one thing, the daybed, where Papa takes his nap, makes it a guestroom as well. Then, what more perfect place could there be for the kids to play indoors in bad weather? Let them raise their rumpus here-neither you nor your living room need turn a hair. And when Junior gets the measles, what better "isolation" ward could there be than this cheerful room, away from the other youngsters? You're having two couples in of an evening? Set up a bridge table, let those who will, watch TV-and bring your snacks down and serve them right here. Or turn this room over to teen-agers while you entertain upstairs. A perfect spot, too, for family Sunday-night suppers.

A second room for living brings back a pleasantly old-

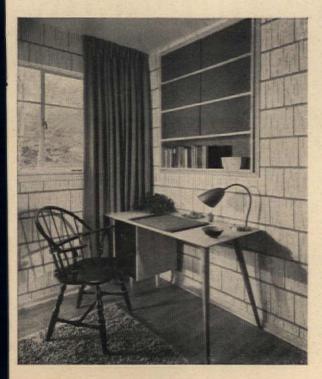

These three pictures take you from the front door through the sweep of L-shaped living-dining area. The space itself is good and large for such a house, but we decorated it to make even more of its natural endowments. Note how both large windows are hung with sheer curtains and outlined with simple draperies

Shutter-motif paper used on one wall of the living room creates an illusion of space beyond. Note the adroit mixture of traditional and modern furniture here

Dining-room paper continues illusion: shutters might open onto just such a scene. Note how same carpet, same window treatment unifies the two distinct rooms fashioned state of affairs, for the real living room takes on the role of "best parlor"-as elegant as you like, but so much more friendly than the tiptoearound-in parlor used to be. If you furnish that downstairs retreat with your old living-room furniture, then start from scratch in the living room proper (Papa will be so tickled with that recreation room, he won't put up much of a fuss). We made the upstairs living room informal enough to spell "Welcome," and added a big dash of dignity to discourage Junior from tracking mud through it (he needn't do so, since he can enter the house from the rear near the kitchen, or from downstairs through the garage). See how we mixed modern with maple, how we used few accessories but chose them with care-for importance and imposing scale.

The living room, dining room, and kitchen are graced by a pleasant built-in which doesn't show in our pictures: the L-shaped wall which divides the kitchen from these rooms sports a series of shelves, backed by obscured glass so the light pours through to highlight your books, knickknacks, or the collection you can display here.

Unlike most basement recreation rooms, this one gets its full share of daylight, has a big closet to boot. It's a fine playroom for small-fry and their friends by day, for parents and their pals by evening, and for the whole family at any time. The daybed which makes it cozy for family lounging, adapts it to overnight guests

The smallest bedroom is a perfect guestroom-den, or a livingbedroom for a lucky teen-ager. Note built-in cabinet above the desk, with one shelf for books, three for storage. Don't miss the optical illusions which enlarge it: draping the side walls makes the window seem wider, shingle-pattern paper, with fake vines on one wall, makes room seem part of the outdoors beyond

but in terms of increased comfort and living space

—as well as in improved appearance—

this remodeling was much more than skin deep

Only the face was changed here-

Sure, the After looks better than the Before—but that's only the half of it—for what really happened here was that, in bringing the house up to date in appearance (and its looks were improved about 1,000 per cent), the once-idle front porch was transformed into a very much used outdoor room which doubles the living-room space of this house and makes life in warm weather a pleasant experience. And all of this was accomplished without building new walls or foundations.

Though the house is excellent inside, the exterior was a mistake from the beginning—and not only because it lacks distinction. It was built in 1935, and like thousands of houses of similar design put up at that period—it shouldn't have been! The massive-looking front porch was nothing but a misbegotten offspring of the porte-cochere of Victorian mansions. Now, the porte-cochere did a job in its day, but front porches which imitate it do not: this one was too cramped and dinky to sit out on, too public to furnish for comfort, and it was all out of proportion, eating up the whole street side of a bungalow. To make matters worse,

OWNERS: COL. AND MRS. GEORGE G. SMITH, HOUSTON, TEXAS ARCHITECT: LAYONÉ DICKENSHEETS ANDREWS, A.I.A.

Puts up a New Front

this one was built in Houston, Texas, where the weather is pleasant enough to invite sitting out of doors nearly the whole year 'round—if you have a screened-in place to sit. This house had no such blessing.

Col. and Mrs. George G. Smith, who acquired it some years ago, engaged architect Lavoné D. Andrews to set matters to rights, and she did so superbly, as you can see in the illustration above. She built a usable, roofed-over porch the full width of the house, and she lowered the porch level to increase its spaciousness. She masked the center portion with wood siding to make an imposing entry, blessed with a louvered door to let in the breeze. She then made the porch into a really welcoming retreat, any hour of the day, any day of the year, by screening it with a smart kind of aluminum screen—the kind that's made of tiny louvers which deflect the sun, let you look out, but are hard for passers-by to see through. If your house has an outdated façade of this type, you could do as the Smiths did—or go a step further: that gable entry could be a vestibule, and you could have a porch on either side—one for dining, one for lounging; or one for parents, one for small fry.

But the thing you notice first about this remodeling—the way it improves the appearance of the house—is, of course, an important part of its accomplishment, and it took an architect with an artist's eye to achieve it. You notice at once that it now looks wide, and inviting, and well rooted to its site, where it once looked narrow, hunched over, and restless, for all that it was heavy and fussy. It is now really well balanced, almost classical in its simplicity, and the plain wooden supports of the porch suggest a columned portico, but without pretentious airs. The gabled entry now pulls it together and gives it accent and meaning—and the wood, painted a warm beige-gray, is so much more at home here than was the ornate brick, worked into arches massive enough to support a cathedral. There's improved landscaping, too, for instead of leading straight from the street to the front door, a pink brick path invites you through a brick gateway, and for a stroll through the garden before you get to the house.

Asphalt shingles on low-pitched roofs may be ruffled up by driving winds that force rain and snow up under the roofing where they create leaks damaging to inside walls and ceilings

Shingle can be fastened in place by cementing it to the shingle below. Put a couple of dabs of roofing cement or compound on the shingle in the lower course and then press the raised shingle down into place

Improperly or inadequately nailed shingles can be pulled loose by a driving wind or an accumulation of ice and snow. Working on the roof in hot weather when the shingles are soft will also tear them loose

y the time you settle down with your next issue of American Home, your house should be all set to go another few rounds with winter. Give top priority to unfinished outside painting, for exposed wood takes a beating from snow, ice, rain, and sleet. Get awnings and screens down and the sashes up, while the weather is still mild. Drain outside sill cocks and outside water pipes, and insulate the pipes in unheated areas. Go over the outside of the house, and fill any of the cracks or open seams, for frost forming in these spots can do much damage. Caulking compound is fine for the large seams, and white lead thinned with turpentine will do for the small ones. Cracks in the concrete and faulty mortar joints between brick or masonry blocks should be cut out and patched with fresh mortar. Remove dead branches from trees near the house and be sure that shutters, TV and radio aerials, trellises, etc., are securely fastened. Also be sure not to forget the roof and gutters. We show you the attention they need right on these pages. MORE ON NEXT PAGE

How to Get

Sweep gutters clean of leaves and debris with an old brush or whisk broom. If there are many nearby trees, repeat this several times during the autumn

Dirt and rust, etc., can be removed by brushing gutters with a stiff wire brush. Galvanized-iron gutters won't rust if the inside is painted with a metal primer followed by outside paint

Clogged downspouts can be cleaned out by a coil spring-steel auger of the type used for clearing obstructions in the house drainage system. Flush downspout with hose after removing obstruction

Gutters should be hosed down from time to time to remove thin deposits of soot that become highly corrosive to metal when damp. This also gives you a chance to check gutter for proper pitch

Clean and Repair the Gutters MORE HOW-TO PICTURES ON PAGE 145

Data from Robert L. Hering

To renail the loose shingle, nails on the lower portion of the shingle above must be carefully removed. Push the loose shingle back into the correct position and then renail both shingles using asphalt shingle nails

Torn shingles can be caused by the same factors that account for loose shingles or by heavy objects such as branches falling on roof. They should be repaired at once, for strong winds will make them worse

A tear or leak can be repaired by applying a thin coat of roofing cement to the shingle below, and then slipping a piece of copper or heavy roofing paper up the torn shingle utters should have uniform slope towards ownspout. They can be adjusted by ending hangers. Make sure that outside dge of the gutter is lower than the utside edge of the roof

Asphaltum paint makes a good protective finish for both wood and galvanized-iron gutters. Aluminum, stainless steel, and copper gutters don't require this kind of protective finish

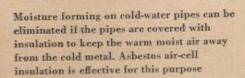

Leaks in a gutter should be patched immediately, for they cause stains to appear on the walls of the house. First, apply a coat of plastic roofing cement to the area around the leak

Cut a patch from canvas or heavy roofing paper. Make it more than large enough to cover damaged area, and force it into roofing cement on gutter

Moisture content of the air can be decreased by lowering the setting of the heater humidifier or by installing a dehumidifier which removes excess moisture from the house air

Condensation or, if you prefer, sweat, is what happens when the temperature of warm moist air is lowered by the air coming in contact with a cold surface such as an outside wall, water pipe, or window pane. As the air is cooled, it can't hold all that moisture and so some of it is left on the cold surface either as a liquid or as frost.

You can do a lot towards controlling excess condensation. One way is to lower the moisture content of the indoor air. Don't let steam from kitchen or bath remain indoors but get rid of it with exhaust fans. Don't hang wet wash to dry indoors and don't have too many potted plants about. Keep the humidifier on your furnace low, and, if necessary, use a dehumidifier. From the standpoint of health, humidity should be around 40 per cent.

Another way to control condensation is to keep the warm air away from cold surfaces. Insulate outside walls or cover the inside surface of them with insulating board. Cover coldwater pipes and use storm sashes or insulating glass on windows.

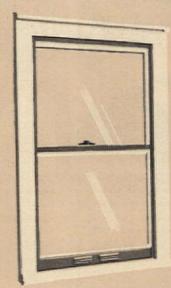

To eliminate condensation on roof or attic, louvers should be installed at the highest point possible above the insulation. Louvers should be left open in the cold weather. The insulation below will prevent heat loss

Insulation must have a vapor barrier to keep moist air from siding and outside paint. When barrier cannot be applied with insulation, paint inside walls with aluminum paint followed by finish paint

Get Ready for Winter (Begins on page 56)

Condensation on the outside of flush tanks can be cured by bringing warm water into the tank. A special fitting is used to connect a hot-water line to the cold-water supply to the tank

Steam and frost on window glass can usually be corrected if storm sashes are installed. Storm sashes should be fitted with vents at base to allow moist air to flow outdoors

How to Keep Dad in the Kitchen

EDITH RAMSAY

A ppealing, isn't it? But there's more than a picture behind Dad's presence in American Home's Hobby Kitchen $2, shown in detail on the following pages. We decided that while Living Kitchens are fine, Hobby Kitchens are better, for they not only invite the whole family in—they give each member a darned good reason for wanting to be there. So when we planned this one to show you in pictures here, and in person in various parts of the country,* we made the laundry area double as a hobby center you use all week long.

It's a natural spot for Mom's hobbies—but we want Dad's hobby here, too, so we incorporated the most popular, compact, tidy, and efficient workbench and tool panel we ever published—one he can build for himself from our Blueprint Construction Patterns 2000—01. Once it's his, this is where he'll spend his spare time fixing everything in the house, and turning out beauties on his own. Of course this is Mom's hobby room too, and we have plenty, but plenty, for her here—including that rocker upholstered in a high-hat decorator fabric, vegetable bedecked. We fashioned curtains to match—and then we turned the fabric's engaging motif into a bewitching border design that would do you proud anywhere (AMERICAN HOME Pattern 1443, see next page). Few youngsters can think of a better hobby than being permitted to lend a hand to yours—but we included a toy shelf here, just in case.

However, fond as we are of it, the cozy family area is strictly an extra. Believe us, the business part of this kitchen came first, and to see how good it is—

THIS KITCHEN WORKS AS WELL AS IT LOOKS, CHECK ITS GOOD POINTS AGAINST YOUR OWN KITCHEN'S:

- It's a "just reach out for it" kitchen, thanks to compact arrangement of appliances and cabinets (see plan below).
- You can store everything, including Grandma's china, here: There are 160 linear feet of storage space in closed cabinets, all of it well "engineered" —for example, there are 4 Lazy-Susan cabinets, 6 feet of shelf for spices, 8 drawers.
- You can s-t-r-e-t-c-h yourself out, for there are 28 sq. ft. of beautiful resilient counter top, 4 sq. ft. of solid maple cutting block.
- You have two distinct work areas, each served by its own cabinets. One, to left of sink, near refrigerator and dining room, is used for sorting, for getting down dishes, for making salads, and the like. Cabinets above and below hold china, glassware, and groceries that need no cooking.
- You prepare foods for cooking in area between sink and range. Chopping block is here, and plenty of counter. For small appliances, there are several electrical outlets, including one on range. Cabinets hold groceries, spices, wealth of pots and pans. There are drawers for orderly stashing.
- You can shop for a week at a time, for the II-cu.-ft., self-defrosting, two-temperature gas refrigerator has 2 cu. ft. of zero-cold storage for home-cooked victuals or "boughten" packaged frozen goods.
- Your cooking is timed automatically at the gas range which packs four burners and a full-size oven and broiler into a compact 30 inches. Storage compartment is ample for the everyday pots and pans.
- Ventilator cabinet over range (see page 94) also serves laundry equipment. Half of it can be used for dry-cereal storage or to warm serving dishes. Its companion, over refrigerator, has no blower, provides dry storage, has swing-out baskets for easy access.
- Cleaning up is automatic—Your sink complete with dishwasher and garbage disposer, can even be operated by your Helper, j.g.

Patterns for your hobby Kitchen

Here's the pattern of plenty we borrowed from a decorator fabric and turned into a motif for a soffit or wall area at home in the kitchen—or elsewhere. You can paint it from our Pattern 1443

We think it's a good plan to divide your kitchen and laundry up into a series of small areas, each one complete. Here, at area to the left of the sink, you prepare foods for refrigerating, make salads and uncooked dishes, sort and store your china and glass. Cooking area to right of the sink is compact—and absolutely complete. Note such details as file at the right of the range for knives and holder for a small electric mixer to be used at the range. The laundry equipment shown at your far right shows just why you can build a hobby area into a modern kitchen: the automatic washer and drier make such short shrift of a good job of laundering that the laundry area is used only a few hours a week and might as well be given an additional role to play in your family's life

Continue to build rhythmic line with additional podocarpus sprays. Fugi chrysanthemums of any type—spidery, spoon, small, and round—are effective with podocarpus and should be kept in deep water until ready to use

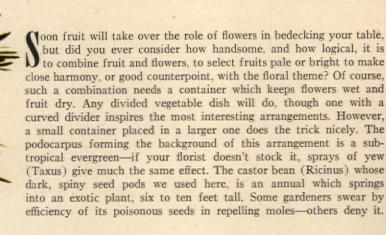

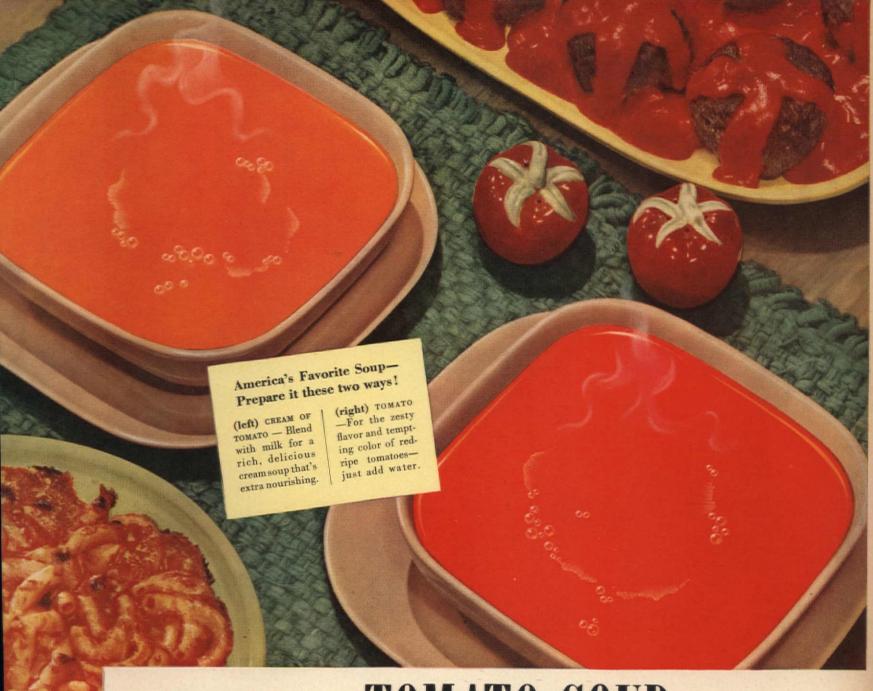

Add chrysanthemums in spiral—twining faces away rather than head on for greater depth. A few sprays of castor-bean pods placed at lower left add texture interest. Castor beans are easily grown in home garden if space permits

Baffled about a meal? Stay out too long? Hurried...? Guests pop in unexpectedly? Meals grow easily around versatile Tomato Soup. Whatever you serve with it seems to belong: plain or toasted sandwiches...a salad...both—or maybe just with a dessert.

Here's a soup worth thinking about! It fits so nicely into food plans, for this tangy purée of field-ripened tomatoes is always welcomed.

As Soup for Lunch

Luscious, sun-ripened tomatoes, creamery butter and gentle seasonings make it ideal to serve in such a menu as this:

As a Lift for Hamburgers

Try this grand tomato-onion gravy: Remove cooked hamburgers from skillet. Add ½ cup each of minced onion and diced celery to meat drippings. Season to taste. Cook until tender. Add 1 can tomato soup. Heat thoroughly.

More... Tomato Soup is a sauce of endless possibilities. Velvet-smooth... in and on foods it adds color-zip, taste-zest! Soufflés, casseroles, special dishes—respond to the tomato touch.

So turn to Tomato Soup . . . wonderful, warm and glowing. Serve it—as a soup, as a sauce, as a cooking ingredient. It's the simple, inexpensive way of introducing that grand tomato taste year 'round.

As a Sauce for Macaroni

Tomato Soup makes the perfect cooking sauce for a macaroni and cheese casserole. Use condensed tomato soup in place of old-fashioned white sauce. It's more colorful...tangy. What a treat for the family.

JEAN AUSTIN

PLUM AND NUT PIE

In the royal kitchens of the Middle Ages, the cooking of game was considered an art worthy of the greatest skill and ingenuity, and one of the earliest receipts to come down to us we give you herewith in verse form—a game pie, as prepared in 14th-century France by Gaces de la Bigne, first chaplain of Kings John, Charles V, and Charles VI.

Now, were you asked to make a pie like this, your reluctance would be understandable. But look, please, at our butcher's bill above. And if you will, please, multiply these figures by two, and you will not be far from the figures on the right-hand side of the menu in any famous gourmet restaurant catering to connoisseurs of fine eating. Am I not, then, justified in entreating you to revere Dad's bag of game as you would a pot of gold? The cooking of game takes knowing, but not necessarily a professional chef's skill. The dressing of game is somewhat tedious, but it takes no more time—probably not as much—than many fancy salads et cetera that you do regularly for company fare. Make one of these game recipes a spécialité, and I'll wager you'll come back for the others. Here is cooking that will bring you fame, my fastidious lady, and give your huntsman the pleasurable thrill of knowing his skill at the game is matched only by yours . . .

Two completely original recipes have I evolved for this month's Good Victuals, and full of vainglorious pride am I. Not often can a cook lay claim to something really new.

Put me in the middle of the pie three young partridges large and fat;

But take good care not to fail to take six fine quail to put by their side.

After that you must take a dozen skylarks, which round the quail you must place;

And then you must take some thrushes and such other little birds as you can get to garnish the pie.

Further, you must provide yourself with a little bacon which must not be in the least rank (reasty), and you must cut it into pieces of the size of a die, and sprinkle them into the pie.

If you want it to be in quite good form, you must put some sour grapes in and a very little salt . . .

. . . Have eggs put into the paste, and the crust made rather hard of the flour of pure wheat.

Put in neither spice nor cheese . . . Put it into the oven just at the proper heat, The bottom of which must be quite free from ashes; And when it is baked enough, isn't that a dish to feast on!

On a bed of sliced oranges and lemons with a surround of savory fried rice (wild rice, if you can afford it) brightened with shreds of grated orange peel, breasts of duck are rolled 'round an incomparable dressing of giblets, prunes, apple and ginger, raisins and candied fruits, crushed chestnuts and port wine. That's Prideful $1. Second, my version of an English game pie, ever so much simpler than the medieval receipt, gay as the four-and-twenty blackbirds baked in the nurseryrhyme pie: six plump quail nestling against apples, soft and sweet, a big blob of butter and chopped parsley popped right in you know where, a sprinkling of applejack, and twelve little legs bursting through a flaky crust. That's my baby, and fun it conversation piece it can be for you!

Hasenpfeffer can be mediocre—and it can be very, very good. This is very good indeed—the hare tender, the gravy rich, the Kartoffel Kloesse light and delicious. Rabbit, plentiful and available—including your butcher shop—is inexpensive, and our recipe not onerous. Why not make it your buffet special throughout the winter? A bright change 'twould be from the eternal cold roasts and the usual go-withs!

How to Prepare Game for Freezing

apa brings home the bag-and you hold it Not so bad if your huntsman has bled and dressed the game, and you can take your freezer on as a partner. Wrappings are most important, must be really moisture-vaporproof: aluminum foil, real freezer paper, pliofilm in stockinette, plastic bags, glass, aluminum, moisture-vaporproof cartons are all good. Force as much air as possible out of package, seal tightly, label, and freeze at once in direct contact with side walls or coils. Check local conservation board about length of time to keep.

MORE ON PAGE 72

SMALL ANIMALS like rabbits and squirrels should be eviscerated, skinned, carefully wiped with damp cloth. Cut into parts, wrap, and be sure that no sharp bones protrude to pierce freezer wraps. To make it easy to separate frozen pieces, interleave small pieces of paper between them. It pays only to freeze the thick pieces-there isn't enough meat on the rest to warrant taking up freezer space. Stew remainder at once, and freeze

> BIRDS should be plucked before freezing. Remove wings at joint nearest body, legs at first joint. Remove feathers with paraffin (3 cakes melted in 6 qt. water is enough for 6 ducks). Immerse birds singly in melted paraffin, then plunge into ice water. When paraffin is hard, small feathers and down zip off. Then wipe, wrap, label, and freeze the birds

DRAW BIRDS soon as possible. To remove entrails, make V-shaped cut starting back of breastbone and extending around vent. Slit neck to remove craw. Wipe, don't wash

DEER; LARGE GAME: If your huntsman fancies himself a butcher, he can follow the conventional beef cuts we illustrate here. If not, turn over the butchering to your butcher or locker plant. Home butchers need a lightweight, sharp meat saw, sharp and sturdy knife with thin blade, and a cleaver. You waste nothing: loin gives roasts and steaks; chuck and rump become pot roast or ground meat; round, if tender, makes steaksif not, grind it; small legs are roasted whole like lamb; shank, neck, flank and spareribs are cut up for stew or ground. If you freeze suet with meat, don't keep too long, for fat won't keep as long as lean meat, and it holds the gamy flavor. Larger cuts may be boned to save freezer space. Package in usable sizes.

YOU WASTE NO GAME: Grind tough cuts and make them into succulent burgers or meat loaves, freeze with paper or freezer paper between each one. Use your pet meat loaf recipe, and simply substitute venison for beef.

Like all meat loaves, they're better frozen uncooked

FREEZE IT READY FOR COOKING: Package your stew meat in 2- or 3-lb. lots, ready for long-time simmering or short pressure-cooking months hence. Wrap the chops in units of two or four, and be sure to separate them with sheets of foil or paper for easy handling when frozen. Tie your roasts before freezing, and roast them frozen or thawed

Breast of veal with that sweet-potato stuffing is the other extreme: the per pound price is lower, but only Fido is going to eat all the bones. What meat is on those bones, now, that is fit for a king-and his wife. Sometime take a breast of chicken and stuff it with that dressing, and bake it-plan one breast section per person, and you are sure to have rave notices. The Veal Stew is actually derived from a gourmet recipe. With lots of experimentation, we found we could retain the elusive flavor, and not have it cost a fortune to make. We have here two new and different ways for serving pork chops. Why, oh why, oh why is it that they are always just fried and thrown on a plate, old wizened-up hunks of shoe leather! For pork is a good tender meat, and doesn't deserve such a horrid fate. A simple way to remedy this is to try that Saucy Pork Chop recipe. Certainly a very natural combination, and easy as can be. Something quite different is the Breaded Pork Chop. Here it is the marinating for an hour or so which makes the difference. Now haven't seen in a long while often taste the best. To vary this is simple. Use orange or lemon extract, or some of both, and when it is out of the oven, sprinkle the top with any grated citrus rind, or make a design of powdered nuts on top. With that yellow center, and the soaring white mound of meringue around it, it makes a mighty glamorous dessert. And look at the ingredients in it-is that ever a real Cheapie! The Fruit Dumpling recipe I got from a friend, and a wonderful one-both recipe and friend! The cottage cheese makes a grand dough. Try filling it with something other than the usual apples: apricots, purple plums, peach halves, or sweet cherries, for instance. Make them up in advance and then steam them while you eat your main course. This way the steam is still oozing out while you serve them, and you can make a dramatic entrance. And the oh's and ah's will grow louder with every bite eaten, too. Our time-and space-is up, members, so our meeting must come to a close. See you next month-

Good Victuals

Whoever said cold left-over game is poor eating? A most excellent game soup those remnants do make, laced with vegetables, a bouquet, and at the last moment, sweet fresh cream. So get out the big tureen, dust off Greatgrandmother's great big wonderful game-soup plates—and have another unusual, distinguished buffet special.

The mousse, so beautiful to behold, so beautiful to taste, is made of breasts of pheasant. Make your own substitution of game, but make it. When roast game palls, here is your imaginative answer, and what a happy Mixed Company Luncheon entree it doth make.

Included, too, some very good accompaniments for a game dinner: Cranberry Apples Glacé are apples cooked in honey and spices; then when the apples are done and the sauce thick and syrupy, cranberries put in and cooked until they pop, scooped up and heaped in the center of the big red shiny apples. Burgundy Bread, a hot, crusty Vienna loaf made fragrant with butter melted in Burgundy. Good too, the faintly bitter taste of green pepper rings, coated in batter and French fried. Or Pears Fermière-pears stewed with cinnamon and nutmeg till just tender but not soft; scooped out and filled with red currant jelly, a plump cooked prune, or chopped apricots, rolled in ginger and cloves and eaten icy, icy cold on a bed of watercress. And last, a fine game pâté, so prohibitively priced if purchased, so satisfyingly economical to make yourself, so welcome a gift to receive at Christmas.

And to top off any Merrie Game feast, a Plum Pie, richly red under its rich puff paste cover, nuts and toothsome spices to spike the tartness of the ripe, plump plums. Suggested too, to end a game dinner with a flourish, a bowl of walnuts, a glass of ruby red port wine, or if the meal has been very rich, a wee portion of feather-light Orange Marmalade Soufflé, or Fig and Lemon Bombe, the recipes for which were already given you in Good Victuals.

Signing off now with a last word that well might be infamous and slanderous rather than in the tradition of famous last words. Fanatics will shout heresy, abuse, and belittle you as bourgeois if your game be not bloody. Now I should be the first to denounce overdone, dry game. But may I raise a loud and thunderous "No" to raw blood running from my game. In the gravy, fine. On the plate, no. Game on the rare side, yes. Lukewarm from a few minutes contact with heat, no, no, no-and let no purist intimidate you!

kind of pump. Additional features such as the safety wringer-roll release, adjustable wringer-position latch, electric timer, fabric indicator, stop-lock casters, cord reel add to the price—and are worth what they cost. Capacities range from 7–10 lbs. of dry clothes; prices are from $85–$210.

Spinner type: Half-way in price between the wringer type and the automatic, and especially recommended where water supply is low. There is one tub for washing, and an additional perforated tub or basket in which your clothes are double rinsed, then spun around until damp-dry. ready for the line or a dryer. You can spin one load while you wash another.

Swing faucets are a unique feature of this type: one fills the tub or the basket while the other drains off the wash water or rinse water. Other features such as speed pump, automatic overload switch, separate control for washer and basket, temperature fabric control, and timer may be had. Capacities range from 9 to 10 lbs.; prices from $180-$220.

Automatics: These do the most work for you: just put your washing in, add soap or syndet, press a button, and let the washer do the rest. The tub fills with water, washes the articles, rinses them several times. damp-dries them, and empties itself -all in sequence, automatically, and without any attention from you. You can walk right out on such a machine and you don't, as with other types, have to lift the clothes while wet. The complete cycle of an automatic machine is 25 to 40 minutes, and some have a pre-soak period which makes the cycle a bit longer. There are a few so-called automatic washers which do require some attention, that is, you must control the first fill of the wash water, then set the dial for length of washing time. After that, it's automatic. Other washers in this classification, and probably more accurately called semi-automatic, perform part of the loading, washing, and water-removal cycle, the user being required to attend to the others.

An automatic washer thinks for you while it works for you, but look especially for these features: off-balance load switch which cuts off washer automatically when clothes are unevenly placed, automatic motor protector which eliminates replacing a fuse when machine goes off automatically due to strain caused by excess suds or the like, suds dispenser, signal light which indicates that the washer is in use, wash-water switch, dial which specifies each cycle.

You don't need a washtub with these, but you do have to have the washer professionally installed, usually at extra cost. Capacities of automatic washers range from 8 to 10 lbs.; prices from $230-$350.

You get them all from faucets with a SPRING-FLO AERATOR

The Spring-Flo Aerator gives you healthful, tastier, oxygen-enriched water full of millions of tiny, quickly disappearing bubbles. It makes cloudy water crystal-clear. And — this bubbly stream means more suds from less soap . . . speedier washing and rinsing . . . a non-splash stream. The Spring-Flo is available with the lavatory and sink faucets of all leading faucet manufacturers. Ask your plumber about them today.

SAVES MONEY

High velocity stream is bubble-filled. Result – more suds than ever from any soap.

SAVES TIME

Less water works harder. Bubbly stream gives quicker and easier washing and rinsing.

SAVES TEMPERS

Bubbles cushion impact. Stream clings to surface instead of splashing.

Which Washer?

Portables: "Baby" washers, so called both because of their size and because they are so practical for infant's laundry. They can handle a full-size bed sheet, and are especially good for lightweight garments. They're a boon in apartments where you can have no other washing machine, and a handy "extra" wherever you live. They will not, however, take the place of a standard-size washer for even a small family, if all the washing is to be done at home.

You can buy them with such extras as: drain hose for filling and emptying, syphon emptying pump, electric switch, stand, casters or gliders for easy rolling, hand-operated wringers, faucet attachment and snap-on hose connector. Capacities range from 2 to 6 lbs.; prices from $30-$80.

WHICH TYPE OF AUTOMATIC WASH-ING ACTION IS BEST?

The machinery and engineering in all automatic machines are not alike. All types give good washing results when recommended instructions are followed. Insist on an actual demonstration in the home.

Cylinder or Tumbler Type is being used extensively now for the new miracle fabrics. It's as easy on your clothes as hand washing—and how much easier on you!

Agitator or Plunger—Excellent for heavy jobs such as laundering work clothes or children's play clothes, yet considerate of fine fabrics when you adjust the control for them.

Agitated Tub Type washing action is much like the cylinder type in that it is easy on clothes.

Semi-automatics are those which require the operator's presence to watch the fill and to control the washing and rinsing times. They do as good a job of washing, but because all of the automatic controls are not included, they are somewhat less expensive than fully automatic washers. CAN YOU WASH BLANKETS OR DELICATE FABRICS IN AUTOMATICS?

Woolens and delicate fabrics may be washed in any type of machine if you don't wash or rinse them too long. With a spinner or wringer washer, you are the boss of the length of the cycle. With the newer automatics, you're also the boss since you can interrupt the cycle at any time you like. or skip part of the cycle. This means that you can wash woolens (including blankets), pillows, or delicates (so-called "hand washables") in your automatic washer-you just wash them for a shorter period than the ordinary load requires, and the spe cial controls make this easy. WHAT CONNECTIONS DO WASHERS require no special wiring, though each washer, like every other major appliance, should be put on a circuit of its own.

Automatics: Most of these are connected directly to the house's water supply, and they drain off through a rubber hose. They may be installed anywhere. Some types must be connected to the house's plumbing, and are therefore permanently installed. A very few must, in addition, be bolted to a well-reinforced floor or concrete foundation.

Wringers and Spinners are used adjacent to wash tubs, because tubrinses, soakings, and draining are recommended with these types.

WHAT MAKES FOR GOOD CONSTRUC-TION IN WASHERS?

As with everything else-you get what you pay for. As a group, the wringer types cost least, the automatics cost most, and the spinners and semi-automatics are between. Within each group, a difference in price means a difference in quality, with extra convenience features accounting for part of the cost differential. Look for the following virtues:

Finish: Baked enamel is good, porcelain enamel is still better. Both protect the machine against rust, corrosion, and the damage from strong soaps and alkalis. Both are easy to wipe clean, though porcelain enamel is the harder and more handsome. Tubs thus are made of steel, finished with baked enamel or porcelain enamel, or are made of aluminum, long a popular material. Glass fiber impregnated with plastic is the newest of the tub materials.

Regardless of type, any washer available today can be counted on to be sturdily made of good materials. They abound in convenience and easeof-use features and are as superior to the washers of a decade ago as today's sleekest convertible is to the late and unlamented "Model T." This is so much the case that if you already are the owner of a washer and have had it for more than five years, it will pay you to investigate the many added features of the washers being shown today.

WHAT GUARANTEES SHOULD BE DE-MANDED?

Look for approval by Underwriter's Laboratories on any washer you buy-it stands for safety.

Most manufacturers guarantee materials and workmanship for one year. If parts prove defective during the period covered by the guarantee, repairs or replacements are made without charge. Read guarantee to find out just what is included at the time you buy. Also, this is a good time to find out if the dealer will service your machine.

There was no tearing down of walls, but substituting one high and wide window over the sink for two narrow ones, made the other improvements possible. Decorated paneled doors of Ponderosa Pine—decorated to suit your tastes and color schemes—are the latest trend in color styling. The illustration above shows how you can paint or stain these satin-smooth doors to make your color schemes complete.

Here are some of the many other ways—

Now your doors and walls can match! Wallpaper, applied to the panels of Ponderosa Pine doors, then lacquered, can create effects of breath-taking beauty.

Decals, too, offer you an almost endless variety of decorative themes. Now your doors can be "picture books"—distinguished conversation pieces.

 Arrange them on a solid shelf, and your collections can help to solve the trickiest of decorating problems. See how smartly Mrs. Victor Blihar composed around just such a shelf. Meissen jars and plates rest on top, tiny copper kettles and rare Meissen cooking utensils hang below, and copper pudding molds crown the arrangement

Old Waterbury column clock, made about 1860, is one of the prizes of Mr. Thomas Lawton's fine clock collection. See to what advantage it is displayed on a shallow shelf built over a pine dry sink

Use your best on your mantel shelf, but compose them with care. This deft composition of pairs and single objects comprises two pewter oil lamps used as candlesticks, two flower paintings, a pewter tea pot, a Staffordshire figure, flanking an important Eli Terry clock

On the Shelf

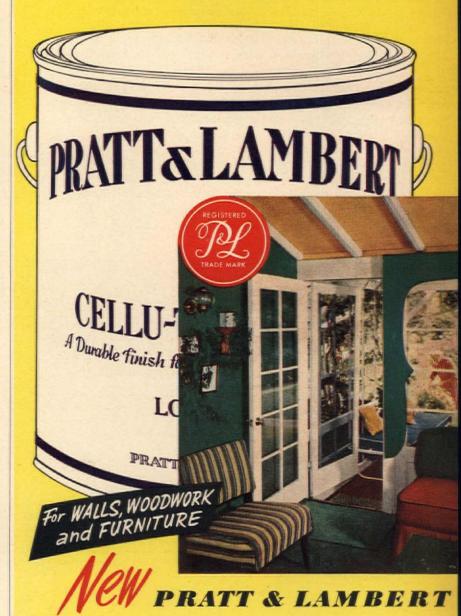

When one painting isn't enough for a wall, a shelf can often play it up, give it more importance. This shelf in a girl's room is dressed in eyelet embroidery, and enhances a small picture

Here both shelf and arrangement are unusual: note that the display, instead of being symmetrical, builds up from a low mug to a dramatic high Gilbert clock. See how effectively a shelf can become a piece of furniture

Old utensils can be enjoyed for their pleasing shapes and colors. Here utensils hang from hooks in a simple wall rack, lights have been adroitly played against darks, and the gleam of copper mold above lends emphasis. The long wooden spoon was made for stirring maple syrup

Important antiques in the kitchen? Well, why not enjoy them in the room where you spend so much of your time? One beautifully detailed shelf here holds a Seth Thomas clock, and other shelves display old china, while still other rare things hang on the wall—but superbly arranged

Display shelves can be loved for themselves alone, but those in this bedroom have another very special talent—they are exceptionally clever camouflage for reading lights over the beds. Another smart use of a treasure is the lamp which is made from an ironstone coffeepot

Data from George Harris

It took Pat Jones (Mrs. Robert Jones of St. Louis) exactly one half a day to buy every major piece of furniture in the engaging small home we illustrate here and on page 102—and she didn't need, nor want, to return a thing! She probably set an all-time record, but that, in itself, is not the point of this story. What the good results of her speed do prove is the wisdom of self-assurance, of knowing in advance what you want.

Once your pattern is set by major purchases, you can take your time, hunt out your bargains in the small things which give your house its character. And you save real money that way, too, for in big things like furniture and carpets, you usually get no more than you pay for, but if you can find a 25-cent accessory to do the job of a $25 one—you're in! And that's exactly what Pat, a confirmed "antiquer," did with excursions to "junk" shops—wise finds as well as lucky ones.

The Joneses also had a flair for creating what they couldn't find, or couldn't afford. The picture at the top of this page shows how they spent an evening decorating a screen with French wall-paper. Other bright ideas of Pat's included refinishing a radio-phonograph cabinet to fit their scheme by giving it a coat of black paint and a trim of gilded chicken wire.

There was nothing unusual about the standard six-room house

The sunporch, built off the dining room, was an inspired addition to this small house, for it became an all-around family room and an ideal place for entertaining as well. The wrought-iron furniture, perked up in plaids, is modern, and Americanbut its graceful curves, its informal good manners, make perfect mixed company with the French Provincial which decorates the rest of the house the Joneses bought after spending their first few months of marriage in a furnished apartment. But the adroit French Provincial furnishings, so well backed up by excellent and ingenious props, lend it a tone few such houses can boast. The once commonplace kitchen doesn't know itself these days, now that its walls and ceiling are shocking pink, and mural-bedecked at that, and now that it is headquarters for a collection of French baskets and apothecary jars. The very ordinary bathroom isn't ordinary any more, now that its walls are navy blue and its linen chest is painted black and dressed with mail-order brass handles, and its guest soap is kept in a candy jar.

A strong blue-green background color gives great character to graceful Provincial furniture, and shutters, a lucky find in a house wrecker's headquarters, were painted to match the walls. Pat is a collector of baskets, and the one under the dressing table, now used for linens, is an old-fashioned European trunk

Attractive drop-leaf table, which nests on one side of dining room, has five extra leaves, can seat a mob! Wise finds in "junk shops" include sconces which hold real candles, and a brass bowl, now filled with greenery, which was a tarnished, dirt-encrusted lamp shade when Pat first found it one afternoon

Because Pat had a general plan in her mind's eye, it took no time flat to buy the important French Provincial desk. But the trimmin's took finding; oil lamps which are now plant holders cost 25¢ each; large brass candelabrum was a trade-in for something she wanted less; Victorian curtains used to hang behind a washstand

Look at your bathroom. Any plaster cracks showing? Can the walls take a soaking and come up smiling? Wall-Tex can! And the strong fabric protects permanently, keeps plaster cracks under control.

Do you own a "hopeless" chest like this one—awkward, badly beat up? Or do you have a severe-looking modern chest which needs added interest? Caning will fix either one

> DORCHEN TRUMM AND JOHN LIPPERT

Beat-up Chest Story

Panels of caning give a brand-new, very smart outlook to an old chest

If chest is scarred, replace top and baseboard with 3/1" pine board. Saw off legs so chest is flush with the floor. Remove pulls, fill all holes with wood putty. Then sand smooth, and paint the chest any color you please

For each panel, cut caning to exact size with heavy shears. To make it more pliable, soak in warm water five minutes. Then tack to side panels and drawer fronts with U tacks or heavy-duty stapler. Frame caning with narrow molding, mitered at corners, tacked into place

Would you know it now with its jaunty panels, neatly enframed, and the simple square drawer pulls which give a surprisingly elegant finishing touch? Caning panels are shellacked

The Salt of

That did pirates do with treasure? Buried it, of course. Where did Pueblo Indians build their sacred kivas? Underground. How was food preserved before refrigeration? By storing in a dugout. Where does a dog bury a bone? Since time undetermined, the dog, at least, has recognized the value of storing his possessions underground. Civilization, complete with canned dog food, has not changed his ways.

But enthusiastic modernists have brought the utility room upstairs, added a few cupboards in the garage and joyfully hollered, "No more cellars." I challenge you, I defy you, to look with such scorn upon the so-called "lowly" basement.

For many years, the cellar has been to man a source of storage, comfort, recreation, ease of mind, leisurely decision, and extra money. Like a maiden aunt, the cellar is occasionally a trifle unpleasant to live with, but it's indispensable. True, I have found fault with our basement, but that was because it was only half a basement instead of a whole one.

The theory of the utility room plus extra storage cupboards sounds golden until you analyze it. Or live with it. My friend Mary moved into a little modern home of the "no cellar" variety. Her utility room is jail-cell size. In the time you can say "give me back my basement," it filled up with a washing machine, ironing board, iron, cleaning supplies (no broom closet), shoe-polishing kit, baskets of dirty clothes, a basket of clean unironed clothes, a pile of newspapers, and the baby's wagon.

Am I being too hard? Yes, I've forgotten the extra storage space. All right. They do have an extra storage area six feet square by four feet high, up under the eaves. But have you ever tried to hoist a trunk up under the eaves or bring down a box of Christmas ornaments without breaking them?

Roof in Shape

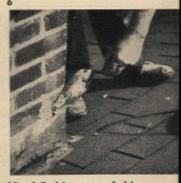

Wood shingles that are loose or have warped should be nailed into place with galvanized shingle nails. Coat nail head with cement

Leaks in wood-shingled roofs can be easily fixed by slipping a piece of copper up under the shingle at point of leak

Remove excess roofing cement from valley flashing, for it will form a small dam and allow water to back up under roofing

Metal flashing around chimney should be turned into masonry joint in chimney and held in place with cement mortar

THE AMERICAN HOME, OCTOBER, 19

the Cellar

"But, no," you argue. "We're building a home with a recreation room upstairs, a large utility room, including a fruit closet and sewing space, and lots of built-in storage space designed to suit

It sounds good. But prowling around our cellar, I discovered that you will need some oddly shaped cupboards. "Throw it out," you say? How can you throw out seasonal equipment like Christmas-ornaments and tree stand, Easter baskets, and the flag of the United States-to say nothing of picnic baskets, gallon jugs, and electric fans?

And how about your hobby equipment? You think you have it all planned? Do you know, now, all the hobbies that might catch your fancy in the future? Will your cupboards accommodate sevenfoot skis, sleeping bags, golf bags, guns, hip boots and fish poles.

I suppose you think we keep too much stuff around, and have too many hobbies. Well, where, without a basement, do you find a cool dark spot for a bushel of winter apples, or a Halloween pumpkin? Where can you accumulate a dozen coffee cans for baking Christmas fruitcakes? Or keep sugar, bought cheaply against the summer's canning season?.

I suppose if one is an ultra housekeeper with neither children. sports, nor hobbies, one could do without a basement-no clutter, no muss down there. That's fine. But too often, if it's not down there, it's up in the house, the garage, or back yard. Or you will be under constant pressure disposing of things and doing it quickly without time for meditation.

Me, I like the idea of burying my bones in the basement until I have time to dig them up and decide what I really want to do with them. All in all, I'd say, "Think twice before you abandon your basement."

(Begins on page 56)

Sweep valleys clean and inspect them for signs of rust and holes. Repair these with a thin coat

Replace rusted nails with roofing nails that will not corrode. Coat head of nail with a dab of roofing cement

Dreams can come true twice!

In y husband, Clarke, and I found the perfect spot for our weekend retreat on a lake 30 miles from town. And in a back issue of AMERICAN HOME, we found the perfect house. Well, not quite perfect, for when we figured it out, we discovered that the garage, instead of the bedrooms, would look out on the lake. However, before disappointment set in, Clarke looked knowing—and just flopped the plan over. Now that we reversed the positions of garage and bedrooms, the plan was truly perfect for us. And so was the house as we watched it grow. We could hardly believe that this tiny and inviting structure could hold five rooms and a garage! And there was no letdown when we moved in: the compact living room with its enormous fireplace was a delight—so was the dining room for which our contractor had saved the knottiest pine—so were the bedrooms with their cross breezes and fine view of the lake.

We dreamed of the time we could live here permanently. But that wasn't to be. Clarke, a member of the Organized Reserves, is now in the Far East, and our little house belongs to another young family. But we've picked a second spot on that lake, and while I stay in the city, still with my job, I'm studying house plans. When Clarke returns, we'll find another American Home plan for our new site—and prove that dreams can come true—twice.

Your Nylons Make Rugs

on't throw away your old nylon stockings, for they make soft, practical, easily dyed rugs. Stocking shades blend together beautifully, or the stockings can be easily dyed to match your color scheme.

For braided rugs, here's what to do: launder stockings, and when they are dry, begin with three stockings of different lengths, so that the joining seams will fall in different places when the rug is sewn together. Cut off tops, toes, and heels. Put the foot of one stocking in the top of another and sew together; sew the foot of the third between the two just joined. Fold over edges, pin to a firm chair back, and braid firmly, but not too tightly. At the end of the braid, sew each of the three ends to the tops of three additional stockings.

As you braid, cover the seams with a portion of smooth stocking and sew invisibly underneath. Roll the braids into a ball and sew them into shape as you go along—round rugs are easiest. Sew with heavy carpet thread and a darning needle, concealing the stitches between braids. Ease the fullness as you go around so the braids won't pucker. Work on a flat surface.

For crocheted rugs, use stocking tops of nylon or other fabric, cut one inch wide round and round, and sewed together. Wind into tight balls, right side out, turning in edges as you wind so material will be pressed into place and easier to work with. Let stand for several days to remove stretch, and then crochet, using double stitch. Weave old lingerie, in one-inch-wide strips, through rug for color contrast.

BETTER THINGS FOR BETTER LIVING .. THROUGH CHEMISTRY

Are carpet prices as high as they sound? No. Prices of all-wool floor covering have increased only in about the same ratio as prices of all other homefurnishings. In addition to the wools, there are the cottons and a wide range of well-priced blended and all-carpetrayons as well to choose from.

What are the advantages of wall-to-wall carpeting?

Wall-to-wall carpeting gives unity to areas opening into each other, optically increases size of the areas, conceals imperfect flooring, allows greater flexibility in furniture arrange-

What are the right proportions for a "room-size" rug?

Rug should come to within 9 inches of all walls, so furniture won't seem to "hang off."

Is an underlay necessary?

It's your best protection against abrasive action on the back of your underfoot investment-adds to its comfort and lengthens its life.

Do carpet rayons measure up?

Yes. Exhaustive tests given all-rayons and blends prove their wearing qualities compare most favorably with wool carpeting of the same type.

How do cottons wear?

New weaving techniques and methods of twisting the yarn have improved wearability in addition to making possible tremendous pattern variations.

What is the difference between Axminster, Wilton and Velvet weaves?

In Axminsters, little yarn is carried to the back. Quality (and price) are determined by the number of rows of yarn per inch in length, height, and weight of varn used. This method permits the greatest freedom in use of color in patterns. About half the carpeting sold today is medium-priced Axminster.

Wilton carpeting is woven "through to the back" automatically increasing the yarn content, the durability, and the price. This weave allows great variation in combinations of yarns, height of pile, and multi-colored or textured effects.

Velvet weave produces excellent clipped or twisted-yarn piles in solid colors. Rows are normally very close together, giving considerable durability. This method limits the number of colors used in a single rug, so there are fewer Velvet patterns.

Is "broadloom" a kind of weave?

No. Broadloom refers to any type of carpeting woven on a broad loom. In common use are looms 9, 12, and 15 feet wide.

How does a novice determine quality?

Rugs or rolls of carpeting carry labels on which content is given. Question salesman on type of weave, using descriptions above as your guide.

What colors are available?

Practically all colors under the sun, but gray, green, beige and rose-in that order-are the best sellers. Manufacturers give you the wherewithal for individualized color schemes. Use it!

What are the most popular types?

Tone-on-tone (one or more tones of the same color) in leaf or swirl patterns lead in popularity, followed by solid-color twist weaves, solid-color plain weaves. Gaining in popularity are the textured carpetings made in interesting combinations of high and low piles.

Which is easiest to use decoratively?

Solid colors or textured types in which yarns are mingled to give an all-over pattern effect. Patterned floor covering restricts the use of other pattern, takes a more skilled hand to decorate around.

Roadside Weeds For Winter Beauty

ELEANOR B. MeCLURE

The modern "winter bouquet" is a far cry from the dusty buxom horror that used to stand on the parlor piano. Witness this enchanting hearthside decoration by Mrs. Vane Deal of St. Louis, popular lecturer on flower arrangement. It is made of "plant Cinderellas"—field and roadside materials carefully dried so as to retain their natural beauty of form, texture, and color. A strong line of green is carried through the arrangement by trumpet-vine pods and large leaves of corn and what is locally called "carpenter's square." The oak-leaf clusters are green and red, and shades of brown are supplied by buttonbush, teasel, Missouri primrose, and wild grass-seed heads. Some of the lotus pods are brown, while others, picked green, have a bluish cast. These muted tones are complemented by the burnished sheen of the big, heavy, brass vase which is especially suitable for a floor arrangement. Although designed for a contemporary setting, this arrangement would look just as fetching beside a prim Colonial mantel.

By developing an eye for the artistic possibilities of the materials that Mother Nature so generously provides, you can make equally effective, long-lasting decorations. For accessories, there are many intriguing things to be had for the searching, such as skeleton cacti from the desert, weathered rocks and branches, shells and driftwood from the beach. While the plebeian grasses and weeds offer a wonderful range of tan, rust, brown, and coppery tones, you can have gay, bright colors, too, without using any sort of dye. Some garden flowers dry easily and effectively—strawflowers, of course, but marigolds, larkspur, astilbe, and cockscomb, too. The secret, says Mrs. Deal, is to gather them as soon as they attain full size and true color and dry them as rapidly as possible. Collect much more than you think you'll need, dry in garage or attic (not in the oven or in sunlight), and discard ruthlessly anything that does not turn out well.

Some stems and leaves that look stiff and unnatural when dried can be soaked in water, then gently manipulated and bent into pleasing shapes. Later, if a winter bouquet gets dusty, you can wash it with a gentle spray, and perk it up with leaves from your house plants or garden evergreens, or a few fresh flowers. And if you tire of an arrangement, you can either remake it in a different container, or take it apart and pack it away for a while.

On the basis of the kind of treatment that suits them best, winter-arrangement materials fall into four types or groups.

Group I consists of dried grasses, leaves, and seed pods ready for use just as you find them, wherever in the country you find yourself. It's lots of fun to experiment with the native plants.

Group 2 includes bare branches and various grasses, flower heads, and seed stalks having firm stems that do not wilt or collapse. Stand them in milk or soda bottles (without water), keep them in a hot, dry place, and give them plenty of elbow room. Examples are elm, maple, ailanthus-seed clusters; pods or heads of teasel, sumac, bladder-nut, and false-bittersweet, and flowers of globethistle, blazing-star, sweet basil, astilbe, and oak-leaved hydrangea.

Group 3 is made up of green seed heads and flowers whose stems wilt quickly. Tie them in small bundles and hang upside down from hooks or coat hangers where they will not be brushed against.

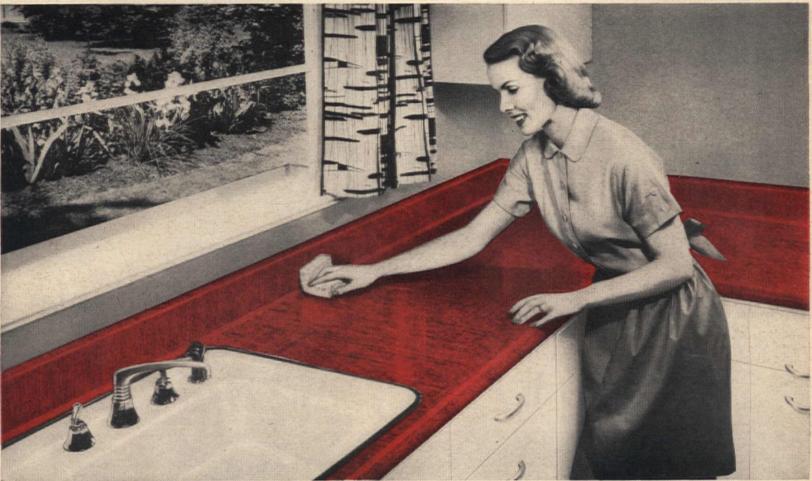

Group 4 is foliage sprays that dry nicely if spread out on the pad under a large rug. Take them out before they become stiff and mummified; the idea is to prevent shriveling, not to "press" them.

Client Didn't Talk Back

When an architect develops an idea for a house that is different, and outlines it to his client, he is usually greeted with a "that's just great, but"—and he finds out that what the client really wants is Georgian or Cape Cod. But for this house built several years ago, Architect Fritz Craig had a client who could give him no back talk—himself. So he got an unusual, sensible, and economical house which fit him and his family perfectly.

The building material is inexpensive and durable cement block, and the floors are flagstone or cement, radiant heated. Facing the garden, there are plenty of fixed-sash windows, but there are few windows facing the street side. Louvers provide ventilation.

The floor plan is unusual, too, for the dining room is really a passage to the bedroom wing, an unorthodox arrangement which suits the Craigs who use the dining room only for entertaining, and didn't want to waste space on halls. But they do love an effect of spaciousness, and that they have in full, since living room, entry, and dining room have a whopping big sweep of about fifty feet. What's more, the living room is off by itself, as living rooms are in ideal house plans. Furniture, some of it owner-designed, was kept simple, but color was used boldly throughout the house: bright yellow in the living room, deep blue-green in the dining room, soft rose in the master bedroom.

CHERRY FURNITURE

from Cherry Valley

The double dresser and mirror reflect trends that emerged in colonial America early in the 17th century; the chest-on-chest is a later and natural outgrowth. As shown here, both breathe the authentic charm and spirit of the period, yet under the skilled hand of Leopold Stickley, both are subtly adapted to the decorative mood and needs

Leopold Stickley's "American" furniture sinks deep roots in this nation's early cultural influences, developing therefrom a style unmistakably suited to the living present. From colonial Cooperstown in Cherry Valley, where J. Fenimore Cooper wrote his Leatherstocking Tales, came the inspiration for the pieces illustrated. Made in the Cherry Valley workshops from solid cherry fruitwood, they have a style, a depth of finish and a rugged structure all their own.

"A Developing Furniture Style"... 52 pages, 49 illustrations; the fascinating story of the development of American Furniture art from the Pilgrim Century down to today. $1 postpaid.

Face winter in comfort

. . BEHIND

Winter can be downright pleasant when you enjoy its beauty through windows of Thermopane* insulating glass. They bring in sunlight and beauty, but keep out cold. Their extra comfort is a boon to every room in the house.

Thermopane lets you sit close to windows without chilliness because it's made of two panes of glass with a sealed-in blanket of dry air. In effect, it adds a couple of usable feet to your rooms. You have clearer windows, too, because Thermopane's insulation minimizes condensation. Windows stay drier and cleaner.

There's comfort for the budget-minded—for Thermopane helps cut down fuel bills. Thermopane is the easiest way to insulate windows. It stays on the job the year 'round without your lifting a finger. In summer its insulation helps keep your home cooler.

You can use Thermopane in many kinds of windows. Before you build or remodel, call your L.O.F Glass Distributor or Dealer and get all the information. Or write for our book "Self-insulating Windows of Thermopane". Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Company, 4102 Nicholas Building, Toledo 3, Ohio.

This cheerful corner is a cozy spot, though it's only inches away from winter. Picture windows and ventilating casements in every room of this house are Thermopane-for year-round comfort. Architects: Carr & Cunningham, Cleveland, Ohio.

Those carved plates look intricate, don't they? But a simple design, repeated for the border in one case and used as a medallion in the other, is easy to execute with nothing more

Tips on Chipping

SONYA LOFTNESS

The ancient art of chip-carving is in for a new revival, so what better use could you make of some of those 90 working days until Christmas than to apply this simple-to-do, but elegant-to-see work to trays and bowls and boxes which you buy undecorated—and then present with a flourish as the hand-carved beauties you've turned them into? Even if you've never heard of chip-carving, the chances are you've seen it in art museums and in natural history museums, for it was a very popular form of folk-art decoration in Germany and Scandinavia where it was used to beautify everything from cupboards to trinket boxes. Down in the South Seas they discovered the art, too, and used it to give distinction to their proud boats and the oars which powered them.

Modern chip-carving is just as beautiful as its ancestor, and much simpler to do. With a sharp, single-edged razor blade and one basic design—the triangle—you can make lovelies anyone would cherish. The original bowl or plate comes from a wood shop, but the rest of the work is strictly your own. For two reasons basswood is recommended as the most successful wood for chip-carving. It is white, and without a definite grain (although it can also be had with a grain); and it is soft, with a uniform cell structure which makes it easier to carve than some of the harder woods

The actual technique of chip-carving is very simple. The triangle is most easily cut when based on a 90° angle. For the PLEASE TURN TO PAGE 132

IN A Concrete House

Protect yourself, your loved ones and your prized possessions against destructive forces such as fire, storms, decay, termites and vermin in a sturdy, longer-lasting concrete house. Concrete can't burn or decay or be penetrated by rats, mice or termites. Yes, there's safety and security in a firesafe concrete house.

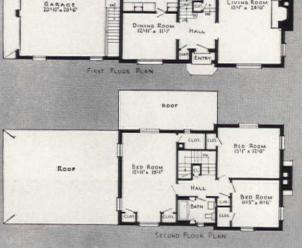

There's lifelong satisfaction in a concrete house, too. First, because it's comfortable. An insulated concrete house is snug and warm in winter, cool in summer and dry in all seasons. Second, there's satisfying economy in a concrete house. Because of its sturdy, durable, weathertight construction, a concrete house needs fewer repairs and maintenance. Over the years it actually costs less to live in a concrete house. The reason in simple arithmetic is: moderate first cost + low maintenance expense ÷ long years of service=low annual cost.

A safe, secure and satisfying concrete house can be built in any style, size or floor plan. Why not investigate the many advantages of living in and owning a concrete house. Write today for free illustrated booklet. It is distributed only in the United States and Canada.

two shorter sides, hold the blade vertically or at right angles to the wood and press the corner of the blade deeply into the wood at the apex of the 90° angle. Draw the blade along the cutting line, and cut straight down into the wood at a progressively shallower degree. The triangular wedge is chipped out from the long side of the triangle by holding the blade in a slanting position, at a 45° angle or less to the wood, so that the corner of the blade cuts toward the apex of the right angle and into it, thus chipping out the wedge. Try using straight lines or an elliptical leaf form to vary your pattern. For a straight line, make a direct vertical cut with the blade, then slant the blade toward it, from one side or both, until your line is chipped out. For a leaf pattern, make a straight cut in the center of the ellipse, and swing the blade around in a curve according to your pattern.

A stencil is not essential, but it is useful, especially in applying a design to a circular plate or bowl, since a pie-shaped wedge emanating from the center to the rim of the plate can be moved along as you trace around it. You can include more than one basic unit in your wedge; if you use basic units of one inch, cut your stencil wedge in two one-inch repeated units.

Once the design is completed, you are ready to build up a finish, and it is the simple finish, like the simple design, that brings out the natural beauty of the wood. For finishing basswood, art classes have found, through tests, a group of products that are particularly suitable. The first, Sealacell, can be used either as a sealer or finish; the second, Royal Finish, will make your plate or bowl impervious to food stains. You can also build up a finish with the same sealer, and end with Varno-Wax. The three used together will create quite another effect. As you choose, the finish can be either lustrous, or dull and satiny, but in any case, the final beauty is achieved by rubbing down the shiny surface with powdered pumice stone and boiled linseed oil, or paraffin oil.

The fact that yours would be a gift that could not be duplicated or bought, increases its desirability. You'll want to keep some of the things you make for yourself, too, so you'd better get started soon—you'll find chip-carving a fascinating hobby.

wall mirror up to 80 inches in width. The trick is to use little metal strips called mirror brackets. Each bracket is equipped with clips—those on bottom bracket are fixed, those on top bracket are moved to lock mirror in place. Install bottom bracket. Then measure off the mirror's height above base of the bottom bracket and make a mark. Install top bracket ½" below that mark

Use a level to draw line on wall and use this line as guide when securing brackets. Check brackets to be sure they are level, and then fasten into place with screws. Position screws to strike wall studs. If this can't be done, use toggle bolts

Push the clips on the top bracket up, and then set the bottom edge of the mirror in the felt-padded lower-bracket clips. Large-size mirrors should be handled by two persons. Push the top of the mirror against the wall, and then push down the two clips at the top

The New in New England

STUART HALE

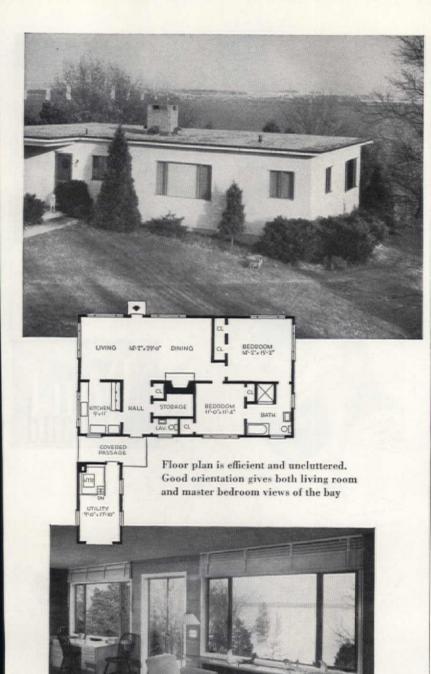

Mestled in a clearing overlooking Narragansett Bay, this comfortable and attractive small home is a completely self-contained one whose owners delight in living an hour away from the nearest large center. When they built it, the James Donnellys jettisoned traditional New England architecture in favor of clean, simple exterior lines. The modern interior gets its warmth from the rich tones of natural wood paneling, and takes dramatic advantage of the superb view through oversized windows.

The main part of the house is a simple rectangle which provides a 29-ft. living room, two bedrooms, a bath, lavatory, kitchen, and plenty of storage space. The small utility wing at right angles to the house has a lot to do with the smooth operation. In addition to housing laundry and heating plant, it's a pleasant workshop for Mr. Donnelly whose woodworking talent provided much of the furniture in the house. A commercial-size deep freeze is also kept here, and the Donnellys figure that it has helped them to knock some $200 off of their annual meat bill. With the freezer full, and a year's supply of fuel oil stored in two 750-gal. tanks, being snowbound here should be fun!

OWNERS: MR. AND MRS. JAMES H. DONNELLY, SAUNDERSTOWN, R.I. ARCHITECT: EDWARD O. EKMAN

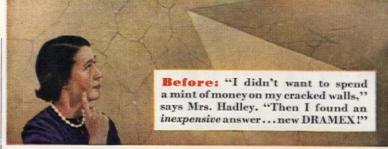

Fabrics in living room are neutral in color, and they play up the rich natural tones of wood paneling, tables, and desk. A built-in sofa occupies the whole far wall

Front of living room has two picture windows and glass French door. In his workshop, Mr. Donnelly built desk and several other pieces of living-room furniture

Easy chairs make several conversation groups in this living room. Notice the bookshelves and built-in cabinets which line one side of the spacious entry hall

A ROCK WOOL PRODUCT

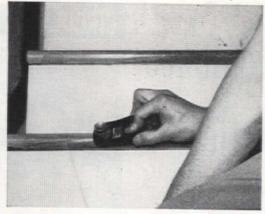

All stairs should be equipped with a handrail, and it should be on the right as you descend. Make sure that the rail is securely fastened with screws to the wall studding

It's the edge of the tread where the falls occur, so make them conspicuous by painting the edge of each step with a stripe of brilliantly colored enamel

A flight of steep stairs can be made slipproof if the treads are painted with porch or deck enamel to which fine beach sand has been added. Keep paint well stirred during application

If the noses of your stair treads are worn and splintered, smooth them down carefully with a small block plane and sandpaper. And round off the sharp corners of the bottom tread, too

Be Tripped Up!

JOHN BURROUGHS

Tread lightly, friends—faulty stairs cause many home accidents but they don't have to be unsafe. Take an afternoon off and make all the stairs in your home safe for everyone

Paint stairs white or light gray, so objects left on them will be easy to spot. If stairs are in constant use, paint every other tread; when these are dry, paint the alternate ones

Toting laundry downstairs has caused many a nasty tumble. A sheet-metal laundry chute installed between the first floor and basement can keep lightning from striking twice

An inexpensive railing for stairs can be made out of 1½" galvanized or wroughtiron pipe. Plumbing-supply stores will cut and thread the pipe and supply the fittings

Outdoor steps are almost certain to become slippery when they are wet. An easy remedy is to lay strips of adhesivebacked non-skid tape over the treads

When winter winds blow their icy chill around your home, your family can relax in carefree, healthful enjoyment, snug and warm—if you live in the Chrysler Airtemp Comfort Zone. Chrysler Airtemp home heating systems provide even, constant, healthful, personalized heat automatically. Just set the thermostat and forget it. It's never too hot or too cold in the Comfort Zone. [ave you found that "convenience" outlets really don't live up to their name because the appliances which you plug into them are on when you want them off-and viceversa? If so, the arrangement shown in the accompanying illustrations could solve the problem in your house as it has in ours: a pilot light tells you whether it's on or off. Thanks to this simple device, we no longer find the electric coffee pot cold at coffee time, and we don't discover in the early morning that the nearly red-hot sandwich grill has been running all night. It also saves wear and tear on appliance cords, plugs, and our dispositions.

This really convenient outlet is a combination of a simple receptacle with switch and pilot light mounted in the same plate and connected in the same circuit. The whole assembly may be obtained at any electrical-supply or hardware store, or from mailorder houses, and should not cost more than $2 to install yourself.

wiring it. Triple combination units such as this are manufactured by several electrical-fixture companies-the unit shown is of individual sub-units assembled to a plate which will take one, two, or three sub-units arranged as desired.

Wiring the unit is quite simple if you want to do it. Make sure the fuse that protects the outlet you're going to replace is out or the main house switch is pulled before you remove the old unit-wiring electric fixtures "hot" invites blown fuses and shocks. Remove the old receptacle, and connect the new combination as shown in Figure II.

The white wire from the old unit should be connected to the silver terminals of the outlet and pilot unit. The dark wire (black or red usually) should be connected to one side of the switch. The other side of the switch is connected to the bronze or gold terminals of the pilot and outlet units. That's all there is to it.

If your tinkering talents do not include electrical work, have the job done by an electrician-it will be inexpensive, and once in you wouldn't be without it. With such an arrangement, you can leave your coffee maker or other often-used appliance plugged in all the time-the pilot will always tell you from across the room if it's on or if it's off.

Switch, pilot light, and receptacle are wired together in such a way that when switch is "off," flow of current to other two units is interrupted. Black or "hot" wire is connected to one side of switch. A jumper is used to connect opposite side of switch to bronze terminal screws on pilot light and receptacle. White wire is fastened to silver terminal screw of receptacle and jumper from this goes to the silver terminal screw on pilot light

Repair the Gutters

(Begins on page 56)

When patch is in place, apply a thin coat of roofing cement to the surface and smooth out with putty knife. Be sure compound covers edges of patch

Downspouts should be fitted with a small metal strainer where they enter gutters—this will keep solid matter from getting into them

Life of downspouts can be lengthened if inside is swabbed out with cloth saturated with asphaltum paint

BEST TIME to condition your soil

Fall is the ideal season to condition your soil with Krilium*— moisture, rain and weather are generally more favorable—ground is more workable ... Fall is also the season for setting out bulbs, for transplanting, for repairing bare spots in lawns.

Indoor growing, too, gets a renewed start—here Krilium finds year-round use, particularly with the introduction of the new 1-lb. handy shaker-top package — especially convenient for potted plants, flowers, window boxes.

Apply Krilium soil conditioner now. Your soil will be ready for easy working whenever you're ready for later planting—next week or next spring.

Quick facts about soil conditioning

- 1 ... Mere surface application of any soil conditioner will not break up hard, caked or crusted soil. It will not create good soil structure—soil still has to be broken up mechanically and by hand, before a conditioner can be effectively applied.
- 2...Krilium can be worked into the soil at the same time it is being broken up—only one double-effect operation is needed.
- 3 . . . For best results, a soil conditioner should be worked in to root depth-

3 to 6 inches for root crops such as carrots, beets, turnips; ½ inch or more for grasses, lawns.

- 4...Dry treatment is more effective because proper application depth can be accurately controlled.
- 5...On the basis of square feet of effective treatment (the only sound way to figure cost) Krilium is the most economical soil conditioner available.

Two Sizes

SPECIAL NOTE . . . Krilium is also available in full-strength economical Loamaker* formula, especially recommended for large-area applications. Ask your dealer.

Shopping for Tulips

keen disappointment. The term "top size" is used all too carelessly and sometimes applied to bulbs no larger than acorns. Unless they are at least as big as large horse chestnuts, tulip bulbs cannot be counted on to flower. So get your catalogues and price lists from firms that have been in business a long time and prize a reputation. If you must order late, list second choices, for every season sees some kinds scarce, and it has to be "first come, first served." Better a few good bulbs than a lot of poor ones. Your best guarantee is the standing and integrity of the firm you buy from.

Where and how to use tulips? If you have a rock garden, by all means indulge in a few Botanicals. Planted at least 6 in. deep where there is sunlight and good drainage (not beside a brook or pool), and where tree or shrub roots will not compete with them, they will persist for years. Fine ones to start with are the Fosteriana variety Red Emperor and the dainty T. clusiana or "peppermint-stick tulip," with striped pink and white blooms on stems 10 in. or so tall. Others are the very early T. kaufmanniana (called "waterlily tulip" because its short-stemmed flowers open wide and flat on the ground), T. griegi, T. chrysantha, etc.

The Single and Double Earlies are definitely for formal planting. Two or three rows add much in front of a nice foundation planting on either side of a walk, or along the front of a flower bed. They go well where, later, annuals will be featured, for their flowers and foliage are gone when it is time to set out the seedling annuals. The May-flowering types, much taller and more imposing, can be used in the same ways, but seem more at home interspersed among clumps of perennials in a mixed border, planted in groups of five or more near the front of such borders, or massed to give solid beds of color.

How many bulbs to buy for a given space is not hard to figure. Some planting charts say to put them 4 in. apart, but in my opinion 9 in. is more like it. In a bed of several hundred, the inner bulbs can stand up to 12 in. apart without looking sparse. For a circular or oval bed, square it off, estimate the number needed for the resulting rectangle, then deduct 20 per cent for the unplanted corners and margins.

The next step is preparing the ground by digging the bed (or the place for each clump) to the full depth of the spading fork, Bulbs are graded according to circumference in centimeters (1 in. equals 21/2 cm.). "First size" (11-12 cm.) tulips, like the six at left, above, bought from reliable dealers, cost about $1.50 per dozen, give results like those at left, below. The six bulbs at right, above, were part of a "bargain offer." Of the 127 sent (for under $2.00) 21 were under 5 cm., 72 were 5-6 cm., 34 were 6-7 cm.; 40 failed to grow at all, and only 6 bore flowers, see below, right. So-buy from safe sources. incorporating two or three inches of well rotted manure if available, or a liberal dressing of bone meal. Don't use any chemical fertilizer at this time; work it in as a top-dressing when you loosen the soil next spring.

Plant any time before the ground freezes, spotting the bulbs where they are to go, and then, using a strong trowel, set them as deep as you can reach-say from 5 to 6 in. Advocates of very deep (12 in.) planting argue that the bulbs will not so soon split up, and will thus give more seasons of bloom, but this involves more work and is not often done. Whether to cover a new tulip planting is a moot point. If you want to do it, apply a light coating of salt hay or, when available, coarse manure-but not until the ground has frozen. The aim is not to keep the cold out, but to prevent alternate freezing and thawing; also mulching unfrozen ground is an invitation to field mice. Near fields and woodlands these pests sometimes make it necessary to plant bulb clumps in small-mesh wire baskets sunk in the ground, or even to encircle whole beds with wire buried 18 in. deep. Or the bulbs can be coated with poison by dampening them and shaking them up in a paper bag with a little dry red lead, Paris green, or arsenate of lead. Also, to outwit the mice, delay planting until just before the normal first hard frost, by which time they will probably have retired to their winter homes and stored up caches of food there.

Next spring, as soon as the tulip growth is an inch high, remove the covering and stir in a light application of any good garden fertilizer. A margin of pansies or forget-me-nots planted at this time will enhance the beauty of the bed. Though rarely bothered by insects or diseases, tulips when grown in one place for too many years may be hit by "fire blight" caused by a fungus. The remedy is to remove the infected soil 8 in. deep and replace it with fresh, clean soil. But using a little new soil around each bulb at planting time will help avoid or delay this trouble.

After flowering time, will you lift the bulbs or not? Botanical kinds, planted deep enough (6 in.) in the first place, can be left alone. Plan to leave the Early and May-flowering types in place for two or even three years. In any case, remove seed pods as soon as they form, or forestall them by cutting off all flowers as they fade. When the leaves are partly dry, dig the bulbs, leave in a dry, shady place until quite dry, then sort out, clean, and store away the sound, larger ones, until planting time. You can put the bulblets in rows in the vegetable garden or some out-of-theway place hoping that they will grow to flowering size in a few years.

The Spreading Chestnut Tree is back

ANDREW S. WING

I ike Longfellow's village smith, I'm living "under a spreading chestnut tree." You can, too, and enjoy its beauty, shade, and delicious nuts. True, it won't be a tree of the native American species (Castanea dentata) of happy memories. Those fine, tall trees, once so common in our eastern woodlands, were valued as much for their timber as for their nuts, and were also an important source of tannin, used in tanning. But they have virtually disappeared as a result of having been attacked, half a century ago, by an immigrant blight from the Orient for which, as yet, no cure has been found. First a few trees sickened and died, then more and more, over a steadily widening area, until, today, you rarely see a live native chestnut. Occasionally a sapling will spring up from a surviving root, grow for a few years, and perhaps even bear a few nuts, only to become infected by the fungus, dwindle, and finally go the way of the others.

No, your tree will be—as mine is—of a different, Chinese species (Castanea mollissima); or perhaps Japanese (C. crenata); or possibly a hybrid—the result of crossing them with one another, or with descendants of our original trees. When it became clear that our native species was doomed, the U. S. Department of Agriculture, State Experiment Stations, and individual hybridists set out to find or develop species or hybrids combining the best features of the chestnuts we lost with the disease resistance and other good qualities of other wild kinds. There seems a good chance that this goal will be attained; already several named hybrids with performance records are available.

Chestnut Tree

Of the Chinese and Japanese species-both highly, if not wholly, resistant to chestnut blight-the latter bears the larger nuts, but those of the former are of better quality, Also the tree is more desirable-not as a source of lumber or tannin, but as a plant for yard or garden. It is sturdy and handsome, spreading gracefully like a big apple tree, yet without becoming too large for a home setting. Its foliage is beautiful while green, and turns to russet-gold in fall. When in bloom in late spring, it is a mass of yellow catkin tassels. (Their rather heavy odor suggests that a tree should not be planted too near the house.) All season you watch to see if the bees did their work well so there will be a good crop of nuts. There will be-provided there is another related chestnut tree in the vicinity, for it will not bear fruit by itself alone. In autumn, you'll have an exciting race to see whether you or the squirrels get the crop. If you're vigilant you'll get your share, and fresh chestnuts, cured but not dried out. are something to brag about-raw, roasted over coals, or used in cooking.

They are almost as sweet as those of treasured memory and much larger -about the size of the Italian kind sold on street corners, but which come from trees that are neither blightproof nor hardy in this country. Yields range from a pound or so from a 4- or 5-year-old tree to as much as 100 pounds (a bushel or more) from a 10- or 12-year-old specimen. The biggest of the trees on our rented place, 30 feet tall, 40 feet wide, and 2 feet through at the base, is about 40 years old. If you buy one from any good nursery that carries them-or, better, from a nut-tree specialist-and plant it this fall, you can hope for at least a few nuts in three or four years, maybe less.

Chinese chestnuts do well in any fairly fertile, well-drained soil where there is plenty of light and air, and in most sections of the country except, possibly, the extreme northern and southern regions. They need little pruning (mainly to get rid of dead wood) and are troubled by few insects or diseases. A simple dust or spray program (2/3 ounce each of arsenate of lead and wheat flour in a gallon of water, or any of the newer recommended materials) will control Japanese beetles, and the traditional worm associated with chestnuts can be kept in check by gathering the nuts promptly as they ripen. If wormfree, enjoy them; if not, burn them and prevent the pests from multiplying. They should be kept in cold storage to prevent drying out and molding. You'll have to rake up the fallen catkins in spring and the burs in fall, but what's that compared with all a chestnut tree gives you?

Facts About Septic Tanks

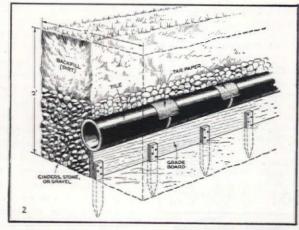

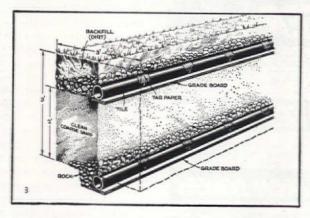

p to a few weeks ago, a friend of mine who recently moved to the country was enthusiastic about his new home beyond the city limits. Then the septic tank overflowed-and his dream of peaceful country living went, literally, down the drain. Belligerently, he denounced septic tanks. Actually, he knew little about them. A typical city resident moving to the country, he had overlooked his duty (as a property owner) of sewage disposal; he didn't realize that a homeowner's failure to understand how a septic tank works, and what it needs, can make the difference between successful and unsuccessful operation.

In his case, the trouble was that the backyard soil into which the tank discharged was tight clay; already saturated with melting snow and spring rains when he moved in, it couldn't absorb any more.

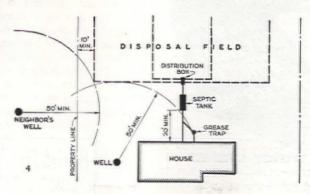

Contrary to a common notion, a septic tank does not purify sewage; it merely prepares it for final disposal, as shown in the diagrams here. In the tank, most of the sewage is converted by bacteria into gas and water which pass into the drain line to be absorbed by the soil of the disposal field, and evaporated by the sun. The rest remains in the tank in two forms: scum, which floats on top and is kept out of the drain line by a baffle board; and sludge, which settles to the bottom. Both must be removed from time to time. How often depends on the size of the tank and amount of sewage it has to handle. Ordinarily, a 600-gallon tank is adequate for a family of six, but it should be cleaned every 3 or 4 years. If a kitchen-sink garbage-disposal unit is to be used, the capacity of the septic tank must be double the ordinary size. The waste from the disposal unit must, however, be run into the house septic tank-never into a separate cesspool or dry well.

Besides the tank, there should always be, between it and the house, a grease-trap to receive water from PLEASE TURN TO PAGE 152

Diagrams show: (1) Arrangement and operation of grease trap, septic tank, and disposal system. (2 & 3) Two methods of laying drain line. (4) Desirable layout of individual house sewage system; also minimum distances various parts should be from house, well, neighbors, etc.

kitchen sink. Here grease rises and forms a layer just as the scum does in the septic tank. It, too, must be removed regularly.

The disposal system consists of one or more lines of ordinary drain tiles butted (not cemented) together, with the open joints covered with pieces of tar paper to keep the soil out. Laid to a definite slight pitch, they are held there by the sand, gravel, or rock around them, or by properly sloped grade boards which can be kept in place with wooden pegs. The size of the disposal field will depend on that of the tank, the amount of sewage, and particularly upon the nature of the soil. A sandy soil which absorbs water freely is naturally best. Heavy, tight clay, like my friend's, or shallow soil underlaid by rock, is unsuitable and might necessitate digging sizable trenches and filling them with gravel, sand, etc., in which to lay the tileperhaps two lines, one above the other. A distribution box makes it possible to send the flow from the tank alternately through the sections of the drain line and disposal area.

However, trouble may come from other causes. Sometimes housewives interfere with the tank's operation by putting down the drain lye, disinfectants, and other strong agents which kill the bacteria and stop their essential action. In the absence of a grease-trap, grease may clog the drain lines, or tree roots, seeking moisture, may grow in between the tiles, form almost solid mats, and have the same effect. Poplars, willows, soft maples, and elms are especially likely to do this. Also, the passage of trucks, passenger cars, bulldozers, and tractors may break and clog a line laid near the surface. Watch out if grading and landscape work have to be done after the drain lines are installed.

A clogged line means either mechanical clearing with some sort of rotating knife operated by a flexible cable or shaft, or hand clearing after digging down to the line-hoping you've guessed the place of stoppage. Whatever the treatment called for, it will be a nuisance, and more or less expensive. So, even though these recommendations seem to involve a lot of bother, they are worth taking.

When You Have To Lose a Tree

ANDREA HARSHMAN

If disease or other catastrophe makes it necessary for you to cut down and get rid of a big tree, here is a suggestion as to how to dispose of it, stump and all.

All that remains of ten stately elms that once graced our half-acre lawn are charcoal-blackened, soon to be sodded over spots where they formerly stood. When, three years ago, the Dutch elm disease hit our section, our trees went the way of the others, despite my efforts to build up their resistance by regular feeding and watering. When the first three died and were cut down I tried several methods for removing the stumps -soaking with oil, using a blow torch, a fire of coke (at $19.75 a ton!)but all proved costly in either time or money, and wholly ineffective.

The next two summers the remaining seven died, and by then the cost of removing dead trees had risen so high that it was late fall before I found a crew that would quote within my price range. They agreed to cut the trunks and large limbs into fireplace logs for $15 less than the usual price if they could pile the tops on my vegetable garden for us to burn. However, when they came to work, I asked them to pile the branches, not in the garden, but near the tree stumps. As fast as they did this with one tree and moved on to the next, I started a fire on the stump, first piling the small twigs on the windward side, then gradually adding larger branches until I had a bed of glowing coals on each of the ten firesurrounded stumps. (Where a tree had been cut level with the ground, I dug down several inches around it to provide draft.) By the time the men finished, the fires were going so well I asked them to roll the largest pieces onto the pyres like spokes of a wheel. Here they burned briskly with only an occasional stirring or poking.

Our local bonfire ordinance requires that all fires be confined within wire or metal containers. In our part of town 50-ft.-wide streets and the 30-ft. building setback give considerable space between homes. Also ours is a corner lot and all the stumps were at least 40 ft. from the house. However, as further protection and to conform to the regulations, we used long metal sheets from the cold air ducts of a discarded furnace, held in place by iron rods driven into the ground. In this enclosure around the fires, I left an opening so I could go in and tend them, and to create a draft. As one stump was near a group of Pfitzer junipers, we made an extra enclosure for it of some hollow tile we had on the place. One's ingenuity would solve such problems as that in any particular case.

It is not necessary to have a roaring fire; in fact a small one concentrated on the stump gave us a better bed of red coals, besides getting the most out of the fuel, of which a lot is required.

During the three days the fires burned, we kept an eye on them to keep sparks from flying about; at night, we covered them with ashes which left the coals ready to start work again in the morning. One night we invited friends in and, until the wee hours, roasted apples, wieners, and marshmallows, told stories, and enjoyed the cheery glow of the fires.

Altogether, the work involved was slight, the results were considerable. Best of all, by burning the infected wood on the spot, we destroyed all the disease spores instead of sending them to a dump whence they could be spread to other healthy trees.

Editor's Note: Just one comment on this ingenious procedure: Since all communities may not be as lenient as Miss Harshman's, be sure you know what your local ordinances permit and under what conditions. Then take every precaution to keep the stump fires from getting out of hand.

PLANTING BULBS?

there's an unusually potent reason for you to plant bulbs this fall, especially if you also like to take pictures, and travel. The Associated Bulb Growers of Holland announce a garden photograph contest open to anyone in the United States or Canada who (a) buys and plants some bulbs this fall, (b) photographs the blooms next spring, and (c) submits prints or color transparencies not later than June 30, 1953. The more than 1,000 prizes (valued at $75,000) offered, range from two, two-person vacation trips to Europe (for the best color and black and white photographs respectively) to bulb collections and imported crystal, china, and silverware. The vital need of feminine hygiene (including vaginal cleanliness) is fully recognized today. This wholesome practice is approved among doctors. A wise wife knows how a cleansing, deodorizing douche helps keep her dainty, sweet and desirable. She knows how necessary a germicidal douche is for her HEALTH, WELL BEING and MARRIED HAPPINESS.

The important question is what to use. What antiseptic is powerfully effective, deodorizing yet absolutely safe to body tissues? A perfect solution is ZONITE!

No other type liquid antisepticgermicide for the douche of all those tested is SO POWERFUL yet SAFE to tissues as ZONITE.

ZONITE is positively non-poisonous; non-irritating.

Here's ABSOLUTE PROOF

The membranes of a rabbit's eye are even more sensitive than membranes in the vaginal tract. Laboratory tests show that ZONITE as used in the douche was put twice daily for three months into rabbits' eyes. NOT THE SLIGHTEST IRRITATION APPEARED AT ANY TIME: ZONITE'S completely safe qualities have also been proved in clinical tests by a famous surgeon and scientist and in actual use by thousands of women for over thirty years. ZONITE has brought confidence, poise and serenity to women by the thousands.

Zonite's 'Miracle Working' Action

ZONITE completely deodorizes. Yet it never leaves an odor of its own. It helps prevent infection. ZONITE is so powerful—no germs of any kind tested have ever been found that it will not kill on contact. It's not always possible to reach all the germs in the tract, but you can be sure ZONITE kills every reachable germ. ZONITE leaves you feeling so clean, dainty and refreshed.

Always use as directed.

THIS IDEAL 'ALL PURPOSE'
ANTISEPTIC-GERMICIDE SHOULD BE IN EVERY MEDICINE CHEST
