the modern fashion in floors

What does "modern" mean to you? To most decorators, it's a blend of all the things that make a home lovelier and easier to live in—beautiful, practical things like Armstrong Linoleum. Armstrong Linoleum offers you a far wider choice of colors, designs, and textures than any other floor, and therefore far more opportunities for expressing your own tastes in custom floor designs. As you live with Armstrong Linoleum, you discover that it's modern in another wonderful way — ease of care. The surface is so delightfully smooth — so free of dirt-catching cracks — it's no effort at all to sweep clean. When grease is spilled, or water splashed, a damp mop removes it — completely. And this floor never needs costly refinishing. For the real joys of an up-to-date home — economy, beauty, and easy care — you'll be delighted with Armstrong Linoleum, "the modern fashion in floors."

Send for free portfolio describing this charming dining-kitchen area with its delightful herb garden. Sketch plan and list of furnishings included. Write Armstrong Cork Company, 5509 Pine Street, Lancaster, Pa.

Your busy kitchen can be quiet under a noise-absorbing ceiling of Armstrong Cushiontone. The sounds of a whirring mixer, blaring radio, clatter of dishes, and playful children are all pleasantly subdued. Cushiontone's informal Full Random styling is attractive, too. You'll find it will add new beauty to any room in your home.

Parties can be quieter without spoiling the youngsters' fun. An attractive ceiling of Armstrong Cushiontone absorbs the shrill shrieks of excited children, preventing noise from disturbing people in the rest of the house. Most harsh noise is caused by echoing sound—but Cushiontone swallows sound before it can become noise.

You can quiet kitchen clatter even in an open-plan home

For as little as $25 you can cover a 10' x 12' area with a ceiling that softens the noise of appliances and children

It's easy to install Cushiontone by stapling, nailing, or cementing. A new tongue-and-groove joint hides staples or nails and helps level each tile. Whether you prefer to do-it-yourself or want a professional job, see your Building Products Dealer for helpful advice and materials.

Cleaning is no problem. Cushiontone's smooth white surface doesn't attract dust or dirt and can be washed or repainted easily.

Send for free booklet, "How to Make Things Quieter at Your House." Write direct to the Armstrong Cork Company, 5509 Clark Street, Lancaster, Pennsylvania.

(GENUS BOTTLES)

The frivolous airs and pert poses of this mad menagerie will win top honors in any show, though their blood lines are humble indeed. Actually, their good looks are the result of a clever bit of crossbreeding, for their pedigrees reveal an assortment of soda-pop bottles, tumblers, rubber balls, and paint. Of course they're "gentle with children," and it was for the kids that we first thought them up—but they are sophisticated critters indeed, and have won all adult hearts completely. Use them in groups as a centerpiece, or let one stand guard at a dressing table. Because the birds' heads lift off with ease, the penguin or the cock can be a prize package bearing small gifts or party favors.

Anyone who really knows will tell you that you'll be happier, more comfortable when your heating and cooling system is controlled by Penn. And, there's a good reason.

Only the new, modern Penn horizontal room thermostat combines in one compact unit both heat anticipation and cold anticipation. This Penn-made magic actually "senses" temperature changes before your body can detect them. Then, it commands your air conditioning system to supply just enough heat or cool air to maintain room temperature at the comfort level you selected. No more "hot-'ncold" living, no thermostat twiddling!

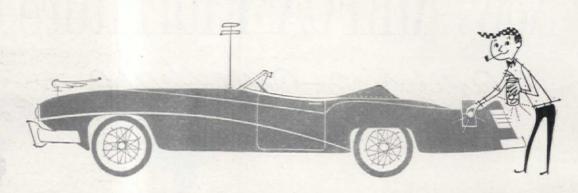

And, Penn costs no more. So, be sure your air conditioning system is controlled by Penn.

FABLES IN FACT

STANLEY H. BRAMS

If you have an average interest in automobiles, you've probably listened to, perhaps even spread, a few fables. While science fiction can turn into scientific fact at the flick of a century, or even a decade, as Jules Verne has proven beyond doubt—in this miraculous age it is increasingly difficult to sift fact from fantasy like this:

just heard about a new automobile carburetor that gets as much as 200 miles a gallon. But the auto companies and oil companies have gotten together to keep it off the market."

Chances are you've heard another fable-the one that describes a new magic chemical pellet that, dropped into the gas tank, lengthens mileage in any gallon of gas. And it may well be that you've heard its variation—the one about a different little pill that can be added to ordinary water to create a fluid that works just as well as gasoline.

These stories, heard from Bangor to Beverly Hills, come in cycles. When auto companies receive one letter about a new Wonder Carburetor, they are sure to get a baleful in the following weeks. Each story tells of a miraculous new invention that would bring a millenium for car owners if it were not for the selfish companies which keep it off the market. fearing it will ruin their business. But don't take any stock in such stories. The plain, unvarnished truth is that they are untrue, and, moreover, in the light of today's knowledge, they are impossible.

Consider the widely circulated 200-mile-a-gallon carburetor fable. During the war, General Montgomery heard it, and initiated a Canadian development project aiming at reducing supply problems for his army. The project concluded as engineers had figured from the start—the idea was physically impossible.

An automobile engine is essentially a device for converting fuel into heat. When gasoline is exploded, the expanding gases (heat) drive the pistons and move the car. An engineer can tell, within a fraction, the thermal efficiency of an engine-the degree to which it uses the heat potential of the gasoline. Most of today's auto engines range between 30%-35% thermal efficiency. This means that if an engine were three times as efficient as it is today, it could "stretch" gasoline no more than three times farther than at present. There just aren't any more heat units in gasoline. Thus, a 15-mile-a-gallon automobile might do about 45 miles, but no more, regardless of carburetor.

You might reasonably ask: Why can't they build engines of 100% thermal efficiency or, at least, engines that are far more effective? They can. But to do so would call for engines of much more exquisite fitting and design. And such engines would cost far, far more than do today's. Remember the wartime aircraft engines? They were more efficient than car engines, to be sure. They had to be. And Uncle Sam was willing to pay much more for an aircraft engine than you would pay for an entire automobile.

Take the magic pellet fable. Here, again, the blunt fact intrudes that engines, in the final analysis, run on heat. No pellets, that any expert knows about, can add materially to the heat inherent in gasoline -at a price below the cost of a comparative quantity of additional gasoline. And as for putting pellets in water-well, the same conditions apply.

Before the war, the roster of automotive fables numbered the one about the million-mile tire that rubber companies were holding off the market for fear they'd end replacement sales. That wasn't true then-in any degree. Today it is true, but only partly -and you can buy the tire. If you want to pay highest prices, you can obtain casings that will last many thousands of miles more than will standard tires. Rubber companies have made available the best that they are capable of producing. The only rub: the price is fairly proportionate to the additional miles.

Automobile companies expect that stories will soon spring up about a wonderful new gas turbine engine whose use is being blocked by the auto companies. This story, of course, will stem from the fact that gas turbine engines are being tested in Detroit. But the fact is that, by most estimates, it will be eight or ten years before such engines are sufficiently perfected to drive an automobile properly and economically.

You may also hear about new convertible tops, as impervious to weather as solid steel. The auto companies wish they had such an item. Each year brings improved fabrics, but nothing perfect has turned up.

Where do these stories start? Generally, they begin in simple chit-chat, embroidered on by one conversationalist after another till they acquire the trapping such fables need-an air of authenticity and secrecy, and a valid reason why the device is withheld from the market. Sometimes they grow out of an article that talks about future possibilities, or even one like this, about why rumors are wrong. But one fact is sure: As long as people gather to talk, stories spring up, almost by spontaneous combustion. And as long as people drive automobiles, some of these stories are bound to revolve around the cars they dream of driving.

THE KEY TO BEAUTIFUL ROOMS SINCE 1838

Mrs. How? When? WHY?

A round our office, if we want to know how veneers fare in Vermont, tester beds in Texas, or Orlon in Oregon, we go to Dixie—Home Furnishings Editor Gertrude Brooks Dixson, A.I.D., that is. According to Dixie, she's "sort of a bridge" between the users and the producers of things for the home. Actually, she's a very live wire bearing messages both ways, for while covering the country to gather in the news, she's bent back the ears of many a manufacturer in her crusade for the needs of her great and respected friend, the Reader of AMERICAN HOME.

Just as important as the good taste she was born with, is the technical equipment she's acquired over the past 20 years: a sound knowledge of the design, the manufacture, and the performance of every manner of home furnishing. She's equally cozy with the textile engineer, the factory foreman, and Mrs. Consumer hellbent on style and value. Before joining our staff some years back, she worked for a furniture manufacturer in the Middle West, and served as home furnishings co-ordinator for The William Hengerer Co. in Buffalo, for Strawbridge and Clothier in Philadelphia, and for the chain of Broadway Stores in California. Dixie's hobby? "It's people," she tells us. And a mighty fortunate hobby! Members of her own profession have just made her a vice-president of the National Home Fashions League.

You never trip over the cord of this lamp-it has no cord! It operates from five different locations in the Fletcher living room

I is married to an inveterate do-it-yourselfer. But in this case the man of the family, Jack Fletcher, is a 24year-old industrial designer who can practice what he preaches. Small wonder, then, that the Fletchers' new home in West Covina. California, was designed by its owner, and boasts many unusual features, some of them very unusual.

By way of structure, there's the fact that 27 columns take the entire weight and thrust of the roof. Therefore, walls are non-bearing, and were prefabricated in 4' x 8' sections (at substantial savings in cost). This arrangement also permits interior walls to be shifted about easily if the Fletchers want to change the size and number of their rooms. Then there's the "flueless" two-faced fireplace serving both living room and outdoor barbecue area (actually, there is a flue-it runs under the floor and up through the center wall). Above that fireplace, where CONTINUED ON PAGE 114

So SMART... and thrifty, too...lovely floors of OAK

PRACTICAL-The practical value of Oak -its strength, its economy of upkeep, its timeless resistance to wear and tear, its fadeproof coloring-is only one reason for its continuous popularity.

BEAUTIFUL-Another is the unobtrusive beauty of Oak-its quiet harmony with all types of architecture and with every conceivable ensemble of colors, fabrics, and furniture. It gives you complete freedom of choice in decorating your home.

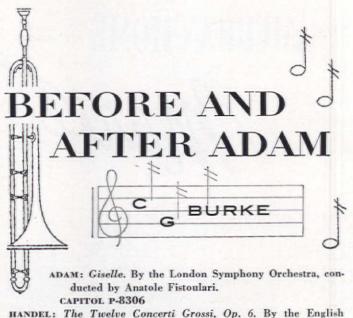

COMFORTABLE - The resiliency of Oak gives restful comfort underfoot. And its high insulating quality prevents loss of heat, affords healthful protection against cold and dampness.

ECONOMICAL - Yet lovely floors of solid Oak are not for the rich alone. Lowest cost homes can afford them. Thanks to its durability, Oak is far cheaper in the long run than any other type of floor material, even lower in first cost than most.

CORRECT-Important, too, is the recognized style leadership of Oak. Today, as always, hardwood floors are correct-the ultimate mark of good taste and elegance in contemporary or traditional homes.

Whether you build, buy, or remodel, insist on Oak Floors. It's the SMART thing to do!

HANDEL: The Twelve Concerti Grossi, Op. 6. By the English Baroque Orchestra, conducted by Hermann Scherchen.

WESTMINSTER WAL-403. Four discs.

D. SCARLATTI: Sixty Sonatas. By Ralph Kirkpatrick, harpsichord. COLUMBIA SL-221. Four discs.

BEETHOVEN: The String Quartets, Volume III. By the Hungarian Quartet.

ANGEL 3514-D. Four discs.

wolf-ferrari: Il Segreto di Susanna. By Elena Rizzieri, soprano, and Giuseppe Valdengo, baritone; Orchestra of Radiotelevisione Italiana, Turin, conducted by Angelo Questa.

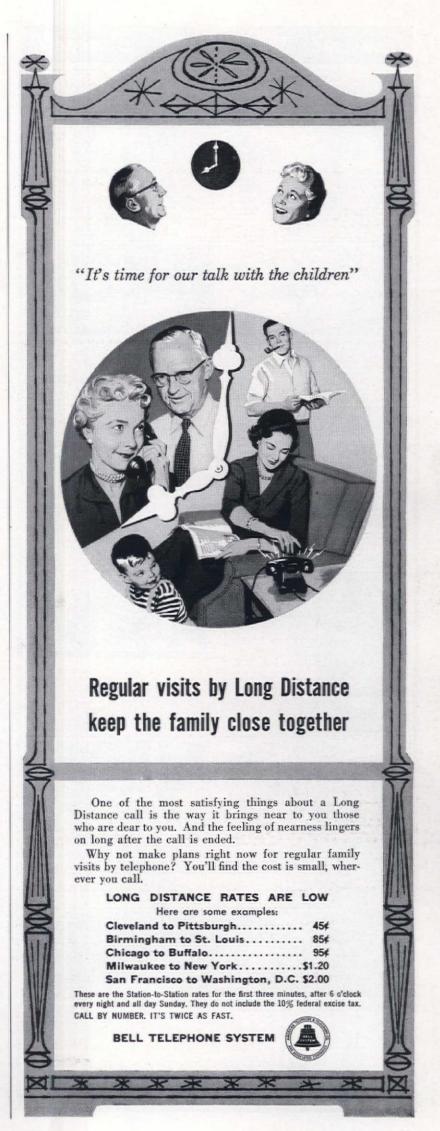

It is proper to begin anything with Adam, although he is not first in the hierarchy above. Fourth, rather; but the record devoted to his tender, ever-charming ballet wins first mention because it is serenely free of faults and assuredly the best of Giselle. Wistful for most of its delicately animated way, but with plenty of manly vigor to dry its fragrant and never-maudlin tears, the fairy story in this deft statement by an orchestra and conductor, both old hands in ballet, carries a temporary conviction of the truth of its impossibilities even when we cannot see the dancers. The sure-footed, unpretentious playing is given the support of pretty noble reproduction—clear and pure even in the violins, bold and biting in the brasses, big and in true proportion for the whole orchestra, without stridency or muddiness anywhere.

THE GREAT 12

The much greater achievement manifest in the Scherchen edition of the infinitely greater music of the twelve Grand Concertos into which the commanding genius of Handel poured an incredible variety of shapes and sentiments will not be so readily recognized. This conductor, whom the phonograph brought out of obscurity, is a lively and inquiring scholar. He examines; and he forsakes tradition when he finds tradition wrong or sterile. Thus, there are some shocks in his tempos here, assaults on preconception in several of the most familiar movements. It is entirely justifiable to recoil here and there; but the very violence of the affront done to our complacency stings our attention to the immaculate detail, the subtle contrasts, the entirety of the phrasing, and the positive accents of the conductor, whose players respond with a remarkable unanimity of finesse. We begin to understand that we are hearing interpretations of masterly understanding, and the three preceding versions, two of which are pretty good, fade far into the background of memory. Smooth and efficient sound from the engineers-the instrumentation, for strings and harpsichord, does not lend itself to spectacularity.

A DAZZLING HARPSICHORD

The five hundred-odd little sonatas of Domenico Scarlatti have been promised to the phonograph by the harpsichordist Fernando Valenti, and 84 have already appeared at various times on seven Westminster discs of bright merit. No harpsichord sounds like CONTINUED ON PAGE 106

YOU'LL WANT TO READ THESE IN THE OCTOBER ISSUE!

"OKLAHOMA!" WAS BORN HERE

AMERICAN HOME'S exclusive story on the home of Oscar Hammerstein II and his beautiful wife, Dorothy. Anybody who can carry a tune in a jug knows that he's half the phenomenal team of Rogers and Hammerstein who wrote the lyrics and music to such platinum-plated hits as "Oklahoma!", "Carousel," and "South Pacific." (Oscar's gift to Dorothy after the smash success of "Oklahoma!": a sable trench coat.) Few know that Dorothy Hammerstein is a decorator of great skill and taste, as you'll see when we take you behind the scenes in their lovely Bucks County, Pennsylvania, home.

DALE CARNEGIE'S OWN GARDEN

Dale Carnegie tells us how to win friends and influence tulips in this diverting October feature. You'll see how the famous author's tulip bed was first laid out in scaled plan, transferred to full size in his yard, how the bulbs were placed for masses of color—all this in our step-by-step photographs. A real "before and after" gardening story!

HOW TO FINISH PINE

"I pine for you and balsam"-remember that old chestnut (pun intended)? Well, we pine for you in October, tell you practically all there is to know about staining and finishing pine paneling. The formula is compounded largely of elbow grease and good stains that are readily available. Couple our preaching with your practicing, and your den or rumpus room will take on a lovely glow.

Beware of those gumshoe salesmen special offers of ... EREE COMMISSIONS CUT-RATE

Then John came home from the office, he knew at once that Mary was bursting with one of her surprises. The most wonderful thing HAS happened," she cried. "You know we need a new roof, or the bedroom wallpaper will be simply ruined. AND we've been wondering how to pay for it. Well, we can! Our house has been picked, out of the whole neighborhood, to be a demonstration house. We'll get the new roof for practically nothing, and I'll get a commission for all the other sales, just by letting people see it."

"Slow down a minute," John broke in. "Christmas is over.

Who's going to give us all this?"

"You'll find out, dear. The general manager of the roofing company is coming tonight just to explain it and to get your consent. Oh, isn't it just wonderful, John?"

The "general manager" did come. He wasn't the general manager of a roofing company, but of an unscrupulous gang of salesmen who went from town to town, staying just long enough to reap a good crop of suckers. He was personable, well-dressed, a glib talker, and very persuasively he explained that his company was going to establish a local branch. Before they began advertising, they wanted to have a good demonstration job to show their prospects. "We'll give you a new roof at less than cost," he said, "and you'll be getting your commission of $50 per job before you have to make any payments. Just as a matter of form, you'll have to sign these applications for an F.H.A. Loan to cover the cost of the work.'

John hesitated for a second.

"Doesn't mean a thing," the man said quickly. "We just want your procedure to be the same as for the other jobs we'll get. Anyway, it's all to the good, for F.H.A. is a government agency which insures that all materials and workmanship will be up to government specifications." That was the clincher, and John signed. At the door, the salesman added: "I'd keep mum about our commission arrangement. Your friends might not like it if they knew you were getting a cut. Besides, we don't want them thinking you got a better job, just because you're working with us, do we?"

Well, John and Mary got their new roof, but at the first storm, it leaked worse than ever. The material was shoddy, and no new flashing had been installed. They were surprised, too,

At this school, the usual traffic hazards are eliminated. School buses of entire district are serviced in converted tractor shed

Although the mansion became an elementary school, pupils from secondary schools, brought here by bus, make use of its facilities. High school mechanical drawing classes meet in this spacious refurbished barn. Two greenhouses will be used by biology classes

NOEL WICAL

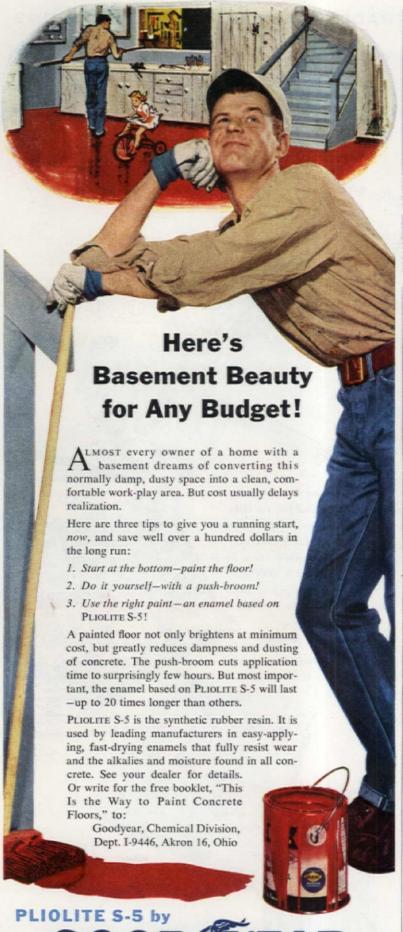

Swollen by industrial growth, and struck by population deflected from nearby Cleveland, the suburban community of Willoughby, Ohio—like so many others throughout the country—needed a fourth R in its educational program: more Room. To prevent elementary school classes from going on half-day shifts, the town took a clue from a long-established practice among private schools and bought a former mansion and the 140 acres surrounding it. Quickly converted into a picturesque, homelike public school for 320 boys and girls, the new facilities, officials estimate, cost Willoughby much less than would have been spent upon new—and, of course, slower—school construction.

That's only part of what Willoughby got, however. The mansion school, together with its cluster of sturdy outbuildings and plantation-sized campus, offers ample room for a rich assortment of educational and civic activities. A community recreation park, a second elementary school, a junior high, and a high school will eventually share the campus. Already, the Community Fund, Red Cross, and other charitable organizations are quartered in former tenant houses, and students from Willoughby's other schools make use of the place—barns have become workshops, the hayloft is a supply warehouse for the system's 12 schools, and so on.

But it's the elementary school pupils who profit most for the present. The big gray house where Cleveland society once gathered now hears the acoustically softened voices of nine grade school classes and their teachers. In the former music room, a $50,000 pipe organ, still in good working order, accompanies pupils' singing. The children lunch in a former recreation area, while the home of the farm manager, now temporary living quarters for teachers, helps to attract hard-to-come-by instructors.

The school officials, in search of a miracle, found it in this abandoned estate. They are convinced of that now. So are officials of other communities who come to study this success story. THE END

CLOTHES THAT SAVE LIVES

Headlights pick out a dim figure, brakes screech, wheels swerve, and you sit for a moment, heart pounding. Luckily you saw him just in time! Such stories don't always end so well, for darkness, poor visibility, and "nighttime myopia" are largely responsible for more than 170,000 traffic accidents involving pedestrians each year. So that nocturnal pedestrians may be seen from a greater distance, a new yarn called "Flecton" is being woven into a variety of outer garments now on the market. This yarn (adapting the same principle used for making reflecting road signs) has thousands of tiny glass lenses embedded in it. When picked up by headlights, it is clearly visible from distances of 800 to 1,600 feet (thus providing ample time for safe motorist reaction). The garments, which look just like any others in normal light, reflect only to the source of light. Notice, in pictures above, how headlights reflect back from "Flecton" clothed children, whereas children in ordinary clothes are scarcely visible, and are therefore potential accident statistics.

New G-E Revolving Shelves put all foods at your fingertips!

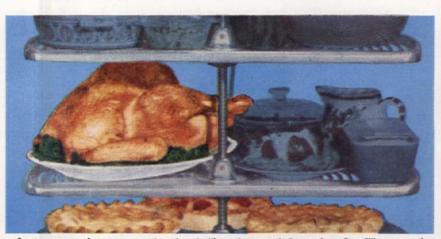

Shelf turns just like a "Lazy Susan." With G-E Revolving Shelves, there are no hard-to-reach corners. A simple turn of the wrist puts all food in full view because the back area turns to the front. For instance, when you want to get at a jar from the rear, you don't have to reach like this. Instead . . .

Simply turn the shelf, and the jar rides to the front, right at your fingertips. You see what you want at first glance. You pick what you want without overturning other foods. And it's so easy to turn the shelf, too. G-E Revolving Shelves turn smoothly and silently, on nylon bearings.

Revolving Shelves are adjustable—up or down! These wonderful, new shelves eliminate the problem of squeezing large items into small space. For instance, when storing a large turkey in your refrigerator, you don't have to remove any of the foods or rearrange the shelves. Instead...

Just press a button, revolve the shelf, and presto! the turkey fits. The space between the shelves can be easily increased or decreased, as you wish. With G-E Revolving Shelves, you simply raise the shelf for larger, bulkier items; lower the shelf for small, flat ones—like pies—without removing any of the foods.

These sturdy shelves give you 15 per cent more shelf room!

In the comparison at right, the red area indicates the extra room gained with

If y friends laughed at me and my Early American imports to Florida." Mrs. Petrow twinkled at us, "but I stuck to my guns, and now feel I've had the last laugh, for I have since decorated a friend's home as well as my husband's office in—guess what?—Early American! I do love the style," she added, showing us the little pine saltbox she totes as a handbag—it has become the symbol and signature of this woman who so successfully transplanted Cape Cod to Florida. Did I say "successfully"? So successfully we almost didn't get in to see it! When we first spotted its barn-red attractiveness (somehow perfectly at home in a setting of subtropical pine) we parked our car and timidly rang the doorbell. Through the partly opened door, the slightly irritated voice of Mrs. Petrow informed us that she was "fed up" with buses stopping so their passengers could gape at this house; "fed up" with saying that the house was not for sale. She didn't want the place

This Little House STOPS Traffic

This house plays a cozy game of give-and-take with tradition. Authentic reproductions are pointed up by antique accessories, some of them heirlooms. But you'll notice that the color scheme, a happy background for the furniture, is far from "authentic" Early American. "Didn't it take courage to upholster that big living room chair in black corduroy?" we asked Mrs. Petrow. "I suppose it did," she smiled, "but with all that mustard and white, black seemed just the right 'pull-together' note." That lamp on the room-divider is typical of the charming way she combines old and new: "I found this old scale, bought a Toby jug coffee and creamer, planted the creamer, and made a black linen shade."

"written up" in a magazine—and besides, her floors had just been varnished! But then she relented, and charmingly invited us in to the house that's even more engaging inside than out: "Early American to me," Mrs. Petrow explained, "has always seemed friendly, and it does not show scratches of little feet (we have three small sons). We really built our home around this Dutch dough box—a reproduction I picked up several years ago. It gave me the idea of furnishing with reproductions, which are sturdier and less expensive than real antiques. Most homes are built—then furnished. But we did it backwards—bought most of our furniture; then built our home."

Along with the reproductions, antique accessories are grace notes wherever you look—the ivy-filled sabots; the crimping irons used as cigarette boxes; the wooden butter bowl and paddle that serve fruit on the CONTINUED ON PAGE 108

ANSWER ON PAGE 98

Why on earth would anybody BUY this?

HERE'S THE REAL REASON:

• In relatively dry Kansas, there is a gem of a little lake a few miles outside Kansas City. Once a summer resort for Kansas Citians, Lake Quivira has attracted a small colony of permanent residents who willingly put up with minor inconveniences of commuting for the joys of living in the country: the fine fishing, the boating and swimming, the feeling of seclusion. The Ashcrafts are typical of more and more American families who are abandoning the tensions of crowded city living for wider open spaces.

Here's the man

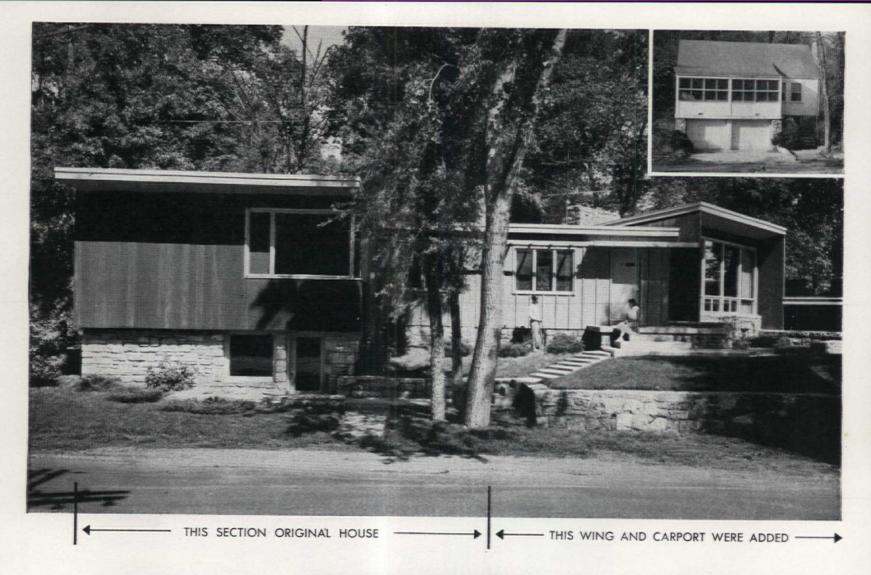

Captain Don Ashcraft is a pilot for Braniff Airlines, Kansas City-Minneapolis run. With more time for his woodworking hobby than the average 9 to 5 job holder, he and his wife spent three years of leisure hours remodeling the fourroom house shown above.

who spotted it from the air, tracked it down to earth, and bought...

Turn the page and see what the Don Ashcrafts did —

hen my wife, Naoma, and I decided that Lake Quivira was the place we wanted to make our home, we found that no lakeshore lots were available in the price range in which we desired to stay, so we finally settled on a lakeshore location which had this rather unattractive four-room house on it. But we felt the house had good expansion possibilities.

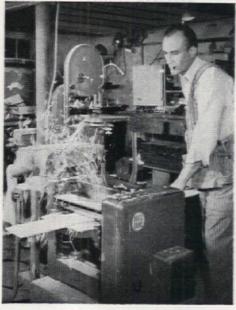

Six months were consumed in planning, designing, and co-ordination of ideas with architect John Granstedt of Kansas City. For the benefit of any who might be contemplating a project of this nature, we strongly urge the services of a competent architect. He can save you money and can put your ideas into a more usable, livable, and resalable home.

On August 15th, 1952, we excavated for the new living-room wing and dining area we wanted to add onto the old house. We contracted for the excavation, foundation, the roughing-in, and the installation of a tar and gravel roof. We felt it advisable to have this much work done, since it was necessary to remove the old roof and enclose the openings made in the old house as fast as possible because of the weather and the time element involved. All other work, inside and out, was done by Naoma and me.

Since this project would require considerable length of time to complete, as we were doing all the work ourselves, we felt, in all fairness to our neighbors and the community, that we should first complete the exterior of the house—including landscaping, retaining walls, steps, walks, and all other related tasks that go into the completion of a house on the outside.

Of the original house, the two bedrooms remain pretty much as they

I made the kitchen cabinets in my basement workshop and installed all of them myself were. They were over to the left of the house as you face it. On the front of the house at the right side was the living room, and behind it the kitchen. Our plans called for turning the living room into our new kitchen, and making a utility room and hall out of the old kitchen space. Then we added the new wing to the right side of the old house.

Perhaps you may have guessed—the kitchen was the first room to be completed. On one end there was a stone fireplace. It was necessary to retain this flue for the furnace, so we removed the old fireplace and made it over into an indoor-kitchen barbecue oven. I built all the cabinets in the basement, and then installed them upstairs.

Our master bedroom has replaced the screened-in porch of the original dwelling. This room has huge corner windows overlooking the lake and is paneled in cherry plywood. In this area we also built our master bath, with ceramic tile on the walls and floor which Naoma laid herself. For the most part, I concentrated on woodworking and heavy stuff while Naoma did the tiling and a great deal of the finishing. She even did the staining of the outside walls of the entire house with very little help from me.

In the new living room, the entire fireplace wall is laid up with Arkansas sandstone. The wall opposite is floor-to-ceiling glass, double glazed, and overlooks the lake. The back wall of the dining room is a large picture window and glass door leading to and overlooking the patio and the wooded hillside behind the house. Separating the living room and dining room is a room divider in which we fitted the television set, speaker, radio, record player, and tape recorder. The ceiling of the living room follows the contour of the shed roof, while the ceiling in

Here is the room divider I built, complete with pivoting television set. It pulls out on tracks, pivots to face the living room (far left) or the patio (immediate left)—or it can swing around and face into the dining room

This is the Arkansas sandstone fireplace wall we laid up ourselves, stone by stone. Naoma put down cork tile on the living room and dining room floors. We're a little shy on living room furniture—that's in future plans the dining area is flat. On both these ceilings we installed acoustical tile to sound-condition the rooms.

All major work is now completed in the house, and our future projects include paneling the two original bedrooms, the complete renovation of the original bathroom, finishing and beautifying the back yard, and remodeling the old basement area into a recreation room. My workshop will move into the basement under the living-room wing. We now have 1,650 square feet of floor space, excluding the carport, which is 528 square feet as compared to the original 768 square feet.

We would like to say here that many, many times, discouragement had a strong hold on one or both of us, but never was defeat admitted. Some ideas along the way had to be discarded as being impractical, but none because they might be difficult to execute as long as they were basically sound. Needless to say, although we are naturally prejudiced, we feel we can be proud of the home we have achieved.

"Plenty of Pennsylvania" is the theme song of Plain and Fancy, the hit Broadway musical that's charmed the whole nation with the hearts and the ways of the Pennsylvania Dutch-who live "plain" but grace their barns and belongings with painted fancies! And plenty of Pennsylvania is what we have in our Pattern Department—a wonderful collection of beloved authentic motifs to bring this gay folk art to you. From our fat files we've 1609 selected half a dozen all-time favorites, and made them into transfer patterns—the easiest of all patterns to use (just iron them onto painted or natural wood-or painted tin-and your "drawing" is complete; all that remains is to fill in the colors as directed). In the sections of that "hex" sign at your right, we show a small sample of each—but every "pattern" is, in itself, a collection of several enchanting motifs. 1018: Two large panels of bird designs, plus two floral spraysperfect for a chest (40¢). 1614: Florals for pair of boxes or other small objects (40¢). 1813: Round motif for trays, three border motifs, two door panels, two drawer motifs (60¢). 1612: Winsome characters arranged in two panels for toy chests, etc. (60¢). 1609: Popular bird and heart—two separate transfers for lamp shades, boxes, etc. (35¢). 1611: Exceptionally fine example of "urn" motif two transfers of large, beautifully detailed urn, plus four motifs for drawers (75¢).

This Plan Is

lired of multi-purpose rooms, cramped closets—and cut corners in general? You're not alone! All over the land there's been a demand for quality houses with plenty of elbow room—while the compact, budget-priced jobs of the early postwar era have become almost a drug on the market. If you're shopping for a middle-sized house (about 2,500 square feet without garage or porches) for a middle-sized family, and if you want the old-fashioned amenities plus a lot of new-fangled ones, our Blueprint House 47 should be the perfect answer. This one was built in Phoenix, Arizona, but it has that All-American look that seems well rooted in any part of the country.

The view directly above shows one of the reasons why we were so taken with this house—the rear facade is as good as the front, a matter of no small importance these days when so much of your time is spent out of doors at the back. Front and rear, the lines are almost identical—the basic rectangle relieved by a projection that shelters the porches; the handsome shake roof that slopes gently down and contrasts in color with the board and batten walls. On the street side, a facing of stone adds further interest, while the brick of the bedroom wing enhances the rear in a similar way—but in both cases, the introduction of masonry is simple and logical—not the superfluous jazzing-up you find in so much architectural trim nowadays.

While this is no penny-pinching structure, it isn't a spendthrift, either. We ask you to note the way bathrooms and fireplaces are backed up for construction economy, and to mark the fact that hallways are all but eliminated while the space they would occupy is more wisely "spent" upon larger rooms and enormous closets. There is wisdom, too, in the location of the den, near the baths so it can serve as a third bedroom.

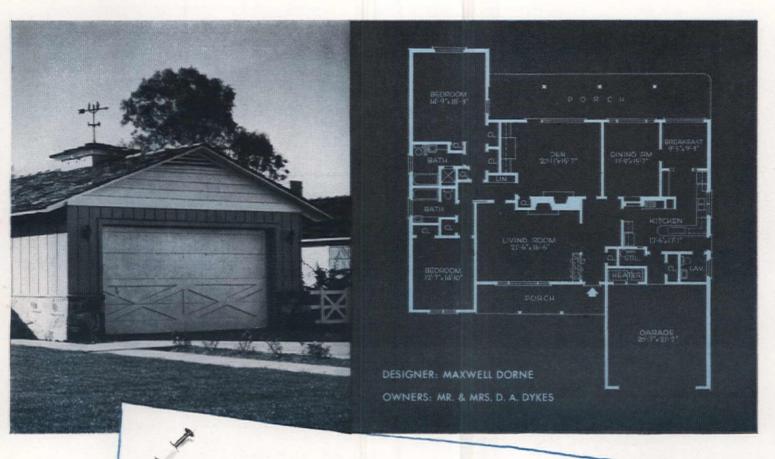

After so many years of the living-dining room, it's a pleasure to present a house with two living rooms, two separate rooms dedicated to the pleasures of dining, plus a roofed-over rear porch where alfresco meals may be served even if the wind shifts.

If all of these remind you of the good old days, the good new ones take over in that super kitchen with its brick barbecue, built-in oven, and modern cooking peninsula. It provides for laundry at one end, and connects with garage, utility room, and its own lavatory.

WHAT TO DO WHEN THE BULLDOZER

CONTRIBUTOR: LOUIS VAN DE BOE

There has been a revolution in garden making which, while it has solved or simplified some problems, has posed or intensified others. Not so long ago, landscaping a home property—that is, removing surplus trees, clearing underbrush, grubbing out stumps, grading, preparing the soil, and planting—was done entirely by manpower using hand tools. Today, skilled labor for such work is unavailable or prohibitively expensive, and home owners are, in the main, unable or unwilling to do things slowly, pioneerwise. But we have the bulldozer which, in a matter of hours, can (and often does) turn wooded hills into treeless plateaus all ready for the erection of houses by builders who, similarly, use all kinds of labor-saving power equipment.

Now unquestionably that saves time, lessens human effort, and cuts costs. But bulldozers, big tractors, and all heavy machines also do undesirable things as far as plants and plant growers are concerned. Too often they are unselective, leaving few if any undamaged trees in their wake; even those that are left are subjected to the injurious effect of sudden exposure to strong winds and sunshine. More serious still, the bulldozer compacts the soil, upsetting normal drainage and moisture relations, and leaving conditions unfavorable for plant growth, especially that of trees, shrubs, and lawn grasses. So, unless you can arrange and take time to have your plot cleared, graded, prepared, and planted by old-fashioned hand methods, your first task, after the bulldozer leaves, on't let the following recommendations scare or discourage you. The program isn't complicated or unduly arduous. It is the application of sound basic principles in the making of a very important element of the home grounds. There is, these days, a tendency (to us an unfortunate one) to stress doing things easily, quickly, without effort, as if that were the main goal. That is not the way to the most successful and rewarding results in the garden. The things you don't work or pay for aren't always—or often—the best, and a good lawn is worth what it takes to make it. But do try to work intelligently and not waste money, time, and energy on wrong practices and poor materials. (Here endeth that lesson.)

Remember, first, that young lawn-grass plants want continuous moisture supplied gently; a deep (several inches) root-run of friable, fertile soil; warmth, but not drying heat, and help in resisting weed invaders—should be to restore the soil conditions that have been disturbed or destroyed, and to make the place again fit for good gardening.

Perhaps there are piles of brush and other rubbish to be burned—with great care, so as not to scorch surrounding foliage. Later, work the ashes into the soil, put aside for future use any good boulders, and have metal, glass, etc. carted away; don't try to bury it, for some day you may want to put a tree or bush in that very spot. (Perhaps you can arrange for the use of an arborist's "chipper," and with it grind the tree branches into valuable coarse material for mulching.)

Piles of topsoil (scraped away from the building site) are left until (1) any necessary rough grading and leveling is done, and (2) the whole area that was packed down by bulldozer or tractor has been well loosened up a foot or so deep with a rotary or othertype tiller or cultivator. Then do the final grading and the spreading of the topsoil with either a small, tractor-powered bucket lift or truck (which should be followed by another tilling), a wheelbarrow (if the job is small enough), or (if you're lucky) a horse-drawn soil scraper and harrow. The objective is to leave a loose, friable bed of good soil six, eight, or more inches deep. Concentrate the best topsoil where you want lawn and flower beds; trees, shrubs, and coarse grass or other ground cover can get along where conditions are less perfect.

At this point, a soil test is helpful, at least one that will show whether or not the application of lime is needed. Unless you own, or want to get, a testing kit, you can find out from your county agricultural extension agent, your state agricultural college, or perhaps a local nursery, how and where to have a sample of your soil tested.

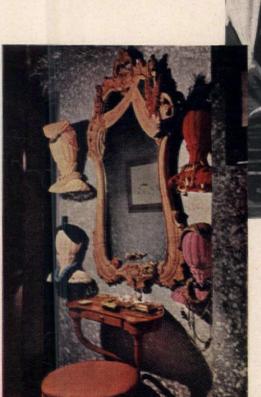

Where you want to plant trees or shrubs (singly or as a continued on page 130 ost issues we take you into the homes of our readers. This month, just for a change, we thought it would be nice to invite you over to our house to show you the home of an editor who practices what she preaches. The lady herself is not only editor, author, designer, and decorator, she is a superlative cook and swings a mean hammer when she does-it-herself at her house in New Hampshire. Her work makes her live in New York much of the time, but she loves to pack her sneakers and fishing hat and hit for Bimini or the Columbia River. From the day's catch, below, a 20-pound golden dolphin now rests in splendor on the wall of her grandson's room.

Here she is,
doing what she likes most...

Here is where she hangs her hat!

HERE IS WHERE SHE LIVES ...

Me Pay a Call on

Rooms which look over the water have a special climate about them, and like the ebb and run of a tide, there are hours when they gather strength and beauty over other hours of the day. The clock will be past eleven when you enter Jean Austin's living room; it will be a Saturday or Sunday, and you have been invited for lunch.

The sun strikes hard and clean through the windows to the east and south, and if it's summer, temper its glare. Or it will be getting on to six of a fall evening and that blue haze which settled the dusk comes into the room and draws you like a magnet toward the terrace. Sixteen floors below, the toward the lights of Brooklyn, the towers of downtown Manhattan, and, far to the right, the well of brooklyn, the towers of downtown Manhattan, and, far to the right, the well of brooklyn, the towers of downtown Manhattan, and, far to the right, the well of brooklyn vistas. As you come again into the room you feel its kinship with the water, the sky, and the attitude of vistas. As you come again into the room you feel its kinship with the water, the sky, and the attitude of turquoise, olive, and gray, reminiscent of an iridescent oil slick on the murky waters. A seel comparison in the city apartment, the room was planned as a sophisticated background for parties.

HERE IS WHERE SHE WORKS AND SLEEPS...

contrast, her house in New Hampshire is stripped of nonessentials, pared down for simple, non-cluttered country living.

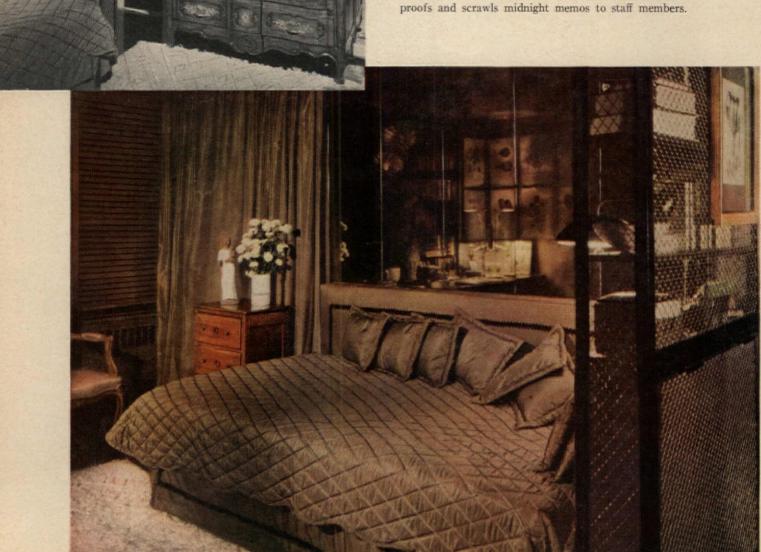

The furnishings—mostly European antiques mixed with some contemporary pieces—have been ruthlessly edited down from the contents of a large house, and each one is choice of its kind. An elaborate marquetry chest in the living room is one of a pair of rare Italian pieces; a breakfront in the dining area is one section from a library in Bath.

White flowers, the Editor's favorites, luminesce unpleasantly in the fierce light which enters the room, so against the subdued backgrounds she places bowls of soft purple, blue, and deep red blossoms. Editor Austin is the first to smile at her own professional perfectionism. Her answer is always to look out to "her" river: "I have my white flowers in the country. So long as I live in New York I will live here, in this place."

Her bedroom (this page, and the cover) is a stronger clue to personal color preferences with its scheme of café-browns, black, and beige—what she refers to as "no-color decorating." In one corner is the long French Provincial library table where she reads magazine galley proofs and scrawls midnight memos to staff members.

Here is where she cooks GOOD VICTUALS

Tere is the sanctum sanctorum of the Austin household: Jean Austin's kitchen. As the most devoted hobbyist regards his work bench, so she regards this compact space, barely eight feet wide, crammed with the personal memorabilia of years of fine cooking—the knife that fits the hand just so, the mixing bowl of just the right heaviness, the cleaver big enough, and weighty enough, to smack the scallopini to the proper thinness, the wooden block for the endless "chop, chop, chop," the marble slab for rolling out the flaky pastry. The clock has not much to do with the kind of cooking you find here—so little of the time is spent on the fire, so much of the time in the preparation. East River residents see the light in this window burn late: as editor of AMERICAN HOME'S "Good Victuals" pages, this is also her experimental laboratory for many of the recipes which she later cooks and photographs in the kitchen at her office. Here she is at work on Chicken Kiev, prepared for this issue: tender young breasts of chicken, split and flattened with a mallet, rolled and stuffed with a savory butter tinged with rosemary, marjoram, garlic, and anchovy paste, fried quickly in deep hot oil. Voilà!

AND UPSTAIRS WHERE IT BELONGS

NEXT TO THE BATH ON THE BEDROOM FLOOR

EVEN IN A ONE-LEVEL HOUSE, IT MAKES RARE GOOD SENSE TO LOCATE THE LAUNDRY IN THE BEDROOM WING WHERE SOILED CLOTHES ORIGINATE

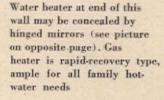

This laundry, we're firmly convinced, is like a volume of Plato in a gift wrap—plenty of food for thought under the initial excitement of its pretty nosegay of colors. In modern-minded homes, the laundry has long since moved from the basement to the kitchen area, and long since teamed up with handsome kitchen cabinets endowed with high laundry I.Q. But we're all for dressing it in pastels and moving it once again: it really belongs where the bedrooms are, and next to a bath for economy in plumbing installation. After all, isn't this where the laundry cycle begins and ends—where most soiled things enter the hamper, where clean things are finally put away? Combining laundry and sewing room makes even more step-saving good sense in this part of the house. To complete this intelligent room that's no larger than the tiniest of bedrooms, we added water heater, linen closets, and a cleaning closet just for the bedroom area. How you'd bless it!

These flour bins make fine hampers. Use one for light things; one for heavy, badly soiled items—and your washer loads are pre-sorted

This counter takes on your planning, cutting, sorting. Clothes bins and sewing machine are below. Gooseneck spotlights supplement soft general ceiling light

All kinds of pin-ups are easy if walls above work areas are perforated hardboard. Here, above washer, Mom's work tools, painted to match room

Teatime Is Back in Style

Taybe it's a swing of the pendulum, a change in our sense of values, or one of those cycles historians and economists talk about-and perhaps it has something to do with the fact that we love our homes, and stay in them, more than we have done for decades and decades. But whatever the forces that have brought the tea party back to us, it's here, and it's cheerful, and charming, and heartwarmingand we hope that it remains for a long time to come! Refer, if you like, to the etiquette books, and observe the abracadabra-"correct" invitations, service, and such; we much prefer friendly, informal teas where 12 is company and 20 is a crowd—cheerful little late-afternoon gettogethers of neighbors and intimates invited by note, or even by telephone. In many suburban neighborhoods, monthly teas (at the home of a different hostess each time) are making for much more closely knit communities. You might like to start the pleasant custom of a monthly tea at your own home, one afternoon when your friends all CONTINUED ON PAGE 96

Vhy make your own sauce

when Campbell's Soups make such good ones!

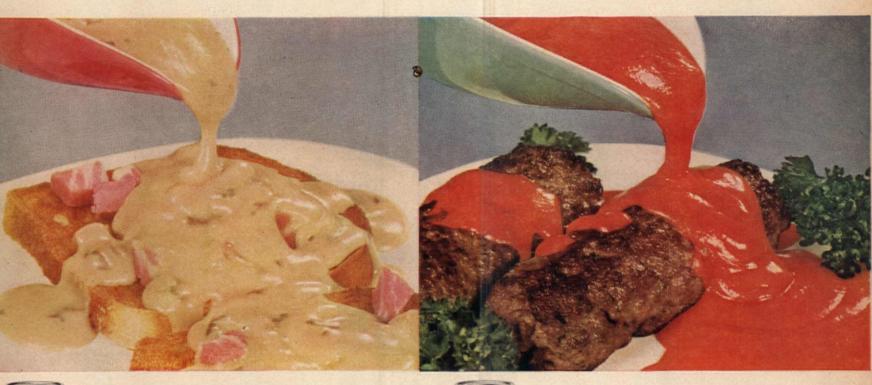

By ANNE MARSHALL

Director Home Economics, Campbell Soup Company

Why make a cream sauce when Campbell's Soups make four — Cream of Mushroom, Cream of Celery, Cream of Chicken, Cream of Asparagus? Why make a tomato sauce when Campbell's has one for you — already perfectly seasoned, perfectly blended?

Cream sauces can be this easy: Just open one of these cans of Campbell's Soup and follow directions on the label! Why not find out how much fun it is to cook with sauces when Campbell's makes them for you! You'll never go back to the slow way of making a cream or tomato sauce again.

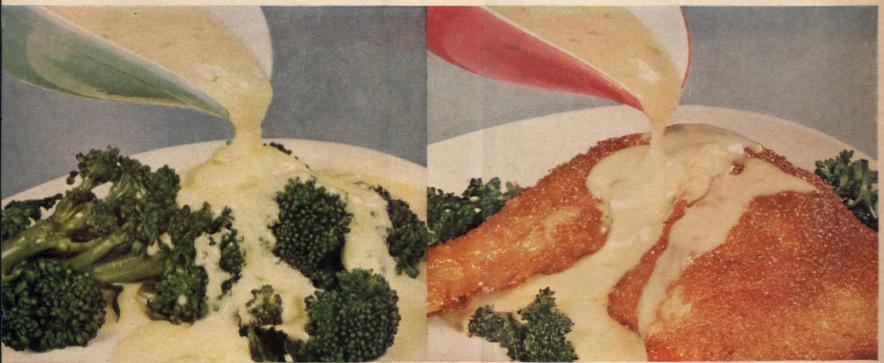

brunch — an open sandwich crowned with cubes of ham and mushroom sauce. And such an easy sauce to make! Just open a can of Campbell's Cream of Mushroom Soup — and blend with ½ cup of milk — it's delicious!

TOMATO SAUCE. Delicious flavoring for meat loaf, hamburgers, meat balls — Campbell's Tomato Soup used as a sauce. So perfectly seasoned, you just pour it on as it comes from the can! And what a tempting sauce to make quick and easy spaghetti and macaroni casseroles!

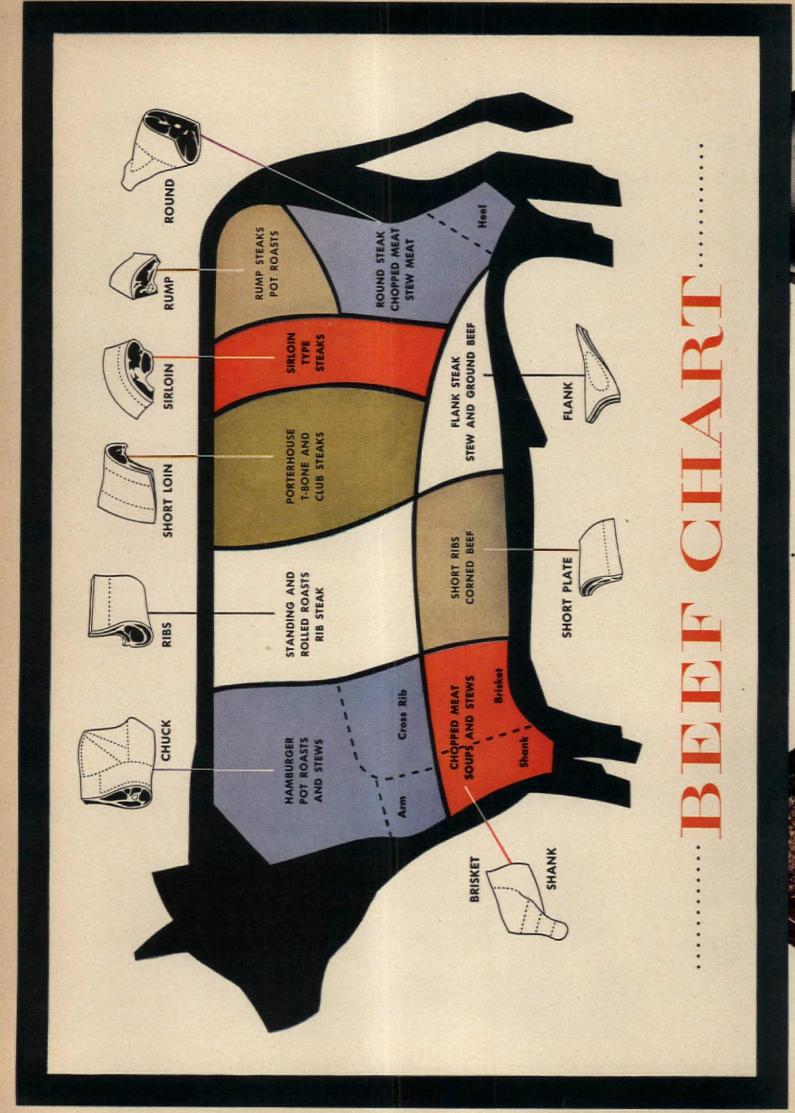

cream of celery sauce. Makes vegetables taste twice as good! Carrots, broccoli, string beans take on new sparkle when you add Campbell's Cream of Celery Soup. Just blend the soup with about ½ cup of milk—and there's your sauce! It's extra-good, too, as a sauce for fish!

CREAM OF CHICKEN SAUCE. Here's a popular favorite — Southern-fried chicken topped with the deep-down goodness of Campbell's Cream of Chicken Soup (½ cup of milk is all you add). And try this sauce as a gravy for chicken croquettes, biscuits or fluffy rice!

5 easy ways to vary Apple Pie-

"GIVE APPLE PIE YOUR PERSONAL TOUCH! Follow my favorite 'Kitchen-tested' Apple Pie recipe.* Then create a new taste and a new look with any of these 5 simple touches!"

INTRODUCE FRENCH APPLE

Instead of a top crust for the pie on top of this page, sprinkle on a crumb topping (1 cup Gold Medal Flour, ½ cup butter, ½ cup brown sugar). Serve warm with ice cream for even more compliments.

MAKE IT MEXICAN

Apple pies are never out of season with variations like this! The news here is ½ cup red hots, cinnamon candies, added to the apples for zest and color. What an easy way to be "different."

CREATE A CARAMEL APPLE PIE

I've a hunch this will be a favorite with your menfolks! Use all brown sugar and slice 1/4 cup firm butter over apples before covering with top crust. Gold Medal crusts are flaky and tender-always delicious.

TOP IT WITH A NUT CRUST

Two welcome surprises in this pie! Add 1/4 cup finely chopped nuts to your easy-to-handle Gold Medal pastry. To filling add ½ cup seedless raisins, 1 tbsp. molasses. A superb combination.

TRY ARKANSAS APPLE PIE

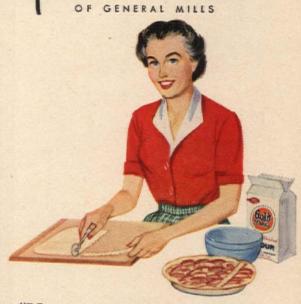

The bubbly pink beauty on the opposite page tastes as good as it looks! Cook until tender 9 cups sliced red apples (skins on) in syrup of ½ cup water, 1½ cups sugar, 1 tbsp. lemon juice. Drain and pile apples in pastry-lined pan.

Dot with butter. Top with lattice crust. Bake 30 to 35 min. at 425°. Cook syrup until thick and pour over hot baked pie.

* Use basic Apple Pie recipe with Gold Medal Flour, in Betty Crocker Picture Cook Book or write Betty Crocker, General Mills, Inc., Minneapolis 1, Minnesota.

Bake it Better with GOLD

You'll find it's wonderfully simple and oh-sorewarding to create new interest in apple pie... give

Grandma's Pantry-NEW STYLE

The 7-day pantry the Civil Defense Administration asks you to set up has a grimmer, and more urgent, purpose than Grandma's "Emergency Shelf"—it can save your family's lives in case of atomic attack

If you were far enough away from an atomic explosion to know that it had happened, you still might be cut off from food supply outside of your own home for a week, and your freezer and refrigerator would probably stop running.

How-and what-would your family eat?

This was one of the questions the Federal Civil Defense Administration hoped to answer through Operation Cue, that famous test at Yucca Flats last spring. All kinds of foods in all kinds of packages were exposed to the blast at various distances, and the lessons that were learned will have a direct effect upon products appearing in your markets.

But what we do now know, for sure, is that most of the canned and packaged foods in the basement shelter of that two-story brick house 4,700 feet from the explosion did survive in usable form—despite the fact that the house (except for the shelter!) was demolished.

For your own shelter, the FCDA suggests a seven-day supply of foods selected from the list below. Keep your family's preferences in mind—but remember that this is no picnic. Lasting qualities, and "filling" qualities, are more important than a well balanced diet in an emergency.

The canned goods should be of a type that is good for a year's storage at all temperatures above freezing (and should be rotated once a year). The rest should require rotation no oftener than every three months.

Small containers, such as #2 cans, are recommended unless your family is large, for the food, once opened, should be consumed within two meals.

WATER: One gallon for every member of the family for the seven-day period, plus one extra gallon for infants still on formula.

CANNED JUICES: Orange, grapefruit, tomato, lemon.

BEVERAGES: Powdered tea, coffee, chocolate, syrup.

canned fruits: Grapefruit sections, peaches, pears, fruit cocktail, pineapple, plums, cherries.

CANNED VEGETABLES: Tomatoes, corn, asparagus, green beans, peas, potato sticks, baked beans, spaghetti with tomato sauce.

CANNED SOUPS: Tomato, mushroom, cream of chicken, bean, vegetable.

CANNED MEATS AND FISH: Corned beef, beef and gravy, beef stew, chicken, ham, luncheon meats, tuna, salmon.

DAIRY PRODUCTS: Evaporated or dried skim milk, canned cream, cheese in a jar or sealed package.

INFANTS' FOOD: Assorted strained fruit, meat and vegetables, soups, boxed baby cereals.

CEREALS AND BREAD: Canned date and nut bread, canned brown bread, packaged cereals with wax sealer in or out of box, crackers in tins.

OTHER FOODS: Pickles in glass, cookies in vacuum-packed tins, catsup or chili sauce, sugar, salt, pepper, vinegar, mayonnaise or salad dressing, molasses.

MISCELLANEOUS: Safety matches, hand soap, canned heat, pans (1 skillet, 4 sauce), candles, can opener, paper plates, paper cups, paper spoons, aluminum foil.

CANISTERS ALL THROUGH THE HOUSE

See "Where Credit Is Due," page 133

Vanisters didn't always belong in the kitchen-antique tea caddies, for example, were often as beautiful as jewel boxes, and just as proudly displayed. For a while, canisters went Plain-Jane-or cute-but the new ones are now decorative enough to store all manner of oddments in any room. Some still come in sets; others may be bought individually. But whether they are so beautiful that they rival cloisonné (#3), or so scientific that they act as "crispers," removing moisture from the things stored in them (#2), there's very good news in new canisters.

IN THE KITCHEN, of course, use canisters for the old standbys, but don't overlook their talent for keeping things dry (cornstarch, cereals, crackers), or soft and moist (prunes).

THEY CLEAR THE DECKS IN JUNIOR'S ROOM, holding pebble collections, crayons, or the parts of jigsaw puzzles.

THEY'RE AT HOME IN THE BATH, holding soap flakes, cotton puffs, bath salts, water conditioner.

IN LAUNDRIES, they're beautiful and useful, providing dry storage for soap, detergents, starch, water conditioner.

IN DAD'S SHOP, they provide safe storage for oily rags, for nails and bolts, and for tiny parts Dad won't throw away.

On a buffet table, these talented lovelies would be much at home, for their attractive decorations (herb sprays silhouetted against white) have a worldly air. Yet the enamel canisters are sturdy enough to cook in!

Hand-painted roosters may crow about their good looks-but the traditional labels have been omitted from these canisters to encourage you to use them for many things besides the usual tea, sugar, and flour. Try corn meal, dried beans, bread crumbs, cookies, potato chipsanything on the agenda for airtight storage

Is YOUR AFTERNOON TEA TO BE A SIMPLE AFFAIR? Then here are some dainties to serve: Fig or orange bread spread with cream cheese, garnished with chopped nuts for crunch appeal . . . Small rounds of buttered bread topped with large slices of pared cucumber and decorated with a dab of mayonnaise . . . English muffins . . . Scotch scones . . . will put on fancy dress—no great trick at all, really, for if you can wield a bread knife or maneuver a rolling pin, you can make elegant little eye tempters that are taste gratifiers as well. Try your hand at checkerboard, ribbon, and pinwheel sandwiches—or one of these two fancies that are quickly produced. Jam Inlays: Cut rounds of white bread with a 2" cookie cutter. Spread with any red jam or jelly. Cut smaller rounds with a smaller cutter. Top each large round with a small one. Layer-cake sandwiches: Cut square loaf of date and nut bread into ½" slices. Spread two slices liberally with cream cheese. Layer them, and top with a third slice. Trim crusts. Wrap in wax paper and refrigerate. When chilled, cut in triangles and stand on end to serve. (You may find it easier to spread each slice before you cut it from the loaf.)

HERE'S THE INSIDE STORY for tea sandwiches of any shape

. . . CHEESE BUTTER made with grated cheddar cheese, dry mustard, dash of Worcestershire sauce . . . SHRIMP BUTTER made of finely minced shrimp, a grating of nutmeg, a few drops of lemon . . . FISH FANCY made of chopped crab meat, salmon or any other seafood mixed with mayonnaise and sharp seasonings
. . . Or how about good old peanut butter (the "hunk" type)?

Orange is especially good used one of these ways: FRUIT AND NUT TRIANGLES—Peel and remove pulp from 2 small oranges; add 3/4 cup pitted chopped dried prunes; 1/4 cup chopped walnuts. Mix with small amount of mayonnaise. Spread on slice of bread, and cut into triangles. Garnish each with a walnut half. ORANGE TOAST—Toast rounds of bread on one side. Mix equal parts brown sugar and butter with grated orange rind and a few drops orange juice. Spread on untoasted sides of rounds. Place slice of orange cut crosswise atop bread and trim off overlapping edges. Place pinch of brown sugar top center of orange. Just before serving, run under broiler until sugar melts. Serve hot.

Why not use S.O.S?

The easy way to clean stubborn spots

Yes, the same S.O.S. that cleans your pots and pans makes an amazingly quick, efficient spotcleaner for linoleum, asphalt tile, rubber tile, vinyl and hardwood floors. Here's all you do:

- 1. Wet an S.O.S. pad and squeeze up the soap that "cushions" the cleaning action.
- 2. Buff spot gently with a circular motion. As the soap loosens and lifts the soil, the fibers rub it off.
- 3. Wipe spot dry. Re-wax where necessary. If soil has broken seal on hardwood, re-seal floor also.

Use S.O.S to clean away heel marks, scuffs, black marks caused by furniture and other hard-to-remove spots

Suddenly you see cooking in a totally new light

Never before have you seen a range like the magnificent Tappan Greenbrier. You look, and here at last you see something completely new and exciting and beautiful in range design. And with it all, the incomparable cooking convenience that only America's master range builders can give you.

You appreciate the clean break with tradition that moves all four burners to the back, gives you all that wonderful work space up front. You find this is the one range that cooks delicious meals automatically . . . as delicious as hours of rangewatching could achieve. There's the magic, too, of a broiler that adjusts to any position at a touch.

But there's much more . . . so much, you must see the Tappan Greenbrier to believe it. And there's this, too. Only the Tappan Greenbrier can give you the satisfaction of having the finest range money can buy. The Tappan Stove Company, Dept. AH-95, Mansfield, Ohio. Also, Canadian Tappan Stove, Ltd., Montreal.

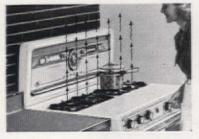

THE TAPPAN GREENBRIER

So sensible, it's sensational!
The beautiful all-new range-top of the

TAPPAN GREENBRIER GAS RANGE

At last here are burners right where you want them—side by side at the back of the range. The Greenbrier's Four-in-Line Burners permit step-saving food preparation right at the range—and "assembly line" serving as you move dinner plates along in front of the utensils.

You stay fresh, clean and cool when you cook on the Tappan Greenbrier. Heated air and cooking odors rise away from you, to the rear of the range.

You can really see what's cooking. Every burner is directly under an elevated full-width fluorescent light which sheds bright light directly into every utensil.

You and the children stay safe. There's no reaching over burners, no danger of tipping pots and pans, no chance for kiddies to touch or spill hot utensils.

Just think... the whole top lifts up in a jiffy. The entire top surface is hinged at back, lifts up with ease, makes it so simple to get your Greenbrier really clean.

and look... There are easy terms to make this finest range easy to own. See the Tappan Greenbrier at your store soon.

THE RIGHT WAY TO STORE SMOKED MEATS

Are you up on the fine points of storing smoked and cured meats? Do you know, for instance, how long it is safe to keep hams, picnics, and bacon in your refrigerator or in your freezer? Remember that the smoked hams and picnics which we buy today can't be handled like those old-fashioned heavily cured kinds that we used to refer to as "country ham." Smoked meat products, especially ham and tongue, should be consumed no later than a week to ten days after they have been purchased, and any leftovers should be stored in the refrigerator for a very short time.

Now that school days are upon us, we'll soon be buying a variety of smoked cold cuts for tasty lunchbox sandwiches. These will dry out quickly unless completely covered before storing, but if they are well wrapped, cold cuts can be kept in the refrigerator for at least a week.

Because of the salt content of smoked and cured meats, the flavor of these cuts deteriorates rapidly when frozen. For this reason, we recommend that large cuts, such as ham and shoulder pork, be stored in a freezer for limited periods (two months at the most), and that sliced bacon should never be frozen, but refrigerated and used up within a week of purchase. "Hunting." by Claggett Wilson

YOU WON'T HAVE TO GO "HUNTING" to find all kinds of convenient and good new products on the grocery shelves ... everything imaginable, it would seem, is there aplenty to inspire our imagination and speed up the wheels of food preparation. So many, and such a variety, have popped out of the blue during the summer months that it won't be possible to cover all ... But do our best...we shall. New and easier-tohandle packaging, plus new sizes inspired by consumer desires are there, too.

FROZEN BARBECUE BEEF GRILL STEAKS come your way with barbecue sauce included. Good flavor...save time as quickies for a late brunch, snacks, or supper. Be sure to follow package directions.

HICKORY SMOKE FLAVOR applied to meats is easy to achieve these days right in your own kitchen ... a far cry from the days of our grandparents! Packed in a handy shaker-top bottle is a new sauce that gives meat hickory-smoke flavor. It was news to me to be told that this sweet smoke flavor was passed along to us by the American Indians who learned about it quite by accident: the side of the meat hanging closer to the campfire had a more appealing flavor. So...down through the generations it came, until now we have it bottled in liquid form. You'll want to try this.

LOW-CALORIE CAKE MIXES for those a-counting their calories are next on the docket-golden and chocolate cakes along with ingredients for a low-calorie, sevenminute-type frosting. (The frosting doesn't need cooking.) Again, follow package directions.

NEW PACKAGING OF ENRICHED BISCUITS AND CINNAMON ROLLS which come in containers simplifies the procedure for opening the containers-no sharp knife or other utensil is needed.

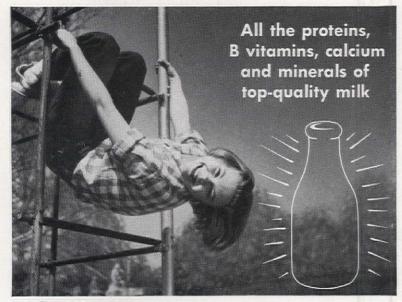

At our finger tips, too, is a QUICK-AS-A-WINK ICE BOX PIE MIX complete with filling and mix for a graham-cracker crust. Fluffy chiffon fillings in three flavors-CHOCOLATE, LEMON, and BUTTERSCOTCH. These are delicious and handsome, and they sparkle any meal. If you want to fancy 'em, garnish with chopped walnuts or coconut. See "Where Credit Is Due," page 133

WHERE IS "WASH DAY"?

Is your laundry plan as up-to-date as your equipment? Those wonderful automatics can save you even more work if they are conveniently located and arranged. Here's some advice

On page 60 we showed you how a modern laundry can be made pretty as a bedroom, and sensibly located near your bedrooms and baths. A radical idea, but a logical one, for since automatic washers and dryers have all but banished "wash day" as such, it's smart to do your laundry right at its source.

But, of course, there are plenty of other good places for a laundry, both conventional and unconventional.

UTILITY ROOM—Often near the kitchen, but could be near bedrooms in a one-level house. Laundry may share honors with a modern heating plant as well as water heater, but it is well away from other household activities—often an advantage. Locate it near plumbing facilities.

KITCHEN—A good place, since you can keep an eye on the range and the washer simultaneously. Plumbing and venting are usually convenient. Try separating kitchen from laundry by peninsula or divider.

CARACE-Satisfactory if it is heated, or in a mild climate.

BATHROOM—A fairly new idea, and a sensible one, whether bath is near bedrooms, or a downstairs "powder room."

BEDROOM AREA—If not in a separate laundry-linen-sewing room, perhaps in a bedroom hall, or an oversized closet.

BASEMENT—The least convenient location. If you must have it here, try to provide a chute for soiled items.

PLAN IT IN AREAS.

Wherever your laundry is, plan it in terms of work centers, as good kitchens are planned. Here are ideal ones:

- 1. Storage and sorting center with ample hampers or bins where soiled washables can be kept.
- 2. Washing center, including clothes washer and sink, with counter space nearby for the pretreating of unusually soiled items. In a cabinet over the washer, keep all your washing supplies: soaps, detergents, stain remover, water softener, bleach, starch, bluing, measuring cups and spoons, sprinkler.

- 3. Drying center—next to the washer, so there are no wasted steps. Handy to the dryer have a basket, bag, or cupboard in which to store dry garments until they are ironed.
- 4. Ironing center—where your automatic ironer or adjustable ironing board is located. There should be a countertop for ironed flat work, plus a place to hang dresses, etc. If you're an up-to-date "washerwoman," you do your ironing seated—at a posture chair. This center should also include storage for irons, for iron-on mending tape, cellulose sponges.

MAKE SURE THAT YOUR LAUNDRY HAS THESE:

- · Adequate plumbing connections
- · Adequate wiring
- · Plenty of hot water
- · Venting if necessary
- · Good ventilation
- · Flooring that is easy to clean and doesn't mind moisture
- Lighting that's ample, and so placed that light won't "bounce off" highly glossed white appliances

HERE ARE GOOD "EXTRAS":

- · Mending area for minor repairs—or a real sewing center
- Bulletin board for pin-up instructions of all sorts
- · Cleaning closet and linen closet if laundry's near bedrooms
- · A cupboard for things that are waiting to be ironed
- A telephone outlet for use on laundering days (Never answer it without drying your hands)
- · Radio
- · Play area for young fry on rainy days

It our house, do-it-yourself is in full swing," writes Mrs. Millard D. Burris, of Caldwell, N.J., "and I think my husband deserves an Honorable Mention or something for the grand idea he worked out for storing my small appliances. There's nothing a housewife hates more than to drag these things out from a cabinet—those you use the most, you want right where you can get at them!" To this, we all say: "Amen"—and hope that Mr. Burris' bright solution, shown above, will inspire other ambitious husbands. Between base and wall cabinets, compartments were built for the toaster, the chopper, the meat slicer, etc. Fronts drop down to serve as platforms for appliances in use, and, since the fronts are slanted, Mrs. B. still has plenty of counter work space when the compartments are closed.

But she did it the hard way—her hand methods and line drying took nearly forever! However, your modern washer and automatic dryer can do even better by your blankets in very short order, if you follow our instructions—you can't just toss a blanket into the washer and proceed as usual, for blankets do require this special technique.

The rules we give apply to wool, wool blends, or such synthetics as Dynel, Acrilan, nylon and Orlon. Cotton blankets are washed and dried much as other heavy cottons are, and for them, follow laundry-appliance instructions or those on blanket label.

- Follow manufacturer's instructions for your own washer and dryer—also note washing instructions that came with blanket.
- Measure blanket before washing, just as you would measure a good sweater, to compare size before and after laundering.
- Pretreat particularly soiled areas (especially bindings). For this, hand-brush areas with a solution of one teaspoon soap or detergent to one cup of warm water.
- Use water that is only as hot as your hands can stand.
- If your water is hard, soften it by adding packaged water conditioner to both the wash water and the rinse.
- Avoid agitation and washing action of machine, and wash blankets in machine for only a short period of time. (Contrary to common belief, shrinkage is caused by excessive washing action and agitation rather than by hot water).

IN YOUR AUTOMATIC WASHER

- 1. Turn temperature dial to "warm" setting.
- 2. Let machine fill with water.
- 3. Add soap or detergent and water softener (if necessary) best suited to your kind of water and your machine. Dissolve soap or detergent by operating automatic washer for a few minutes.
- 4. When soap or detergent is completely dissolved, place blanket (wash only one at a time) in machine, being sure it is immersed in water. Let blanket soak for 10 to 12 minutes. Do not operate the washer during soaking.
- 5. At the end of this soaking period, advance dial to setting that drains out soiled water.
- 6. Let machine run through first rinse period until it is filled with warm water. Then stop the machine. Let blanket soak for another four to five minutes.
 - 7. Advance the dial to "drain" once more and proceed as in #6.
- 8. Allow machine to run through the last spin cycle to extract water from blanket.

IN CONVENTIONAL WASHERS

- 1. Fill washer with warm water.
- 2. Add soap or detergent (plus water softener if necessary). Dissolve by operating machine for a few minutes.
- 3. Place blanket in washer (wash only one at a time) and let it soak, without operating washer, for 10 to 12 minutes.
- 4. Fill both washtubs with warm water; add softener if your water is hard. Release the wringer tension; fold blanket and put CONTINUED ON PAGE 96

- 5. Let blanket soak four or five minutes. Again, fold carefully and put it through the released wringer into the second tub of warm water.
- 6. After the blanket has been in the second rinse 4 or 5 minutes, work easily with the blanket and put it through the released wringer into a towel-lined laundry basket.

DRY BLANKETS AUTOMATICALLY

- 1. Place about half a dozen large towels in dryer—they will help cushion the tumbling action and reduce matting of the wool.
- 2. Preheat dryer on high heat. (Surprised at this? At a higher temperature, blankets dry so much faster . . . and in automatic drying, just as in washing action, it is the movement of the dryer cylinder that tends to cause matting.)
- 3. When dryer is preheated, place blanket in dryer among towels, and dry for from 8 to 12 minutes (light, small blankets require only the minimum time; the heaviest woolen blankets will need the longer period.
- 4. Remove from dryer while still slightly damp. Don't overdry!
- 5. As soon as the blanket is removed from the dryer, it must be stretched. If possible, get a helper. While your helper holds the binding at one end, you grasp the binding at the other. When you both have a good grip—PULL! Then fold lengthwise down the middle and let the sides hang free. Measure. If more stretching is required, do it now.
- 6. Hang the blanket evenly across two lines or on two bars of a drying rack. Permit the blanket to air dry thoroughly in the shade or indoors.
- 7. Brush the blanket vigorously with a stiff brush. Use a circular motion to fluff up the nap.
 - 8. Press binding with a steam iron.

Looks, Feels, Tastes Better!

Water from a faucet with a Spring-Flo Aerator

Feel how the stream from a Spring-Flo equipped faucet is cushioned by millions of tiny air bubbles. Clings, spreads, can't splash! See the bubbles vanish, carrying away most clouding gases, off-tastes, odors. Result: water that's crystal-spring clear —tastes the way pure water should!

BETTER WASHING, RINSING, TOO!

The bubbly stream makes billows of suds. Quickly dissolves, mixes soap and detergent so they wash better. Its higher velocity flow without splash means all the faucet's water works to wash and rinse.

Leading faucets are Spring-Flo equipped. Ask your plumber.

Teatime Is Back

know they'll find you "at home." And consider, if you never have before, what a charming way a tea party can be to introduce an out-of-town guest, a new daughter-in-law, or a new neighbor—or to gather together women you're fond of (your mother's friends, or your daughter's, perhaps) but just haven't seen for ages.

So let's get down to cases.

Deputy hostesses: If you've invited 12 people or more, it's simplest to use your dining room table as a base of operations, and to designate a deputy hostess or two in advance to help you with "pouring." Your deputy can be stationed at your side to add lemon, sugar, or cream to each cup; or she may be seated at the opposite end of the table to serve punch, coffee, or chocolate if you're serving them. too. (Don't forget to provide chairs for your deputies and yourself, at the table.) Your deputy can relieve you entirely if you wish to greet your guests at the door, or she may, if you wish, circulate among the other guests passing "seconds" of sandwiches and cakes.

The three rigid rules: Even for the most informal of tea parties they are:

(1) Your table must be as pretty as you can possibly make it. (2) The tea must be freshly made, piping hot, and poured individually for each guest so that it's strong or weak as she likes it.

(3) The food, whatever its quantity, must be dainty in itself, daintily served, and the very best of its type.

(See Come to Tea, page 74.)

Setting the table: If you're endowed with lace or hand-embroidered cloths, a great silver tea service, and plenty of paper-thin china, use them, by all means—and always use your very best flatware. But, as our budget-priced appointments on page 62 make clear, you don't need expensive appointments for even a formal tea. All that you need is real graciousness. Candlelight is fine if you can provide it—but fresh flowers, or a pretty ornament do well without it.

Vour cloth may be the traditional white, or prettily colored. Napkins, small ones, may be stacked, layer-cake fashion between each plate—or arranged off by themselves, as we show

Your china whatever its quality, should be dainty in design. Cups and saucers plus dessert plates for the food are traditional—and still in "good form"—but at a "stand up" party, a plate plus a saucer does demand juggling talents of your guests. A great improvement, and one most considerate, is the cup-and-plate set, the plate dessert size with an indentation for a cup at one side. But without investing in such special equipment, you can accomplish the same gracious end by improvising with your own cups and dessert plates, as we did.

when we set the table on page 62. Here's how:

Use the Paraffin Trick! If your cups have pedestal bases, and if they are china rather than pottery, dip them in paraffin in advance, and let the paraffin harden. Eliminate the saucer in serving, and set the cup near the rim of a dessert plate. The paraffin forms a sort of suction cup; it keeps the cup from sliding around on the plate, but doesn't inhibit the lifting.

Your tea service, on the biggest attractive tray that you own, is usually set at one end of the table. Upon it, arrange a pot for the essence, a container for water with candle or other device to keep it bubbling; sugar; cream; thinly sliced lemon. If you don't use an essence, you'll also need a few props we don't illustrate-a tea caddie, a strainer, and a slop bowl.

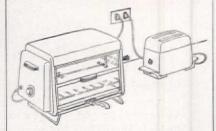

Your punch bowl, or other "secondchoice" beverage, goes, with its own complete service, at the opposite end of the table.

The arrangement of china, napkins, spoons, and so forth depends not upon set rules, but upon the shape and size of your table, the amount of space for circulation around it, and the number of your guests. Have a mental "dress rehearsal" in advance, reviewing in your mind the motions that you and your guests will go through when six or more of them line up as you pour.

On our tea table, for example, you'll notice how the cups are stacked, handles pointing right. As guests stand at the hostess' left, she places each cup, handle out, at the edge of a plate before pouring. This arrangement, which saves motions for the hostess, is also considerate of the guest, who receives a plate arranged to welcome an assortment of goodies.

If it will be more convenient for you to slip a spoon onto each plate as you pour, keep the spoons on the tray. If it's easier to have your guests help themselves to their spoons on their way to the cake dish, then line the spoons up there. This applies to the napkins, or even the sugar, cream, and lemon-for it isn't the form, but the grace and the ease and the fun that make a tea party successful. THE END

Test Your Taste!

By itself, each item on page 46 is in good taste—it's in combining them that your taste is tested. A good room's ingredients room's ingredients must be compatible in color, scale, pattern, and a hard-to-define, but important, thing-"character." The point of departure here is the furniture-a beautifully simple contemporary design rooted in Early American, and pruned down by good modern ideas. Many different good rooms might be built around it, but we clue your final selections by showing one wallpaper only-this one chosen because its off-white ground flatters wood, because its colors key a provocative scheme, and because its pattern has interesting variety but is neither "busy" nor "heavy" when it is used over a large area. This pattern, naturally, establishes the amount, and the scale, of other patterns you can use in the room.

Did you choose that handsome floral fabric? Sorry-not with that wallpaper (though the modern coloring of its traditional motif makes it a good fabric to use with our furniture under other conditions). Did you decide upon stripes alone at the windows? Sorry. Wrong again. Even a small-scale stripe can overpower if used alone in quantity-so we reined it in a bit with matching solid. Did you elect that same solid for the bedspread? Not bad. But score yourself higher if you chose the multicolor-it's quieter and cooler than that particular solid tone. If you picked the leaf-patterned carpet, you were correct about color. But the pattern is too large in this room, and the vari-toned textured rug is a wiser choice. The figurine lamp, lovely with pastels and delicate furniture, is out of character and out of scale here. Measured by all our yardsticks of taste the larger, simpler lamp fits the room.

THEY TURNED THEIR

HOUSE AROUND

WITHOUT MOVING IT AT ALL

AND GAINED AN EXTRA ROOM

In easy sort of about-face is illustrated by the home of the George Auerbachs of Easton, Pennsylvania. Their street facade never pleased them, and the old front porch served no very good purpose—so they transformed that porch into a multiuse room and turned their old side door into a main entry. To focus attention upon the prettied-up side, there's new planting and a succession of blooms. "They definitely catch the eye, and passers-by always comment on their attractiveness," Mrs. Auerbach observes.

The sunny new family room gives them more pleasure than any room in the house. One side is fixed up as a home office. Two sides are furnished with old studio couches, treated to foam-rubber mattresses, newly slipcovered, and so placed that the Auerbachs can watch their television "lying down instead of sitting up, and it's so relaxing!" Because there's an adjoining bath, the couches make this a guest room and a step-saving emergency bedroom when a member of the family is ill.

another, and the Kirkpatrick presentation of 60 of the sonatas, including 31 of those played by Mr. Valenti, is not exactly in competition, since the 60 comprise a kind of chronological progression and the Valenti 84 are in haphazard order, while the Kirkpatrick instrument is a good deal less insistent in its brilliance. In general, the Valenti playing impresses by a dazzling virtuosity and the Kirkpatrick by a judicious variety of expression. The recording of both is excellent, understood that volume will be maintained at a low point in reproduction. If 60 sonatas suffice, the Kirkpatrick edition has more logic and convenience in its method and order of presentation than any 60 (five discs) chosen from the Valenti.

MIXED BLESSINGS

The mild fun of The Secret of Suzanne does not realize the promise of its sparkling overture, and one is a little uncomfortable at the clever mingling of reminiscences of Mascagni and Wagner with a feeling of Mozart. But there are delectable minutes, provided mainly in this first LP version by the lithe animation of the orchestra, the baritone being inclined to overwork his part, while the soprano is acid. There is clean reproduction of the players, but too much microphone for the singers.

RECOMMENDATIONS AND WARNINGS

Addicts of brilliantly effective registration will admire Columbia ML-4966, containing Borodin's splendid Second Symphony and Tchaikovsky's workmanlike and rather dogged Suite No. 1, in virile, impatient performances by the New York Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra conducted by Dimitri Mitropoulos, wherein everything is clear and big (the woodwinds a little too big) and cheerfully outward. Addicts of a glossier realism in reproduction will not mind the frail substance of the music on RCA Victor LM-1871 (Chopin's Piano Concerto No. 2 and Saint-Saëns' Piano Concerto No. 4) in the compelling pianism of Alexander Brailowsky and the luxuriant collaboration of the Boston Symphony Orchestra conducted by Charles Munch. This translucent and trouble free sound has rarely been equalled in concertos, and the only regret will be that a more significant pair did not receive the attention of the musicians and engineers. Admirers of Dr. Hermann Scherchen will be disappointed with his leadership of Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, hurried in the finale, standard elsewhere; and not exalted by the same conductor's Fourth Symphony by the same Beethoven (both these by the Philharmonic Symphony Orchestra of London, on Westminster WL-5406), a good performance, but not good enough for those who expect nothing but revelations from Dr. Scherchen. In spite of estimable sonics, neither symphony in these versions will challenge seriously the best editions of the works that have been previously issued. THE END

THE FIRE AND ICE TEST!

... Proving that sudden changes in water temperature cannot damage the lining of your Rheemglas Water Heater

Got the picture? Boiling water . . . ice water . . . and a piece of Rheemglas-covered steel — a section of the tank from one of Rheem's new glass-lined water heaters.

When you put these three together, you find out what happens when cold water hits hot Rheemglas—and if that doesn't sound too important, remember that each time you draw hot water, cold water rushes into your heater. If the sudden cold cracked the lining, you'd eventually have a leaky heater—and bills to pay. So let's try the test.

First, we thrust the Rheemglas into the boiling water. We hold it there, and let it get good and hot. Then – we plunge it into the ice . . . Phzzz!!!

Now. What happened to the Rheemglas? Nothing. Absolutely nothing! Proving that a sudden temperature drop (twice the normal drop which occurs in your water heater) does absolutely nothing to the lining of a Rheemglas Water Heater! Here, at last, is a glass lining tough enough to withstand sudden changes in water temperatures — because it's made with the new Rheem frit... the extra-tough lining ingredient developed to resist the wearing action of harsh water chemicals. Naturally, it's also unaffected by temperature changes.

Look in the Yellow Pages today for the name of your Rheem plumberdealer. And when you buy a glass-lined water heater, insist on Rheemglas. It costs no more.

As we chatted, I noticed a china "cottage" tea set in that corner cupboard in the dining room—each piece decorated with a different English cottage. The set had come from Mrs. Petrow's mother's home in England—so that Old England as well as New England flourishes here. One bedroom was still incomplete when we saw it, but an old brass double bed had been acquired for it, and on one wall of the room, already in place, was a sampler embroidered by Mrs. Petrow: "Today is the tomorrow that worried you yesterday."

Here's a new paint that gives brick, asbestos, block or concrete walls an entirely new, smart appearance! And even more, Gold Bond Exterior Velvet... with its Polyvinyl Acetate base...bonds itself to the masonry surface and lasts much longer than ordinary masonry paints. It lets damaging moisture out...but won't let it in!

You'll be surprised when you see the 15 good-looking colors and countless intermixes you have to choose from. Never before have you been able to freshen up masonry with such attractive colors!

And it's so easy to apply with brush, roller or spray. It dries to an even finish in 2 or 3 hours. Equipment cleans off in warm water.

Don't Be Swindled

when the workmen went directly from their house to several others on the block, because there had been no advertising.

No "commission" checks arrived—but in a few weeks they did receive, from an out-of-town finance company, a bill for the first monthly installment in repayment of the F.H.A. loan. John wrote back that the roof was far from satisfactory. In a few days he received a polite note to the effect that the finance company was sorry, as well as surprised, for they hadn't paid the roofing company until they had received a "completion certificate" signed by John. If the job wasn't completely satisfactory, John shouldn't have signed the certificate. His only redress was against the roofing company which "would doubtless make the work right." Meanwhile, his installment must be paid.

John's letters to the "head office" of the roofing company went unanswered, and Mary discovered that similarly victimized neighbors had bought new roofs as the result of a similar pitch.

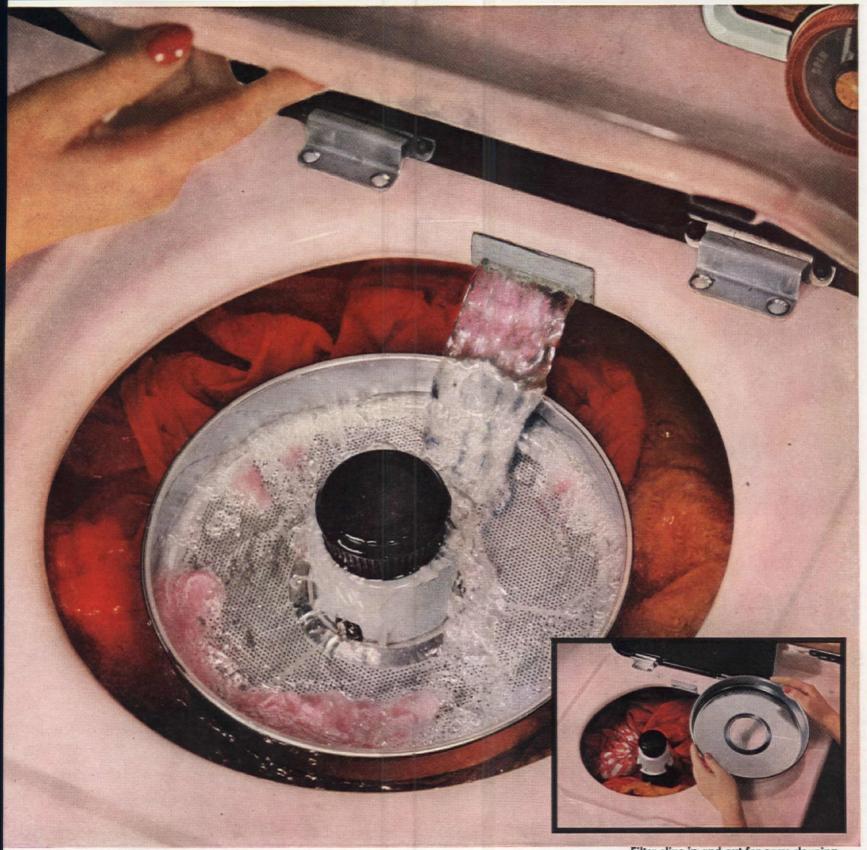

You may never be approached with that particular story, for when one swindle is publicized, such "salesmen" produce another as smoothly and quickly as carnival con-men put the pea in the wrong shell. High-pressure salesmanship and the irresistible lure of a bargain are the only things they'll have in common, so keep your guard up. The favorite hunting grounds of home-repair racketeers are middle-sized cities where crews induce families to sign F.H.A. loan applications, charge outrageous prices for shoddy work, and disappear promptly.

Right now, let's clarify F.H.A.'s role in the home repair, home modernization program. F.H.A. does not assure standard materials, does not insure against poor workmanship, does no. assure that the contractor is honest, capable, or dependable. I. only insures the finance company against loss on the loan that pays for your job. In brief, F.H.A. does not insure the home owner in any way whatsoever-and if a glib talker tells you otherwise, you'd be wise to call your district attorney or Better Business Bureau. To protect home owners against such misrepresentation, the 1954 Housing Bill makes it illegal to use "F.H.A." or "F.H.A. approved" in advertising any product or service. This, of course, does not prevent oral misrepresentation. Like F.H.A., the lender accepts no responsibility for your contractor, nor for the quality of his work. If the home owner allows himself to be fleeced, that is his concern alone. The only connection between the loan and the work done, is that the money must be used for the purpose stated in the application.

Popular fields for con-men are: Roofing: It's out of sight, hard to inspect, so defects don't show until the first storm. By then, the boys hope to be gone. Furnaces, Burners, and Heating Units: Many home owners know little about quality or B.T.U. capacity. If the unit looks pretty, they won't know they've been bilked until winter sets in. Storm Windows: More about this in a moment. Everlasting Weather Coating: Every asset was claimed for this widely successful exterior wall-coating swindle; "beautiful finish, never-have-to-paint-again, stops cracks, insulates." The workmen had to work fast to get all of it on before it started to peel off. The unfortunate owners, who found themselves with leprous-looking homes, faced the job of removing this worthless product before they could paint again.

For the Storm Window racket, rampant in New York last year, low-priced windows were advertised. Then high-pressure salesmen went out to talk suckers into buying other windows at four or five times the advertised price. A variation of this technique—the salesman who takes a deposit on an inexpensive product, then states that it is inferior and that a more expensive one (which he has on hand) should be used. Beware also of the boy who starts off with a high "estimate," then allows himself to be beaten down to a "bargain price" which is still three times the actual value. Or this appeal to greed: urging the owner to sign an application for an over-sized loan—with the understanding that he will get the overage. Do you think he does?

Possibly the most dishonest approach is this: The home owner is asked how much money he owes. If he names a reasonable total, the answer is prompt. "O.K., I've got the solution to your problem. We'll raise the repair loan application enough for you to pay all your bills." Does the home owner get the money? You answer that one!

Another ruse, reported last year by the New York World-Telegram and Sun, has taken New Yorkers for thousands of dollars. After a flood of come-on pamphlets boasting bargain rates for home improvements, a construction company salesman calls on the people who rise to the bait. He makes an estimate, jots down items on a form which he asks the prospect to sign, and says he will help him to obtain an F.H.A. loan—on which the whole deal will hinge. He reports back dolefully in a few days, says that he cannot get the loan.

A month later, Mr. Home Owner receives a summons to appear in court. The construction company is suing him for welching on a contract—that "form" with the small print which he was duped into signing. Buried in fine print he reads, too late: "The home owner agrees that in the event of any breach of this contract, whether such breach be prior to any, or partial, or full performance of this contract, the (blank) corporation may at its option receive, collect, and recover the sum equal to 30% of the total agreed contract price herein set forth as and for and representing the liquidated damages of the (blank) corporation." Furthermore, he finds that he has waived his right to jury trial. The case goes before a district court judge on the question of contract validity alone, and unless there is positive proof of fraud in obtaining the signature, the judge must invariably decide against the defendant.

If you do want to make worthwhile home repairs or improvements and haven't the cash to pay for them, how can you safely borrow the money and avoid being rooked? It's simple, as tens of thousands of home owners who have used F.H.A. repair loans will testify. Here are a few basic safeguards:

- 1. Refuse to listen to the blandishments of doorbell-ringing, high-pressure salesmen.
 - 2. Go to a responsible local contractor for a cost estimate.
- If you don't know a good local contractor, ask the local lumberyard for the names of reliable men. If you plan to do the work yourself, buy your materials from a local dealer.
- 4. Remember that a guarantee is only as good as the company that gives it.
- 5. Borrow from a local financial institution—one that you know, and that knows you.
 - 6. Shop for the lowest interest rate.
- 7. Read every document you sign—including those extra "file" copies. A favorite, and disarming, trick is for the gypartist to insist you read every word of the contract and loan application, then slip several sheets in front of you, saying: "O.K. Sign here!" The catch is that he slips in a completion certificate. With it, the victim approves the work in advance, and the con-man can collect the loan even if he never does any of the work! This is the trick that was pulled on John.

8. Above all, deal with people you know and trust.

Have we frightened you with our examples of avoidable risks? We hope not! We simply want you to make your decision with your eyes open. For if your home needs repair, it's cheaper to borrow money to have the work well done than to let the house deteriorate while you save up to pay cash. And, if you wish to add a new room or two, or if you want to remodel for greater comfort, convenience, and enjoyment, it may be well worth while to pay interest and enjoy the improved house. There is no reason to fear being cheated if you follow the suggestions above. Your government is trying to stamp out gyp-artists and chisellers. Keep your wits alert for them too.

What do you want most in a plant, especially a house plant? Ease of cultivation? Then why is it that you have overlooked the bromeliads? And why are they easy to handle? Well, you know just what you are doing when you water them, and just when to do it. There's no guesswork; no tapping or hefting of the pot; no probing of the soil to see how dry it is; no need of a schedule of watering dates. The plants, as a rule, grow in a rosette or tubular shape, the leaves forming a natural cup in which you keep water. As long as you can see any there, the plant is happy. If you are unusually busy or have to be away for even a week or ten days, just fill the cup and forget about it. Once in a while moisten the soil (or, more probably, osmunda fibre) in which the roots are growing. But even if they grow out of it and hang out in the air, the plant won't complain. For, in nature, bromeliads are air-plants (epiphytes), absorbing moisture and food from the jungle air. To make it feel at home, give a plant a shower in the sink every now and then.

HAMILTON MASON

Vriesia poelmani

Plants do best in moderate light and a temperature comfortable for you; but they tolerate considerable extremes, both high and low. The big Bromeliad Family includes such remote cousins (not houseplants) as the pineapple and the Spanish moss of the South, as well as a host of convenient-sized plants that fit any decor—period or modern. They bear names like Aechmea, Billbergia, Cryptanthus, Neoregelia, Tillandsia, Vriesia; popularly, they are painted feather, painted fingernail, flaming-sword, etc.

Much of the time, their beauty is in the thick, stiff, glossy leaves in shades of green, red, and brown, and often barred, spotted, or mottled mixtures. But the flower spikes, which rise up through the cuplike rosette center, are even more spectacular. Odd-shaped flowers (or even more colorful bracts) come in many rainbow colors and last for from a week to six months, depending upon the variety. When a plant has flowered (only once in most cases), that is not the end; for it sends out one or more offshoots which grow to flowering size in a year or two, so you have virtually a continuously performing friend requiring a minimum of care and troubled by few if any enemies. When the young plants are well along, the mother plant (unless one of the repeating kind) is cut off, leaving the youngsters—by then in their own pots—on their own.

Depending on their size, age, and rarity, bromeliads range widely in price; you can get one for as little as $1.00. Even if you have to wait a year or so for the flowers, it is a highly decorative asset, thriving on outrageous neglect, and free from that bugbear of wondering when to water it.

BEGINNER'S AQUARIUM

over 20 million American families have discovered the fascination of owning tropical fish—decorative, most easy-to-care-for pets that are well-mannered and clean, require just a few dollars to set up for a life-time of glass-house-keeping. Here are a few pointers for the neophyte aquarist.

FIRST, CHOOSE YOUR TANK: When considering the size and type of tank to buy, bear in mind the number of fish you'll want. Some people like to construct their own, but even a first-rate mechanic cannot make a tank as cheaply as he can buy one.

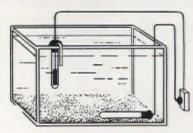

CHOOSE ITS LOCATION: This requires more than a casual thought, for you want the tank to be a decorative asset, you want to have it where you can watch and enjoy it—and you should locate it in a place where your fish will be happy. Since some natural light is desirable, a spot near a window makes a good choice. Remember that a tank should receive a total of 8-10 hours of light each day, whether it be natural or artificial. Choose a spot which is neither drafty nor cold, and never place a tank over a radiator.

NEXT, ADD GRAVEL: To provide adequate cover for the roots of aquatic plants, two or three inches is all that is necessary. Use a medium-size gravel and place it in the tank before you add water. Since the gravel should be very clean, wash it under running water until all dirt and debris are extracted.

FISH NEED "CONDITIONED WATER": The single most important item in any aquarium is the water. Tap water is satisfactory unless it is excessively hard. If it contains chlorine, however, let it stand for 24 hours before adding the fish. Healthy fish will "condition" it themselves—that is, make its physical and chemical state more suitable for their existence.

SELECT ENOUGH PLANTS: No aquarium is complete without a generous selection of plants. Besides having decorative value, they are practically essential to the well-being of captive fish. They provide resting places, feeding surfaces, sites for eggs, and hiding places for baby fish. Before planting, a tank should be two-thirds full of water. Never fill your aquarium to the rim, for this brings water in contact with the tank's metal frame, and metallic ores are poisonous to all species of fish.

CONSIDER TEMPERATURE CONTROL: Since tropicals thrive at temperatures ranging from 72°-80°, some sort of heating unit is essential (unless your room maintains 75°-80° both day and night). Install a thermostatically controlled heater and avoid sudden temperature changes when adding fresh water.

SELECT YOUR FISH: Guppies, platies, swordtails, danios, some of the armored catfishes, most barbs, and the hardy characins are most suitable for beginners. You'll be tempted by all of them, but be sure to avoid overcrowding. Allow four to five square inches of surface space for each linear inch of fish.

REEP YOUR AQUARIUM CLEAN: Even the best regulated aquarium requires cleaning at some time or other. To remove dirt that has accumulated at the bottom of the tank, syphon it into a clean container. After allowing this murky water to settle, carefully decant or syphon it back into the tank through a piece of cheese cloth or a filter. Thus you will retain the greatest amount of valuable "conditioned" water. Add tap water to make up the loss. A non-rusting aquarium scraper will remove the fine algae that grows on the glass sides of the tank.

TRICKS WITH SANDPAPER

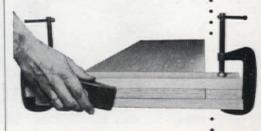

Try this next time you edge, join, and glue two boards. Slip a piece of folded abrasive paper or cloth between the two edges and sand off high spots that prevent the boards from meeting evenly

Round and odd-shaped pieces are often easier to sand with narrow strips of sandpaper used as shown. You can also buy sandpaper and abrasive cloth in rolls of various widths. It's handy for getting at difficult spots

To sand intricate carvings or moldings, fold a strip of fine sandpaper over the end of a stick sharpened to a chisellike edge. Hold stick like a pencil and work it along the surface. Shift paper to clean grit if it becomes clogged

If you want a flat end with square corners, clamp two pieces of wood flush with the end of your work as shown. These will keep the sandpaper from rounding off the edges

To locate rough spots that need further sanding, slip an old nylon stocking over your hand and run it lightly over the area you have sanded. Any spots that are still rough will snag the stocking and indicate the need for further sanding

An ordinary hacksaw blade is handy for tearing sandpaper accurately. Fold the sheet and hold the blade in the fold, then tear sheet in two. Another way—lay the sheet face down with blade across back and tear upward

A safe and sound house is a CONCRETE HOUSE

If your house is to be a safe and sound investment, it must be a safe and sound house. You can be certain if it's a concrete house.

When you build or buy a concrete house you safeguard yourself, your family and treasured possessions. You buy maximum protection from the destructive forces of storms, atomic blasts and fire. Concrete can't burn! A concrete first floor prevents basement fires from spreading. It also makes the basement a safer refuge from tornadoes and blasts.

A concrete house is sturdy, durable and weathertight, defies decay, termites and vermin. It lasts longer, needs fewer repairs, gives lifelong protection for your investment. Over the years it actually will cost you much less per year to live in a concrete house. The formula is simple: moderate first cost + low maintenance expense ÷ long years of service = low annual cost.

A safe and sound concrete house can be built in any style or size. It offers outstanding comfort—in any climate, any season.

Before you invest, investigate! Write today for free color booklet about concrete houses. It is distributed only in the U.S. and Canada.

HOW TO GET A CONCRETE HOUSE . . . and what will it cost?

Phone a local concrete masonry manufacturer for the names of architects, builders and lending agencies who have had experience with concrete houses. Your architect will know local conditions and can tell you about plans and costs. He can show you how you can build a safe and sound house economically with a concrete foundation, concrete masonry walls, concrete floors and with asbestos cement shingle, concrete tile or other firesafe roofing.

FRETWORK FENCE SETS OFF OUR HOUSE

or various reasons, much of the finishing of our new home in California depended upon our own ingenuity and efforts. It's a little "farm house" with garage and kitchen at the front, and it stands on a narrow lot between two larger colonial houses. So a little distinction was needed, and it seemed as though a "Chinese corner," with a very pregnable Chinese wall, would supply the answer. Both brickwork and woodwork were homemade, our son helping his Dad with the former. The wooden part is of 11/2" redwood squared at the planing mill. (Notice, on the drawing, the long center strips that give the openwork design its strength.) We gave it one priming coat and two finishing coats of lacquer-red paint before putting the units in place. Afterward, we "antiqued" it by brushing on a dark brown paint and wiping it off with a rag before it dried. Gold paint brushed into the joints and along the edges turned black in a few days, and the entire effect has improved steadily with age. Brass dragons from two bird cage supports bought in San Francisco's Chinatown were made into the gate latch. On the street side, we planted two bamboos close to the wall and, in front of them, in a semicircle, three "heavenlybamboos" (Nandina) and two dwarf pomegranates. On the inner, or patio side, is a tree wisteria, and nearby a pink-flowering locust is rapidly growing large enough to cast shade over the center of the patio. It bears its lovely clusters just after the blossoms fade on the peach, crabapple, and cherry trees in the garden. THE END

Made by makers of famous PELLA CASEMENT and MULTIPLE-PURPOSE WINDOWS

A quaint little "Orange Lady" in her pink dress and shawl stands on a simple mahogany base amidst yellow daisies, purple pansies, blue cornflowers-all out of an old-fashioned English garden where she would be quite at home.

Flower stems are cut in varying lengths and placed in pin cup holders

HOW TO COMBINE

ARRANGEMENTS BY BETTY B. MERRIAM

The pleasure you derive from your collection of small figurines can be immeasurably increased if occasionally you combine them with flowers. We used these enchanting Royal Doulton pieces with spring and early summer blossoms-but the season matters not; it is the scale and a few tricks in arrangement that are important. Use only a small amount of plant material, and always keep it subordinate to the figurine. The arrangement must be meticulously contrived to be enjoyed from all sides. A pin cup holder or pin holder in a small container (such as a tuna fish can) is usually adequate for anchoring the flowers and providing them with water. To work out your composition, take advantage of expression, motion, or whatever else the figurine conveys. You'll find this fascinating, and you'll be delighted by the charming effects you can achieve with just a few flowers. THE END

See "Where Credit Is Due," page 133

The "Balloon Man" and his friends, "Silks and Satins" and "Biddy Penny-Farthing," are grouped because of their congenial "interests." They stand on three free-form mahogany bases built up in graduated sizes. Yellow primroses, white and lavender single stock provide their appropriate English background

"Summer" radiates pleasure among the blue lace-flowers, roses, and grapehyacinths, while "Autumn" wields her broom on a two-tier oval base. Queen Anne's lace and seed pods would be good selections in a fall arrangement using these delightful figurines

Perfectly poised is the "Ballerina," on a low, flat, inverted container or tray. Pink azaleas held in a disguised pin cup holder compliment the dancer's pinkish-mauve dress and tiny red slippers. The composition, placed off-side, suggests illusion of dance floor

The winsome "Jersey Milkmaid" in her blue skirt, red blouse, white apron and cap stands on a milk-white base not unlike the top of a milking stool. White and yellow freesias with very few small tulips and greens form background—again composition is placed off-center

"Spring"—her apron full of posies, and a baby lamb at her side looks over the small arrangement of white sweet peas and lilies-ofthe-valley, accented with dark red sweet peas and brown galax leaves. Rectangular wood base is used here, with off-side composition

PREVENT SEWER FAILURES!

Roots can't enter CAST IRON SOIL PIPE

What's the biggest cause of sewer failures? Tree roots! They'll enter the tiniest opening, usually at the joint, and clog the sewer line.

But roots can't get into joints of Cast Iron Soil Pipe. Why? Cast iron joints are packed tight with oakum and sealed for life with molten lead - and that's the only sure way to make a joint that's tight, yet flexible enough to take the stress of shifting soil or heavy traffic overhead.

see what happens to nonmetallic pipe

Roots went to work here. They penetrated a joint in this nonmetallic pipe, crushing both pipe and coupling.

tore through the walls of this pipe - sure death for another nonmetallic sewer line.

EXCLUSIVE — with Cast Iron Soil Pipe

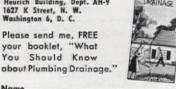

- The strongest sewer pipe material you can get. Underground, it won't crack or crush under shifting pressure . . . in the walls, it can't be punctured by carelessly driven nails.
- · Won't be corroded by normal soil conditions, sewer gases or common household chemicals.
- · Won't admit roots through pipe or joints. Can't absorb moisture, swell, bulge or disintegrate.
- Is the only material all municipal and state plumbing regulations permit for every part of your soil and waste system.

First-Class Lawn

(or if it is just the opposite-sandy and open), some form of humus should be worked into the upper six or eight inches of soil at this time. There's nothing better than made-inthe-garden compost, or soft, dark leafmold from the floor of a friendly woodlot. If you have to buy, you can use two large bales of peat moss or an equivalent eight bags of ground corn cobs per 1,000 square feet. In this case, add an extra ration of nitrogenous plant food to replace the nitrogen consumed by soil organisms as they break down the humus. Work the soil well with a power tiller or a long-tined potato hook, and then rake the surface to a level seedbed. If the top-soil is shallow, avoid burying it out of reach of the young grass. And don't "overprepare" the soil to a fine, dusty condition; leave it grainy or granular.

A seedbed so prepared is worthy of top quality seed-which is worth all it costs. Sow it evenly and not too thickly; one to two pounds per 1,000 square feet of a first-class mixture of select perennial grasses is ample if conditions are right. If they aren't, heavier seeding won't correct them. Sow seed evenly-with a mechanical seeder or spreader unless with a practiced hand-on a still day or evening. Don't bury it by rough raking; light brushing or dragging or. in dry soil, very light rolling, is enough. Then water well, and see that the soil stays moist until the grass is an inch high. Start to mow when it reaches two or three inches, and don't cut a new lawn short. Indeed, a usable and well-used lawn should never be cut lower than an inch and three-quarters or two inches. But do it often enough so that the clippings are small and light and don't have to be raked up.

If your lawn soil is heavy clay, don't think you can transform it into friable loam by surface applications of "miracle" chemicals. It has been shown, on golf courses and athletic fields, that soil structure can be improved, absorption and retention of moisture promoted, and the growth of turf helped if a reliable soil stabilizer is well mixed in to a depth of several inches. But this, to a horticulturist, is hardly a natural or satisfying way to build a "real" soil for a real, rewarding lawn. THE END hedge), dig holes or a trench, and, with a spading fork, mix well into the soil at the bottom a generous amount of rotted or dried manure or peat moss plus plant food. Set the plant in place, put the best of the soil on and around its roots; firm well, fill the hole with water, and, when it has soaked in, fill in with the remaining soil from the hole. Even where soil conditions are poor, a plant can get a good start in a bushel basket full of good soil sunk rim deep; later you can gradually improve the surrounding soil and give the plant more feeding ground into which to send its roots.

When making a perennial border or a lawn on a bulldozed property (or anywhere, for that matter), don't try to scrimp or cut corners. Borders and lawns are long-time propositions, investments, in fact. For a border, dig the soil at least a foot deep, or better, two feet; put drainage material at the bottom if necessary, then soil mixed with coarse organic matter-chopped sods, manure, compost, etc.-and finally good, rich soil. Leave the bed alone for a week or more so the soil can settle before you plant. A lawn is a problem in itself, so we are treating it separately, starting on page 54. THE END

f you find you cannot consume (or give to friends) your whole crop of summer squash (the round, flat, white, bush kind called scallop and sometimes Patty Pan), maybe you'd like to make some of the surplus bounty of your garden into lovely planters, as I did, to hang on the wall and delight you all year long.

Left on the vine to mature, the squash become just hard shells with almost nothing inside but seeds and some shriveled fibre. Cutting carefully with a sharp knife, I made an opening in the upper half of the front, removed the seeds, filled the bottom half with good soil, and bored a hole in the upper center of the back to hang it up by. I put small plants in through the opening, but you could sow seeds of petunias or any other small-sized plant. The planters can brighten up a breakfast nook, porch, or other informal spot-I painted mine a cheerful green, but the color can, of course, be chosen to match any desired color scheme.

GOOD IDEA FOR A BIRDBATH

his birdbath, which I made in an hour two years ago, and which has functioned perfectly ever since, has it all over the unsightly invertedumbrella type. Locate it near some shaded unit that will hide a low support for the water container. Strip the sod, dig out three or four inches of soil, and fill the hole with a rather stiff concrete mix. With a trowel or your hands, shape to a flat bottom and a rounded edge at least two inches thick. No reinforcing, footings, anything; the whole slab goes up and down without cracking as the soil freezes and thaws. Water supply is a tight 5-gallon, flat-topped oil can with a 2-inch piece of half-inch (or larger) copper pipe soldered into a hole cut near the top so that it slants toward the lid. (This slant is important.) Slip one end of a piece of garden hose over the protruding tube, let the other end rest on bottom of bath. The stand for the can (bricks, cement or other blocks, etc.) should put it a little higher than the bath, toward which the tube and hose should slope. Carry can to tap for filling, put cover on tight, invert on stand, attach hose-and everything is set for another week's fun for the birds. -W. C. KRUEGER stood in the hall for a moment, then slowly opened my son's bedroom door and hesitated. I knew he wouldn't be asleep; and he knew I was standing there. Both of us were playing a waiting game for a moment or two, wondering what the other would do or say. As my eyes became accustomed to the dimness, I was amazed to see the still white figure lying beside him. Realizing that I would see it, he quickly covered it with his blanket.

First, though, let me tell you about the incident and the lesson it taught me. It was one of those minor crises that all of us parents should go through, to teach us how far we are from being infallible. Because it marked a turning point in my life . . . and Jim's . . . I'd like to pass on my experience to other parents.

章 章 章 章

I love my son devotedly; more than my own life. Always did. Always will. Perhaps my love for him is deeper because he is the only one we can ever have. Possibly, because he is the only one, I may have tried a bit too hard to prevent him from being a "spoiled only child."

Many fathers take their role more or less casually, turning over to the mother the job of rearing the children. That doesn't apply to me, for Marge and I share exactly the same views; she has always encouraged me to be a real part of our son's life—an intimate part, and not just a father whose name is used as a threat to punishment.

We played fair with each other, too. If Marge disciplined Jim, her judgment was respected by me; and she, in turn, never questioned mine. Together we saw him through the various phases of growing up; the "talking back" stage, his first real lie, and all the rest. We tried to temper justice with mercy, for above all else, I prided myself upon being absolutely fair . . . and just. Probably that is why this particular occurrence made such a lasting impression upon me.

Just when I was feeling too complacent, the thunderbolt struck, bringing to me the realization that I was taking too much for granted as far as Jim was concerned. I'm glad it happened as it did, though, painful as it was at the time. I realized then that the job of being a good father was merely taking a new turn; that babyhood is one of the easiest times for parents, and that their real job begins when their toddlers grow up.

Jim had grown fast and husky, as healthy boys are supposed to do, and he kept pace mentally with his physical development. Many times his observations and expressions astonished us, for they were often far advanced for a boy who is only half past twelve. Perhaps, too, because he was our only child, we had both talked to him as though he really were an adult and, without intending to do so, we had considered him one.

The incident took place one evening, shortly before we were ready to sit down at the table. What he did wasn't a terrible thing—merely the result of boyish high spirits. But it made me angry. The situation at the office had been almost unbearably tense, and my nerves had been stretched to the utmost, waiting for matters to be decided in my favor or otherwise. My disposition is usually a happy one, and because of the violence of my outburst. Jim was completely taken by surprise. I lost my temper, shouted at him like a bully, and ordered him to go to bed and stay there until he could do what was expected of him. And what, precisely, did I expect of a boy just half past twelve . . . absolute perfection?

Half Past Twelve

I will never forget the expression of hurt and disbelief on Jim's face. nor the look that Marge gave me. Eating was forgotten and inwardly I called myself all kinds of a fool. Marge's face flushed deeply as she sat there, teeth clenched, then very carefully folded her napkin and placed it near her plate. In the same quiet, controlled manner, she pushed her chair back from the table and left the room.

It's a painfully unfamiliar part for a usually good-natured fellow to play —that of trying to appear dignified and calm when he knows he has made an utter fool of himself. It's a horrible, but humbling experience.

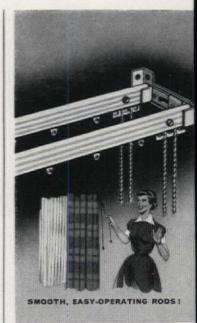

I raked leaves in the backyard, then puttered about in the tool shed until it grew dark, dreading to go in and face Marge, and wanting all the time to go bounding up the stairs to Jim. Strangely enough, all else faded into the background—the strain at the office—all my personal problems and worries were nothing compared to what I had done to him.

Since we all have to face facts sooner or later, I went into the house. Marge was sitting by the fire. knitting, although the yarn reemed very much askew and she must have been moving the needles without meaning or pattern. She looked up, questioningly. I shook my head; food was farthest from my thoughts. I picked up a book, but the words were a jumble before my eyes. How long I sat, I'm not sure, but at length Marge suggested, in her quiet way, that it really must be time for me to turn a page.

I guess I had been sitting there, waiting for some cue from her, knowing that she was waiting for me to make amends. Waiting for me to act like the kind of fellow that she knew me to be.

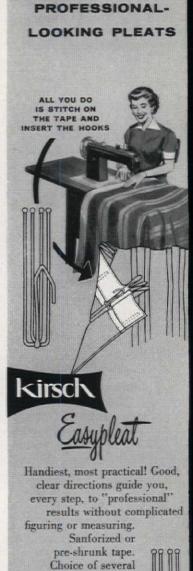

Without a word I went upstairs, slowly opened Jim's door, then hesitated, just standing there . . . looking at this boy of mine and wondering how long it had been since I had hugged him, and wondering, too, just when and why I had stopped. Once babyhood is past, American fathers are not supposed to show affection openly for their sons. Our foolish society decrees that it is not manly for them to hug their boys or kiss them occasionally, or tell them in words how very much they love them.

My eyes were accustomed to the half-light of his room and it was then I recognized the still, white form lying beside him. Quick though he was to cover it with his blanket, the truth came to me, for there beside him was his old white teddy bear—the one we had put away in the attic because Jim was "getting too big for such things." The old, battered teddy bear that he had been so eeping costs down is a procedure we heartily endorse. But the dollars you save can be the most expensive thing in the world if they make you gamble with safety! If you're building a new house, adding space to an old one, or just looking your home over for safety, beware of such hazards as inadequate wiring, hollow-frame construction without fire stops, stairs poorly designed from a safety point of view. For safety all over the house, take these tips, most of them from the National Safety Council:

BATHROOMS: Use flat-bottomed tubs . . . Grab bars for tub and shower . . . Floors with non-skid surfaces . . . Keep light switches out of reach of tub and shower . . . Provide built-in slot for disposing of used razor blades.

KITCHENS: Use rounded corners on built-ins . . . Don't allow movable equipment to protrude into the room . . Locate range away from windows. If that isn't possible, don't use curtains on windows-never take a chance on having curtains blow across hot surfaces . . . The best kind of wall cabinet to use over a range is one with an exhaust fan. Place no cupboards or shelves closer than 24" to the range top . . . Provide sufficient electrical outlets . Plan work areas so you don't have to work in your own shadow.

HALLS AND STAIRWAYS: On stairs, straight runs and landings are better than winding stairs and angle treads. . . Keep tread and riser measurements as uniform as possible throughout the house. . . . Use continuous handrails if there are more than two steps, and use rails on both sides of wide stairs. . . . Provide for control of lights from both top and bottom of stairway. . . . Doors should not open into halls. . . . See that the halls and stairs are well-lit by night and by day.

STORAGE SPACES: Often-used articles should be stored where they can be reached without climbing. . . . Be sure to provide good lighting for storage areas and closets. . . . Provide storage on the ground floor for bicycles, baby buggies, garden tools, ladders. . . . Provide locked compartments for poisons, and label all poisons plainly.

IN OTHER AREAS: Plan for free traffic flow without congestion. . Provide indoor play space for children-out of the way of household traffic. . . . Paint low-hanging pipes and other head-hazards a bright color, or use the illuminated tapes. . . For nighttime use, provide a small blue light near baseboard of bath, hall, and bedrooms, and on stairs. . . . If you have children or pets, use non-toxic paint. THE END

Mouse damage at the base of what was a thriving winged euonymus re field mice gnawing the stems of your cherished shrubs and small trees with such disastrous results as those shown here? With rapidly growing suburbs upsetting the delicate balance of nature and driving away owls, hawks, skunks, and foxes that normally keep mice under control, the mouse menace is growing. One owner of a quarter-acre plot estimates $100 worth of injury to his foundation planting plus the loss of several years' plant growth.

G. B. GUNLOGSON

The cure? A few pounds of one of the ready-mixed warfarin rodent baits and a few crude bait boxes that you can knock together of scrap boards in a few minutes. Make them about 15 in. long and 2" x 3" inside; fasten the top board with one nail so it can be swing open to permit replacing expended bait. Put a box with bait inside (out of reach of pets and children) wherever mouse traffic can be expected; tracks in fresh snow are a good guide. Preferably put it under something-a woodpile, fence corner, pile of brush, etc. Then give it a chance to work. Warfarin does not kill quickly like arsenic, etc., but must be eaten for from four to ten days to exert its accumulative and positive effect. As it is practically tasteless and odorless, the victims develop no bait-shyness. If, after a week or so, the bait has disappeared or diminished, you can confidently conclude that you have repulsed the invaders with heavy losses. THE END

the lovely look of a lady

What creates this ladylike look that you wear so becomingly? It's not alone the brooch you pin at your throat...your frankly feminine blouse...your bandbox look. It's the serenity and naturalness with which you move through your daily activities. Ladies are always perfectly poised!

Part of your ability to be your own charming self during the most trying times of the month is due to your wise acceptance of a different kind of sanitary protection: Tampax internal protection. Tampax itself is ladylike . . . small . . . dainty . . . only one-ninth the size of an external pad . . . so made that the wearer's hands needn't touch the Tampax at any time. You never have the awareness of unnecessary bulk, of telltale edge lines . . . in fact, you can't even feel the Tampax you're wearing. And most important for your own peace of mind, you know there's no possibility of odor forming.

As far as your personal activities are concerned, Tampax always makes you feel nicer...daintier. You don't have to remove it before you take your shower or tub; you're completely protected. Both the Tampax and the applicator flush away easily; no disposal problems. The package is hardly bigger than a cosmetic case...can be "hidden" anywhere.

Choice of 3 absorbencies (Regular, Super, Junior) at any drug or notion counter. Tampax Incorporated. Palmer, Mass.

A BONUS FOR THE BIRDS

KATHERINE B. WALKER

You like birds around the house but can't quite reconcile even the most attractive cage you can find with your other furnishings? Well, you can use plants to "blend" a bird cage into almost any surroundings, make it a truly decorative feature for any room, and, at the same time, insure a healthier, happier life for your birds. For use in this way, plants must (1) be nontoxic, since the birds may taste or even devour parts of them; (2) grow well under the temperature and light conditions provided, and be amenable to frequent watering; and (3) be hard-leaved, for easy cleaning. Naturally, they should also be decorative.

Currently, my own birds are strawberry finches, tiny little imports from South America. Functionally perfect, the standard chrome cage they came in was an evesore, and the birds looked (and probably felt) miserable, huddled on the paper bottom-liner vainly seeking something homelike in their environment. Now, in a small replica of what their native home might have looked like, they flit briskly from limb to swing, or scratch in the damp soil, singing happily as did the canaries and parakeets I have at other times kept in similarly planted cages.

To make a planted cage, build a plywood box to fit the exact inside measurements and as deep as the metal side banding. If necessary, chisel out small notches to take the cup brackets and permit the cage to fit snugly around the box. Unless the bottom joints are tight, excess moisture will seep through them, making it unnecessary to bore drainage holes. In planting, remove as much soil as possible from the plant roots, spread them out as flat as possible, and lay stones on them to hold the plants in place if necessary. Keep the branches within the edges of the box, and be sure to leave a clear space for the bath dish. Then fill in around the plants with soil to which some good compost-activator has been added. Finally, sprinkle bird gravel over the soil, this to be renewed from time to time.

The ideal bird-cage plants are small palms, tough enough to take the tearing and tentative shredding that many birds will do. Their arching stems furnish satisfactory perches, besides being graceful. Boxwood is excellent, especially if tiny specimens are planted to conceal the food cup. Small birds like a few branches, partially stripped of leaves, to provide a concealed roosting place. Young plants of any citrus, Schefflera, Polyscias, Croton, and Aralia are also good main plants for a standard-sized cage. You can make a large, flying cage really spectacular with azaleas, anthuriums, abutilons, or jasmines. Abutilons are soft-leaved, however, and not easy to keep clean; so plant where but few droppings will fall on them. These, after a preliminary spraying, can be removed with a damp sponge. Except for oleander, podocarpus, dieffenbachia and a few others that have poisonous sap, almost any sturdy, branching plant can be used. Smaller material includes Peperomias, holly-ferns, aluminum-plant, Syngonium, Nephthytis, and similar, smooth-leaved, low-growing sorts. To simulate large plants, you can fasten such attractive vines as heart-leaved philodendron, tradescantia, ivy, or pothos to short pieces of cork- or bark-slab-which can be wired to the cage for stability. Ground-hugging plants needed in most plantings of this type are not required, for in a short time, spilled seed will sprout so thickly that it may have to be pulled out or cut back to let the birds get to the seed cup. All birds relish these "fresh greens" as a supplement to their diet.

When the box is planted, to install the cage and its occupants, remove the cage tray, bottom plate, and all perches but the top one, and chase the birds up onto that. Quickly place the cage over the box and slide the bottom plate back in place. Adjust the perches as convenient, remembering that less leaf-cleaning will be necessary if they are not directly above a plant. Incidentally, birds' feet vary in size within each breed and species. When I received them, my finches had sore feet from having perched so long on standard-size rods. I substituted twiggy branches of a suitable diameter, leaving only the swing which they love to use during the day. At night, they roost on a more comfortable perch.

Cleaning a planted cage (every two or three days) is easy. Set the whole thing in the sink and turn a tepid spray on it so as to wash off all the leaves. The birds love the shower bath and try to stay under it as it moves about. Let the cage drain before putting it back in place. One not-serious disadvantage of a planted cage is its weight, due to the added soil. Set it on a table or other firm support and do not hang it unless you give the bottom plate additional support. If you have a roomy bay window or plant box, set the cage among the plants and further conceal it with tall ones on each side. Whereever it is, it will be a real conversation piece-for your birds, as well as your guests, to talk about. THE END
