Will you build a 1940 house in 1962?

In the 1940's very few houses were built with central air conditioning—mainly because the cost of cooling was three times as much as it is now.

Today Carrier air conditioning in an average custombuilt, three-bedroom house costs about $800 more than heating alone. This adds only a few dollars a month to your mortgage payments.

Does $800 sound surprisingly low? It is. Carrier central air conditioning is one of the few quality products that have come down in price during recent years.

Central air conditioning never costs less than it does when you build. And the added investment will make your house worth more when you sell. Meanwhile, everyone sleeps better, eats better, feels better—even in the hottest weather. There are fewer allergy reactions. Rooms stay cleaner. Indoor living is happier and entertaining so much easier.

Small wonder that so many homes enjoy Carrier air conditioning today—more than any other make!

Your nearby Carrier dealer can give you the exact cost of air conditioning your home. He's listed in the Yellow Pages of the telephone book. Carrier Air Conditioning Company, Syracuse, New York.

A Rotisserie with "Open-Air" Broiling!

True broiling needs a flow of fresh, dry air—not moisture-laden air that "steam roasts" instead.

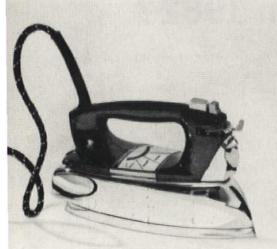

General Electric's Rotisserie-Broiler is designed to provide a flow of cool, fresh air, plus direct infra-red heat. Quickly crisps the outside of meats and seafood, seals in the natural juices.

Rotisserizes, too. Large enough for two chickens, roast beef or leg of lamb! There's an automatic timer and timed appliance outlet for your coffee maker or other appliances. Enjoy true broiling—in your home or on your patio! See it at your

FROM OUR HOUSE

When the frost is on the pumpkin there's a wild scramble for boots and mufflers

MARGY WYVILL ECCLESINE

It happens every year. They have been outfitted with coats, dresses, pants, shirts, and everything else they need for school. Then comes a soggy, blustery day, a mad scramble in the front hall, and everybody needs boots. I refuse to buy new ones until they have tried the accumulation in the boot box. The growth of feet is so prodigious that usually each one can use a pair that fit the one ahead of him last year. Only objection is that the girls don't want to wear arctics that were bought for the boys, and the boys won't be seen in white boots. Best buys over the years are red boots that seem entirely acceptable to all.

You've Got Me:

Bobby, who has been terribly naughty, looks up and asks innocently: "Daddy, why do I act so bad?"

NATURE'S CONTRASTS

Outside there are sudden squalls, a wicked flurry of wintry winds, followed by eerie lights and a rainbow. Inside, you hug into a sweater, plant an amaryllis to watch grow, and fill the house with music, as insulation against that lonely feeling that hovers about in November.

One of my loves in the tree world has always been the red maple. Ever notice that this tree is still catching the sunlight and standing splendidly arrayed in color long after the others have lost their leaves?

Well, Why Not?

"Mommy, why do they call it fall? Is it because the leaves are falling?"

I REMEMBER GRANDPA

My maternal grandfather was, among other things, a landscape gardener who helped lay out the White House grounds. I often wonder when I see a picture of the White House which of the trees he planted. Until his 86th year, never a spring or fall went by that he didn't start something growing. He made every place he lived beautiful. Even now when I plant a rosebush I think of him. Isn't that a wonderful way to be remembered?

MARCHING ALONG

Some of the children are too young to know what a veteran is, but I have a special appreciation for what used to be called Armistice Day. I can remember hot, tired, dusty men from Fort George G. Meade marching past our home in Maryland, and one of them dropping out of line and slipping through the hedge to ask me for a drink of water. How he thanked me when I ran and fetched him one; how he grinned as he dashed back through the hedge and fell into step with another marching column. That personal contact has lived with me all these years, and rises to mind whenever the flag waves and the bands play to honor those who have served our country.

Joan, of coloring-book age, who loves to watch sunsets, has been told about the Master Painter.

She is silent a while, then comments: "He must have a really big box of cravons."

NO-NAME GAME

"Anybody got a case he wants solved?"

"You can't take money out of a bank till you put it in, stupid."

"Haircuts, cheap, 50 cents."

They're playing one of their favorite games. No name. They've built a village out of a package of construction paper and cellophane tape. Stevie has two enterprisesa detective agency and a service station. Kim runs the bank and the saloon. Johnny has a grocery store and a car wash. Amy is happy with her barber shop, except that there are no customers. Michele, two, is the big menace, wandering around and inadvertently crushing the buildings with a misstep. For excitement, Johnny has just "stolen" $10, and Stevie is hot on his trail. I just hope this ends peacefully.

Riding the Rails:

For his eighth birthday, Johnny requests a trip to the city, because he has never ridden on a train. At the rate things are going with the railroads, I'd better take the younger ones for a ride soon, or their knowledge of the iron horse may be confined to museums.

A FEAST TO SHARE

Thanksgiving is one day I don't want to sit down at the table with just my husband and the children. The day cries out for sharing. If members of the family can't make it, we invite anyone who might enjoy being with us. There's always a lonely person, if you just look.

For several years we alternated with friends who have as many children as we. Makes a wild but splendid day. Amazing how many people a turkey can serve.

Last year we had some foreign students from a nearby university. Two from India arrived, resplendent in their saris, and entertained us later with folk songs of their native country. We'll never have nicer guests-exciting people in their own right, undemanding, marvelously appreciative of the children. When they go home, they may remember sharing in our great, truly American feast. We will certainly remember them.

How we retired in 15 years with $300 a month

Florida, enjoying a leisurely dinner and listening to the sound of the surf. You see, only two months ago I was riding a commuter train five days a week to my job. Today we're living a carefree life in the home of our dreams. And each month we'll be getting a check for $300-for the rest of our lives.

"Funny how it all started. I'd just gotten out of the Army-back in 1946 and had gone back to my old job. One day I bumped into Al Peters in a sporting-goods store. I hadn't seen him in a couple of years, but he looked as young as ever-always the healthy, outdoor type. Al was a great fisherman, and I asked him about his next trip. He chuckled. 'It'll be a long one,' he said. 'I'm retiring next week.'

"'Oh, I didn't get rich all of a sudden,' he said, reading my thoughts. 'It just takes a little planning. Thing is to start planning when you're still young.

"When you're still young'-the words kept running through my mind. And they started me thinking. I was almost 40. I had a good job with a future, making pretty good money. But Dot and I hadn't saved a penny toward retirement. Frankly, I hadn't even given it a thought until then.

"Two weeks went by. One Sunday night Dot and I sat by the fireplace, catching up on our reading. I was thumbing through a copy of Life mag-

"I can hardly believe it myself. But azine when an advertisement caught here we are, Dot and I, sitting in my eye. The headline offered a way to retire in just fifteen years with an income guaranteed for life. The ad was signed by Phoenix Mutual. It sounded like the kind of plan that Al Peters had. I tore out the coupon and mailed it the next morning.

> "When a booklet from Phoenix Mutual arrived in the mail, I studied it. It told how I could put part of my salary into a Phoenix Mutual Retirement Income Plan and get a guaranteed income for as long as either Dot or I lived. The Plan also provided immediate life insurance protection for her if anything happened to me. We'd never worry about the ups and downs of stocks, or about outliving our savings. I applied for a plan of my own.

> 'Well, that's my story. Dot and I sold the house and moved down here about six weeks ago. It's a new kind of life-and we love it! Our first check arrived right on time, and that $300 a month will keep on coming. That's what I call security!"

This story is typical. Assuming you begin at a young enough age, you can have an income of from $50 to $300 a month or more-starting at age 55, 60, 65 or older. HOME WITH JOSEPH COTTEN

JIM LISTON

The man so obviously enjoying the comforts of home in the picture below lives in an "unflamboyant Renaissance" style villa overlooking the ocean at Pacific Palisades, California. He discusses with ease: modern art, the Rolls Royce engine, the Los Angeles Dodgers, the proper way to mix concrete, or the history of Italian improvised comedy. His fine porcelain and wood-carved commedia dell' arte figurines (page 31) were collected over a period of 25 years with the same zeal for thoroughness that has characterized his career as an actor.

At 56, Joseph Cotten has what most home owners dream about and can seldom get at any price-an allaround handyman who can fix a leaky faucet, wire a lamp, hang a door, or rig a block and tackle to lift a 1000-pound statue to a windswept balcony.

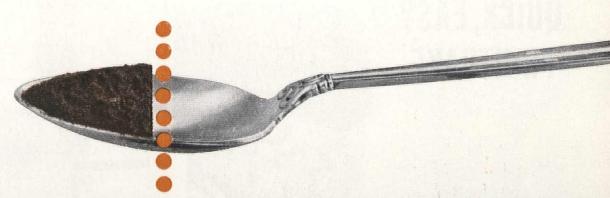

"My carpenter, Guy Womack, started work when I remodeled my first house," says Cotten. (continued)

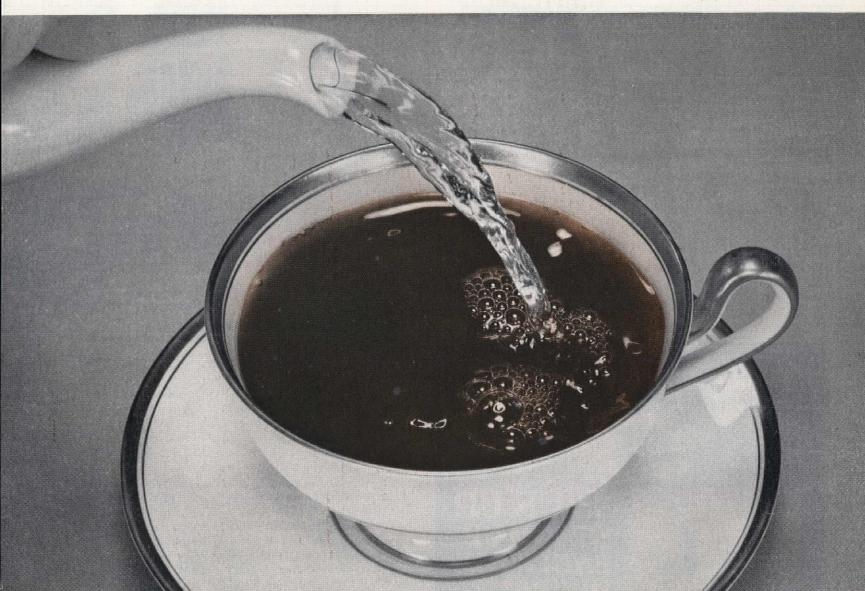

High-ceilinged studio is one of Cotten's favorite rooms. Entire wall at left is hung with pictures, many of them painted by friends and one by his daughter when she was a child. He mixes mirrors with pictures by inserting mirror glass in antique frames. Mrs. Cotten is movie and television actress Patricia Medina.

Balcony off living room is pleasant outdoor living area protected from ocean breeze by wind screen. Cotten calls large statue the "Big Girl."

"The only reason I sold it was because Guy and I ran out of things to do. When I found this place I knew it was perfect-I knew we'd never finish.'

Cotten and Womack have worked side by side for five years building (1) garden walls that required footings 10 feet deep, (2) a guest apartment with bath, kitchen, living room, and private balcony in an area they excavated under a terrace overlooking the tennis court, and which Cotten calls Cava Vinca, "the blue grotto," and (3) hundreds of feet of concrete retaining walls, walks, and stairs connecting the cliffside house with the grotto and the tennis court.

It's clear that Guy, who works five days a week for Cotten, has a lifetime job, because he makes possible ambitious projects "Joe" (as Guy calls him) couldn't attempt alone.

"Like getting concrete to the grotto," says Cotten, relishing the memory. "We had our mixer up at street level and we had to build a long, wooden chute. We'd dump concrete into it, and whoosh!-it was down there. Or the day we were mounting the Big Girl on the balcony. (The B.G. is a graceful, life-size stone statue Cotten found in Vicenza, Italy. It weighs a half ton.) We'd drilled a hole in the base to fit over a pipe mounted on the balcony. We had her dangling at the end of a rope and it was touch and go, but we made it."

Cotten, whose patrician features and sonorous voice were first discovered by moviegoers when he appeared in "Citizen Kane," set out to be an actor when he left Petersburg, Virginia, for the Hickman School of Expression, Washington, D.C. To help pay his way, he played center on the Department of Interior football team. He received $25 for each quarter he played.

"It was a rough semipro league," he recalls, "but it was good money in those days."

Joseph Cotten next found himself in Miami, Florida, where he worked as a salesman and joined a little-theater group. It was here he met Lenore Kip.

Cotten married Lenore after he made good in his first leading role on the stage. Widowed after 28 years of marriage, he married actress Patricia Medina in 1960. They recently redecorated their home with bold, fresh

"It was built by Anthony Heinsbergen, an artist," said Cotten. "He painted those murals," he said, studying the vaulted, 18-foot ceiling of the living room. "It was Patricia's idea to go to white walls with bright red carpeting. It's surprising what it has done for this room and it enhances Heinsbergen's work. We use gold and what Pat calls 'electric' blue as accents."

Cotten's commedia dell' arte collection occupies one end of the living room. Some of the larger wood carvings decorate the entry, other porcelain pieces are on small shelves on the staircase.

"I discovered the commedia dell' arte when I was studying the history of the theater. The more I learned about Harlequin, Pantalone, Capitano, old Dottore, and the rest, the more they fascinated me. I picked them up in Meissen, Chelsea, and French porcelain in shops all over the world. Some cost as little as $5, others $500."

One of the most unusual rooms is the dining room where a black and white mural depicting a 16th-century Italian horse race has been mounted on four walls.

"Guy and I removed this from Marion Davies's old home when it was sold," said Cotten. "It represents a period when the commedia characters were at the height of their popularity and some of the people in this scene bear a close resemblance to them."

Mrs. Cotten's favorite electric blue carpeting sets off the traditional furnishings of the room and tangerine upholstery fabric on the dining chairs adds a bright note.

Cotten led the way down to the floor below, and entered a door that opened on the balcony of a long high room with a beamed ceiling.

"We call this the studio," he said, descending to the white carpeted floor below on which were spread three Persian rugs. "Mr. Heinsbergen painted here. We've painted the entire room white, and with that big window, it's a good place for our pictures and books, and for entertaining."

Among the two dozen pictures by professional artists and friends is one painted by Cotten's daughter when she was nine years old.

"I'm as proud of that picture as the day she painted it," he said. "It's surprising how many people single it out without knowing who did it. I'm prejudiced, of course because she's my daughter-and she's made me a grandfather.

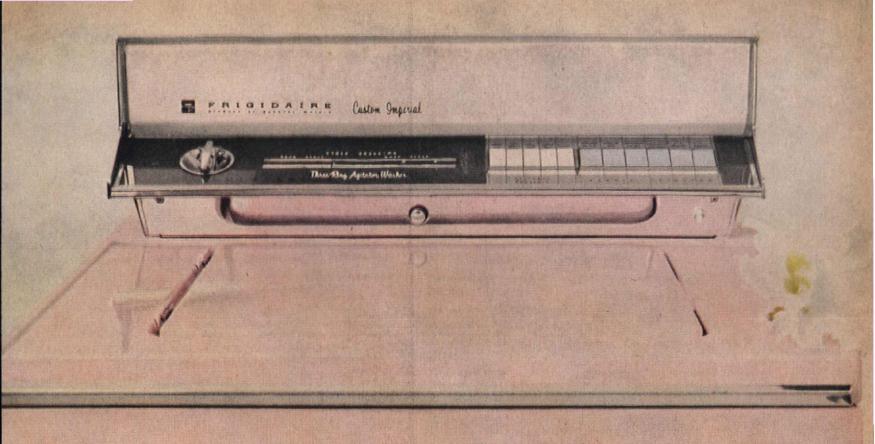

"A while ago you asked how many rooms there are in this house. I told you I didn't know. I suppose there are about 20, but I've never counted them. It's a fantastic place-we have to build a scaffolding tomorrow when we hang new draperies on that large window above the main staircase. And there are two basements under us It's like no house I've seen-and that's what I like about it. Lots of things to do."

"Any special problems?"

"No problems-except those we create when we get into our crazy building and remodeling projects Which reminds me that I have pair of Spanish wood carvings and a sheet of glass an inch thick. Nov on this project. . . ."

Violets and Johnny-jump-ups, flowering exuberantly in a glass, bring spring to your living room months ahead of schedule.

This is an invitation to discover how a handful of springtime in February is worth a gardenful in May. You simply take a cue from the picture above—and create a complete spring garden scene inside a king-size brandy glass. The result is spring-in-winter, right in your own living room.

The technique is quite simple, and if you have suitable plants in your garden, the only thing you're likely to need is the glass. The kind I use—shown in the picture—is about 10" across and is sold at gift shops for between $5 and $7.50. The next best thing, but less distinctive, is a goldfish bowl or aquarium.

My favorite flowers for the purpose, as you've probably guessed, are small violets and Johnny-jump-ups.

But try any of the small, spring-flowering plants you may be especially partial to—primroses, lily-of-the-valley, myrtle, hepaticas, and so on. If you can find some green moss and a few small foliage plants, such as ferns, partridge berry, and wintergreen, you'll be able to make an especially attractive planting.

Dig the plants in late fall and pack them in damp sphagnum moss in a wooden box. (Sphagnum moss is what florists use to make set pieces and nurserymen use for packing plants.) Set the box in a cool, dark corner of your basement, unheated porch, or any spot where the plants will remain moist and cool but won't freeze. Around the middle of January they can be brought out and planted in the brandy glass. If you (continued)

Jet-Smooth 62 Chevrolet... Refreshing beauty with a restful ride!

Any more elegance would be extravagance. Here's all the room, refinement and riding comfort you could reasonably want. Rich new interiors tastefully topped by a striking slim-roof silhouette. A new choice of road-relishing V8 power. A road-gentling Jet-smooth ride. You could scarcely expect more at any price. So why pay more?

Time was when luxury cost a pretty penny. But not this time! The '62 Chevrolet has everything you could reasonably want in a car, including a reasonable price. The ride's so smooth we call it Jet-smooth (Full Coil suspension and over 700 chassis cushioners are responsible). The beauty stays beautiful because it's more than skin deep-new steel front fender underskirts, for instance, fend off rust. If power's your pleasure, you can command 409 hp* (6 engines in all to choose from, including standard 6 and V8). The doors swing wide, the mufflers are longer lived, and a high-capacity heater and defroster are standard equipment. And it's all beautifully packaged with Body by Fisher finesse. Sure, it sounds like luxury. That's what it is . . . except in price. Drop in on your Chevrolet dealer and see.

the new Chevy II

dependability never looked so dapper!

Here's a totally new line of cars that brings you all the virtues you know you can count on in the Chevrolet familyplus some surprises vou've never seen on any car before. Thrifty? Your choice of a frugal 4- or a spunky 6-cylinder engine (in most models). Roomy? Sedans seat six solid citizens, bag and baggage. Price? A real pleasant surprise!

You may have been looking for a car like this ever since you started driving! It's easy to park, pack and pay for. Easy to service. Easy to maintain. Very easy on gas. It's available in nine models . . . sedans, a hardtop, station wagons, even a convertible. And, for all its sensible new size, this Chevy II is roomy enough inside to make many more pretentious cars wonder how it's done. The ride's big-car smooth, too, thanks to a new kind of design-Mono-Plate rear springs. Sound good? Go see!...Chevrolet Division of General Motors, Detroit2, Mich.

Go ahead—drop in those big steak bones, corn cobs, artichoke leaves, and rinds. See just how fast they disappear. This trouble-free disposer simply won't jam, and it lasts twice as long as any other disposer.

The unique Waste King Universal liquefying chamber does it all fast, and so noiselessly you can talk above it in a whisper. Exclusive "lifetime grind control" insures perfect performance from the first day it's used till the sink wears out.

Only Waste King Universal has made two million disposers—a third of all the food waste disposers in use today. A demonstration proves Waste King Universal superiority. So ask your dealer.

And see the handsome Waste King Universal dishwashers...free-standing gas ranges...and built-in gas and electric ranges. Los Angeles 58, California.

WASTE KING UNIVERSAL found some moss in your garden or in the woods, use this to line the bottom of the glass, green side out; otherwise line it with damp, crumbled sphagnum. Then proceed with the planting as shown in the pictures below. Wipe the glass clean with damp cloth and cover it with a circular piece of glass. Your hardware dealer can have such a lid cut to order for about 50 cents.

Water the planting lightly and place the glass in a sunny window. Keep it covered most of the time, but open it a little occasionally when the glass is steamy. Water it only when the soil is no longer moist to the touch, and then very lightly. Take out of sun when flowers open.

A less dramatic but longer-lasting garden in a glass can be made from small foliage plants only—ferns, partridge berry, wintergreen, and so on.

The makings: king-size brandy glass with cover, plants, rich topsoil, small bits of charcoal to keep soil sweet, small stones, aquarium gravel, and miniature fence for landscape effect, and equipment for miniature garden making and maintenance.

The procedure: 1. Line onequarter of brandy glass with moss, green side out, or with damp sphagnum. 2. Add soil almost to edge of moss, with pieces of charcoal here and there, and place stones and gravel to produce interesting "terrain." 3. Set plants in place with small kitchen tongs. This is the step where you'll strive for artistry as a "landscapist." Use a pencil to position plants attractively.

'62 Corvair

Built for budget-minded people who go for sports car driving

Here, with saucier styling, tasteful new interiors and bigger new brakes, is the latest version of the car that proved itself in the fiercest rally competition going. If you like a car that goes with extra gusto—and the reflexes of a hummingbird—then read on and see why you and this new Corvair ought to become closer friends.

You'll like what we changed—and what we didn't change—about this new '62 Corvair. We've spruced up the interiors, sparked up the styling and included a bundle of goodies (a cigaret lighter, front door armrests, dual sunshades, an automatic choke—even a forced-air heater and defroster!) as standard equipment in all sedans, coupes and station wagons. You also get bigger, more efficient brakes that team up with Corvair's rear-engine traction to give you just about the surest-footed car that ever latched onto a road.

Which brings us to the things we haven't changed a bit. Corvair's quicksilver steering. Its jigsaw agility on corners. Its gutty aircooled engine. Your dealer's is the place to see for yourself. . . . Chevrolet Division of General Motors, Detroit 2, Michigan.

Corvair Monza

This is the one that started the bucket seat brigade. But it's what happens after you sit down behind the wheel of this Monza Club Coupe that the other makes can't match.

'62 CORVETTE

New go-for the goingest car in America!

Dramatic styling refinements and a smooth new 327-cubic-inch V8 make this the sweetest Corvette yet. See America's only true sports car at your dealer's. He's got just the one to convert you to a wind-in-the-face sports car enthusiast.

BACK AND FORTH—up and down—hurry, scurry! It's estimated that you take from 18,000 to 25,000 steps a day, depending on the size of your house and family. Many of these could be saved by extensions.

Just think of all the steps an extension phone will save you!

IN THE KITCHEN a phone lets you take and make calls while you keep one eye on the baby and the other on the back burner.

IN THE BEDROOM an extension phone ends dashing down halls and stairs, gives you privacy by day and precious security at night.

Step-saving extension phones wherever you need them cost very little. And they come in your choice of attractive colors and styles: the familiar wall and table models, or the new Princess—small in size with a dial that lights up. To order just call your Bell Telephone Business Office or ask your telephone man.

Assessing real estate has become one of the biggest juggling acts of the century. Every day, property owners all over the country are receiving higher tax bills, made even higher, in many cases, by inefficiency, politics, friendship, or just plain dishonesty.

Take a look, for example, at the citizen of a small city who was astonished when he received his latest tax bill. In a single year his bill had doubled. His home was assessed at $14,000. Yet an identical home next door was still assessed at $7000.

Assessors themselves will tell you of hundreds of cases in which skyhigh assessments are meted out to some owners, while others enjoy low assessments. If this condition exists in your area, you don't have to put up with it. You can "fight city hall." To protect your interests, you must understand why real estate taxes are climbing, and how they're determined.

WHY ASSESSMENTS ARE RISING

In the past few years property in hundreds of cities and rural areas has been revalued. In most cases the revaluation has been upward, resulting in a sharp boost in assessments and often in the taxes. If your home hasn't been reassessed recently, you can expect assessors to take a hard look at it very soon, particularly if you live in a town that's growing rapidly.

Many property owners believe that growth lowers taxes. Actually, assessors say, the addition of new industries, that may bring in large numbers of outsiders, is almost always followed by a rise in taxes. This is true, too, in population shifts from cities to suburbs, and from crowded suburbs to rural areas. The reason is that such growth usually results in demands for costly new schools, school buses, more roads and traffic lights, new sewers, more teachers, police, firemen, and other public employees. All of this must be paid for out of taxes.

Even if your home has been revalued recently, you can expect another revaluation shortly—and then another and another. To meet soaring costs—and equalize unfair tax burdens—some municipalities and states now upgrade assessments every ten years. But even this program is already out of date. Presently, scores of communities are hiking their rates every five years. Some are actually reviewing assessments every second year.

What does this mean to you? After revaluation do all assessments go up? Not necessarily. Here is what often happens according to assessors. In small communities 50 per cent go up, 20 per cent drop, and 30 per cent remain unchanged. In large communities the three categories are about equally divided.

Not too many years ago in many communities, homes were assessed at around 15 per cent of their market value. So a revaluation didn't mean too much—perhaps a tax increase of $10 a year on a middle-priced home. But many cities now assess homes at 40 or 50 per cent of market value, so a revaluation can mean a property tax raise of $100 to $200 or more a year.

"You can see," says one of the nation's top assessors, "why your dealings with your assessor are going to be more frequent. And they're going to cost you money—maybe much more than you're ever paid before."

HOW YOUR ASSESSMENT GOES UP

There are two ways a community can raise your real estate tax. The first, as we mentioned above, is by assessing your property at higher and higher percentages of market value. Aldro Jenks, a dean of American assessors and one of the best authorities, believes cities soon will assess at 100 per cent of market value. And in many cases the market value of your property is higher than when you bought it.

The second way your tax can rise is when the mill rate is increased. This is the number of dollars you pay for every thousand dollars of assessed value. Many communities that charged $20 per thousand a few years ago now charge $30, $40, and some even $60 per thousand. This tax inflation is bad enough even if it results in equitable assessments for every property owner in an area. But many assessors do a slapdash job (if you let them). The result: you may pay more than your fair share.

THE INEPT ASSESSORS

The way assessments are determined in your community can make or break your tax bill. In the old days, local politicians joked about "horseback appraisals." There would be a board of three or five assessors. These men held full-time jobs and did their assessing on a part-time basis. Each would ride through his section of town and jot down values without getting off his horse or checking the opinions of his fellow assessors. Today, this has given way in many towns to what some assessors call "windshield appraisals." They value your property without leaving their cars.

On top of this, many assessors have no training, are paid as little as $50 per year, and are anxious to finish the job.

Some are merely political lackeys who simply sit down with the voters' list, and settle assessments right in their own offices on the basis of your political affiliation, according to a Midwestern authority. There are, of course, many fine, scrupulously fair assessors. But even if the assessors in your town are honest and try to do a good job, they can cost you a great deal of money over the years if they aren't trained. (continued)

You Get More Than Time from a General Electric Clock. What Better Reason for Giving One!

Progress Is Our Most Important Product

Here's what their errors can do to your tax bill. According to many local assessors, a 10 per cent error in appraising your property is considered "good." (Some errors run as high as 50 per cent.) Today an error can cost you $30. Suppose your house has a true market value of $20,000 and is assessed at 50 per cent of value, or $10,000. At a mill rate of $30 per $1000, this means a tax of $300.

But if your assessor made a 10 per cent error, and valued your house at $22,000, your tax jumps to $330. This may not seem like a large increase, but remember that an uncorrected error continues for years. In five years alone it would cost you $150. And a 50 per cent error would cost $1500. This is pointed out by Peter Marsele, the full-time assessor recently hired by fast-growing Bloomfield, Connecticut.

- · What you should tell him while he's checking.

HOW THE REPUTABLE ASSESSOR WORKS

Honest assessors are, of course, troubled by the slipshod job done in so many communities. They are desperately trying to correct the evils. Several national organizations, notably the International Association of Assessing Officers, are waging a vigorous fight to eliminate politics, improve ethics, and train men in what suddenly has become a highly complex business. Colleges and state tax departments are cooperating. As a result, states such as Connecticut, Wisconsin, California, and Maryland are blazing a trail of fair, honest appraisals.

Here's what a good assessor looks for in your house:

When he visits a home, he may take along a "street card." These cards, used in many communities, contain up to 500 spaces where he can fill in information about the home. Such details as your heating plant, roofing, plumbing, wiring, and general construction are covered.

He wants to know who built your house, since he knows who the shoddy builders are and who builds quality houses. Next, he'll ask what you paid for the house, and check it against his records.

After a quick look at the exterior, he goes immediately to the basement. Here he examines

The cellar. An assessor who makes a "windshield examination" may assume you have a full basement, when it's only partially excavated.

Foundation and joists. He checks for cracks, decay, and termite damage.

Heat. You may get a reduction if you have hot air or steam, rather than hot water.

Wiring. If you have an older house, the assessor may note F.O. (functional obsolescence) and this may alter your assessment.

Pipes. He may deduct up to 10 per cent on plumbing values if he finds galvanized pipes. In fact, careful assessors sometimes find that disreputable builders install copper pipe

whereit shows, but use secondhand galvanized pipe in the walls.

A careful assessor also checks to see if you have the playroom fireplace that may be noted in his records. If not, he might deduct, say, $100. And if there isn't any playroom at all, he might deduct up to $3000.

When he goes upstairs, the good assessor always carefully checks your kitchen. "The kitchen takes the worst beating of all rooms," says Eugene Murphy, a member of Appraisal Consultants of Hartford, Connecticut. "If it's well maintained, it's a sure bet the whole house is in pretty good condition."

The assessor will check the number of rooms and baths. If two homes are otherwise alike, he'll put a higher assessment on the home where the master bedroom has its own bath, rather than an off-the-hall bathroom.

You may find the assessor is taking a close look at the cornice. "If we find looseness where the shingles join the wood or poor carpentry, we often make a considerable allowance," one assessor reports. "The cornice is another real key to the condition of many homes.'

It's very important for you or a member of your family to accompany the assessor through your home. You're the only ones who can point out hidden flaws.

"There are many things we don't see," one assessor admits. "You're entitled to consideration if you have a wet basement. Yet in dry weather, we may not see water stains. If your basement gets wet, you should tell us."

If your water is rusty or the supply is inadequate you should have the assessor open the tap. A good assessor will do this automatically, and he'll make an allowance if you're entitled to it.

Even if your home doesn't have hidden defects, you should go around with the assessor. If you don't, he might tend to value your house the same as a neighbor's with a similar design. But if you know the other house has plaster walls, and yours are drywall, be sure to point this out.

You should also call attention to any differences in the number of porches, or types of windows. One owner won an $80 assessment reduction by pointing out his home lacked the bay window his neighbor's had.

This is why Ken Athoe, another top expert, says that, "you should never accept an appraisal unless the man has actually been inside your home." A good assessor, incidentally, should spend at least 15 to 30 minutes checking your house.

You are entitled to an allowance, hood, or for factory sounds and excessive noises-as along some of the new turnpikes.

Another important point is to be sure the assessor doesn't over-estimate your income. He may, since he can be misled by appearances. Some draw the wrong conclusion when they see nice furnishings which an years by careful economy. They may get the wrong impression, too, from a well-maintained car, or from two cars-even though they may be a necessity. There are always some assessors who will work on a soakthe-rich philosophy.

To be sure your income doesn't confuse the picture make sure the assessor has

It is equivalent to a library of 1,000 books, bringing you the knowledge and authority of world-recognized leaders in every field.

Just think of a subject—and you'll find it in the Encyclopaedia Britannica—whether it is information on the rules of a sport, the background of a religion, how to build a brick arch in a fireplace, or the science of launching a guided missile.

The new Britannica almost "televises" information to you, with 23,500 magnificent photographs, maps, and drawings. In every respect, Britannica is the largest and most complete reference set published in America, containing 27,919 pages and over 39,000,000 words.

Symbol of a good home

Encyclopaedia Britannica cannot help but have a lasting effect on you as well as on the growth and development of your children in school and in later life. Benjamin Franklin said: "An investment in knowledge pays the best interest," and Britannica gives you the accumulated knowledge of the world in clear, easy-to-read language and superb illustrations. It is essential in every home where education is valued and respected.

WHY DO SOME FAMILIES SEEM TO GET MORE OUT OF LIFE?

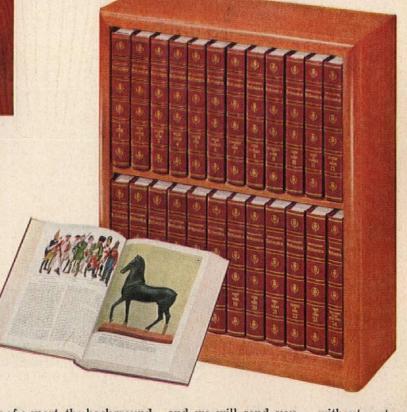

Some families glow with the pure enjoyment of life. Everyone who knows them is warmed by their vitality and friendliness. For such a family, life is good and fun and exciting.

And every day, their lives grow more interesting . . . more productive . . . more meaningful.

Typically, both parents and children take a deep interest in each other and the ever-changing world around them. They work together as a team, sharing interests and opinions to strengthen the bonds of understanding and respect that help build a happy home.

This kind of family usually owns Encyclopaedia Britannica. And their set is continually in use. As in so many lively families, "looking it up in Britannica" has become a familiar habit at homework time, during family discussions, and whenever complete, authoritative information is needed on almost every conceivable topic. They have learned to rely on Britannica for background data on current events, politics, religion and history, for help with hobbies, and for educational, enjoyable reading at any time.

Where you find a family that enjoys life, you'll usually find the Britannica helping parents and children fulfill their desires for knowledge, self-improvement, and a better way of life.

Neal J. Hardy, FHA Commissioner

The lot I want to buy costs $3500, and I would like to build a $15,000 house on it. Would the lot have to be paid for before I applied for an FHA loan to build the house, or could the loan cover both the house and lot?

An FHA-insured mortgage covers both house and lot, and there must be no liens outstanding against the property at the time FHA insures it.

If FHA appraised the house and lot together at $18,500, you would need to make a down payment of at least $800 (plus closing costs), and FHA could insure a mortgage of not more than $17,700.

If the lot and the proposed house were acceptable to FHA, and if you were acceptable as a mortgagor, FHA would issue a commitment to your lender to insure a mortgage on the property in a specified amount, based on the FHA estimate of value. On receiving the commitment the lender would make the necessary advances to you as construction proceeded, and FHA would make inspections during construction to see that the plans and specifications were complied with. When the house was completed, the mortgage would be endorsed for insurance.

I have heard that this is a good time to buy a home. Are FHA down payments and monthly payments lower now than they were a year ago? The home I have in mind is priced at $22,000.

Yes. The Housing Act of 1961, which became law on June 30, has made it possible to buy a home by making a down payment of as little as 3 per cent of $15,000 of value (as appraised by FHA), plus 10 per cent of the next $5000 of value, plus 25 per cent of the value above $20,000. The act also increased the maximum mortgage amount from $22,500 to $25,000.

If FHA appraised your house and lot at $22,000, the minimum down payment today could be as little as $1500. Under the formula in use a year ago it would have been at least $2100.

Of course, the small down payment means that your mortgage would be larger—$20,500, compared to $19,-900 last year. But last year the interest rate could have been as high as 5¾ per cent; at present it is limited to not more than 5¼ per cent. So, today your monthly payment to interest and principal on a 30-year mortgage of $20,500 at 51/4 per cent would be $113.37. Last year, on a 30-year mortgage of $19,900 at 53/4 per cent it would have been $116.22.

Also, if your mortgage was approved by FHA before construction of the house was begun, your mortgage today might have a term as long as 35 years. On a 35year mortgage of $20,500 at 51/4 per cent, the monthly payment to principal and interest would be $106.81.

In addition to the amount credited to principal and interest, the monthly payment on an FHA-insured mortgage includes the FHA mortgage insurance premium, estimated taxes, and property insurance pre-miums. It may also include items such as ground rents and special assessments. (continued on page 73)

BE A SHOW-OFF WITH YOUR COLLECTION

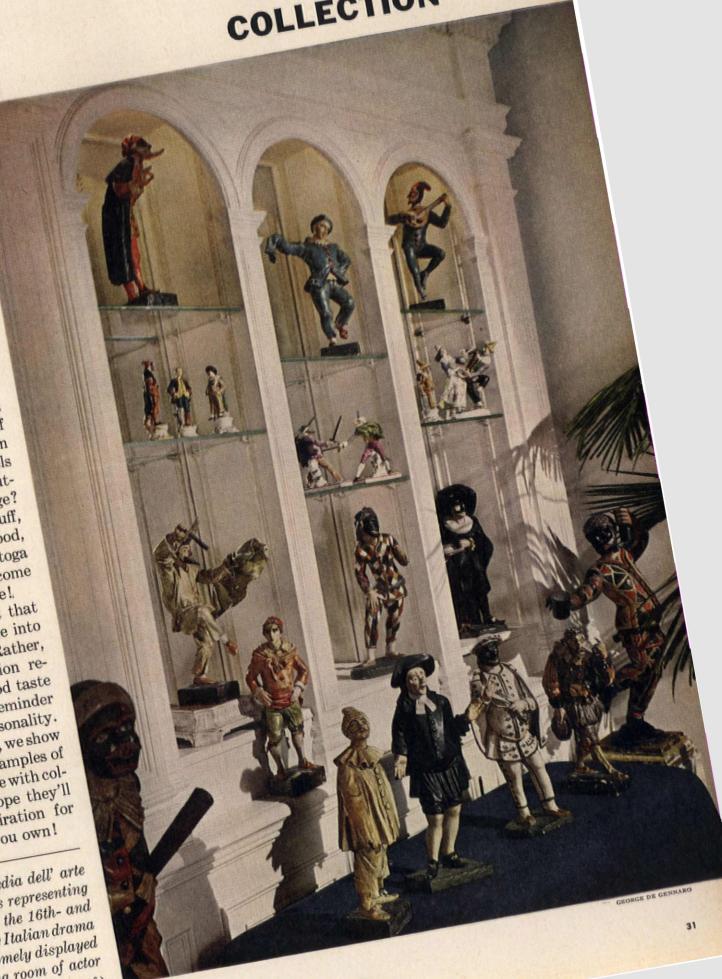

Are you one of the notso-rare species who call themselves collectors? Do you haunt the secondhand stores, ferret out auction sales, scour the countryside in quest of a find?
Welcome aboard!

The Big Search is a fascinating game. But we think there is more to collecting than just collecting. A collection should be seen, enjoyed and, most important, form an integral part of your decorating scheme. What fun is it to have four cartons of coin glass stashed away in your attic or three barrels of weathered decoys cluttering up the garage? Are you a Civil War buff, a fancier of Wedgwood, a push-over for Conestoga bells? Come out, come out wherever you are!

We don't suggest that you turn your home into a musty museum. Rather, have your collection reflect your own good taste and be a quiet reminder of your own personality.

On these pages, we show you beautiful examples of what can be done with collections. We hope they'll give you inspiration for the one that you own!

Commedia dell' arte figurines representing characters of the 16th- and 17th-century Italian drama are handsomely displayed in the living room of actor Joseph Cotten. (See page 6.)

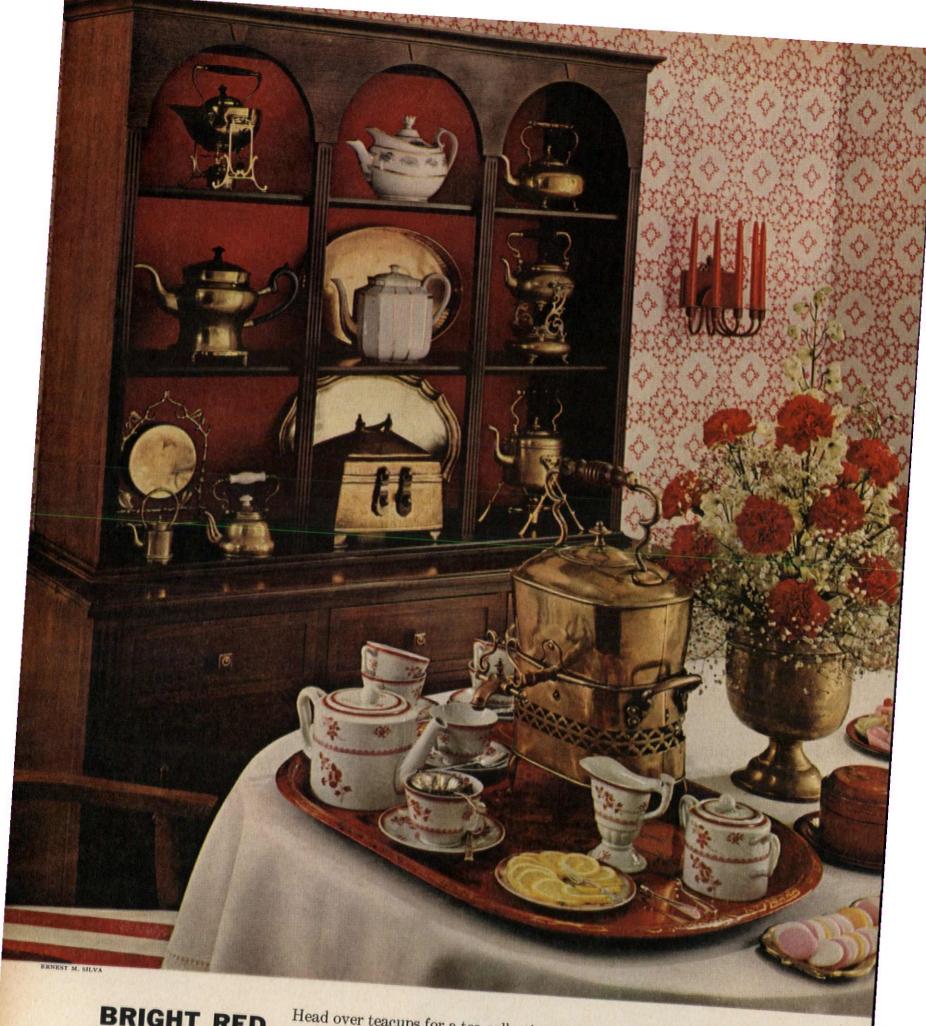

BOTTLES OF COLORFUL BEAUTY

Thirty-two years ago, Charles B. Gardner of New London, Connecticut, didn't know a pontil mark from a pucella. (A pontil mark is the distinguishing rough spot found on old blown glass; a pucella is a glass blower's tool.) Mr. Gardner was a gun collector, not a bottle collector. But a chance visit to the home of a glass-loving friend put bottles on his brain, and he promptly gave up pistols for pickle jars and demijohns.

This shimmering window is just a peek at Mr. Gardner's collection. Today he owns some 4500 rare bottles. In order to house his treasures, he built a two-story addition to his home, especially designed to display his bottles at their decorative best. Here is sparkling proof of the rewards of bottle collecting. You don't have to know anything about the history and mechanics of glassmaking to appreciate this fascinating mosaic of color, shape, and pattern. Artistically aligned on sunlit shelves, the bottles glitter like jewels. The sun's rays play on warm glowing ambers, pale crystaly blues, brilliant ruby reds, deep vibrant greens. Framed advertisements, price lists, and such from old glass factories decorate the walls.

Glass bottles, with their subtle coloring and interesting shapes, have become a favorite of contemporary decorators. Inexpensive reproductions of authentic designs are available for the noncollector. But if you've anything of the collector about you, beware of the first pretty bottle with a pontil mark you pick up in an antique shop—it may be the beginning of a life-long career of bottle collecting that, like Mr. Gardner's, will mean adding an extra wing! (Bottles identified on page 71.)

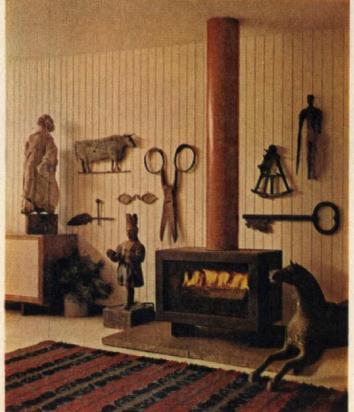

Bright-colored bottles in every shape imaginable, from fish to Indian braves to rolling pins, shimmer in the sun on shelves especially built for collection.

BRIGHT RED SETS OFF A COLLECTION

Head over teacups for a tea collection? See what a vivid red background does for this gleaming collection of brass teakettles, trays, a large Indian box, dinner gong, and a treasured porcelain tea service. The traditionally styled china cabinet is a happy choice for this small dining room. If it's a pewter collection you're in love with, it will show to best advantage against bright blues or greens. Try a pastel color to frame delicate, flowery porcelain!

WINDSOR CHAIRS COME TO TEA

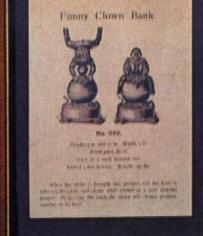

When Mrs. Doris S. Woolf of Houston, Texas, entertains, she makes wonderful use of her prized American Windsor chairs. In the dining room, there are a fan-back side chair and a rare highchair. In the archway and going clockwise, you'll see a comb-back armchair with carved ears, a bow back, a brace-back side chair, another bow chair and an armchair. Mrs. Woolf found her prizes in all parts of the country.

AMERICANA ON MODERN WALL

These delightful bits of early American life give character, charm, and texture to a contemporary interior. Against the paneled wall are early trade signs including the cigar store Indian, the tailor's scissors, the optician's eyeglasses, and the locksmith's key. Also shown are various weather vanes, a ship's figurehead, a quadrant, and a rocking horse.

YOU CAN
FUN OF
PENNY
BANKS

Penny-pinching was fun in Victorian days. As a reward for saving, kids could watch a bunny's ears flop, a clown do handsprings on a globe, smiling Uncle Sam load his carpetbag, a "speaking dog" wag his tail. These 19th century mechanical banks and "still" banks make marvelous decorating accessories today. You might display a sweeping collection of banks, along with old patent papers, catalogue pages, and the like, against a colorful burlap background. You might set just two or three eye-catchers on a mantel or a shelf in a child's room. Patented originals can still be found in secondhand and antique shops or at auction sales. The average price is $35—less, if you're lucky; as high as $1000 for rare banks. Reproductions cast from original molds sell for $15 or so. More about these banks and how to use them on page 72.

FANCIFUL FANS GIVE A FEMININE TOUCH TO VICTORIAN DÉCOR

However, Mrs. Goldman's collection is not a hodgepodge of bits and pieces. The fans are the basis for a beautifully co-ordinated decorating theme, which was devised by Mrs. Goldman with the help of decorator Archie Bland, A.I.D. Attractive framing and a symmetrical arrangement provide a good balance for the curvesome Victorian furniture. The colors of the mats add restraint to the decorating scheme while the simple black and gold frames show off the fans to perfection. (More about these fans on page 70.)

elaborately carved Victorian sofa and chair, Oriental rug, and silver tea service blend beautifully with the collection of ivory, tortoise shell, lace, sandalwood, and sequined fans. Small fan on table is one of Mrs. Goldman's favorites.

HARMONY ON DISPLAY

Collections of rare wooden pieces such as these are exciting to use decoratively. The glowing tones and beautiful grains blend with almost any decorating scheme. Here, in the home of folk singer Susan Reed, antique musical instruments are ideally displayed in a recess between the fireplace and window. Miss Reed is shown playing an Irish harp (she received her first when she was.14). Among the pieces on the wall behind her are a Chinese lute, Kentucky dulcimer, German lute, Austrian zither, Pennsylvania Dutch dulcimer, and a Liberian harp.

FOR A MAN'S ROOM

Another handsome collection of wooden pieces are these crude but beautiful tools and implements owned by Arthur Burke of Fairfield, Connecticut. They're a natural for Mr. Burke, who in his spare time also likes to design furniture. The bold felt background is appropriate for the strong lines of the tools, while the deep red color reflects the warm tones of the wood. Informal arrangement of the items permits easy addition of new ones without destroying the existing visual balance. The table of Spanish design is particularly intriguing, looks almost as if it were a product of these tools. Tools identified on page 72.

ADVICE

■ If you are about to launch into the busi-FOR ness of collecting seriously, you should never attempt it without first know-BUDDING ing something about your subject. Whether it's butter molds or COLLECTOR jack-in-the-pulpit vases that have caught your fancy, there is no excuse for not knowing what you are about before you begin. With all the literature available today on antiques—books on specialized subjects, antiques magazines, articles in other periodicals—there is little reason to be in the dark about the things you like. Before you buy, it will pay you to scout the big antique shows, the museums, and the growing number of restored houses with authentic period furnishings.

Piling up knowledge as you go along is part of the fun and satisfaction of collecting and is the one way the confirmed collector becomes an authority in this field.

However, it's one thing to read about antiques, and another to recognize them "in the flesh." Many antique dealers become authorities in their special lines because they handle antique pieces daily. Their fingers learn to identify old glass by the feel and the ring. Or they can recognize the mellow patina of old wood. They know that weight, the finish of edges, size, and shape often have a lot to do with authenticating the real thing. Dealers also have an opportunity to compare the better examples with the poorer ones or with out-and-out copies. In fact, the best way you can teach yourself about the authenticity of a piece is to examine—even buy a known reproduction for comparison.

There is another thing to keep in mind if you are starting on a collecting career. What will you do with your collection if your interest lags? Will it become something to write off as Mother's Folly or will it be worth as much as you paid for it along the way? Over the years it should be worth more. But unless you have decided to avoid trash, or other worthless things, it won't matter how many hundreds of them you have;

body handed Harry T. Peters very much when he started picking up the common Currier and Ives prints early in the 1900's!

the collection will be worth little except to some unusual soul with a similar hankering.

Of course, people can get excited over almost anything.

Sometimes with good reason. No-

While many of us would like to go in for expensive items—Gaudy Dutch, Prattware, Georgian silver, Sandwich glass—there are many areas not yet too expensive which are well worth the time and money spent on them. Samplers, for example, are not too expensive and are antiques in the best sense of the word. You can still get a nice piece of late Canton for $10. Late Adams Rose china is almost as satisfying as the early variety and not so expensive. Souvenir spoons offer the collector plenty of opportunity to specialize with little outlay of money.

The question often arises about selecting only perfect pieces. Is it a mistake to buy a piece that is nicked, flaked, cracked, or otherwise not "proof" as the dealers call it? In principle the answer is yes, in practice, no, it's not a mistake if the piece is a rare one or otherwise valuable. The reason is this: with the great onslaught on the antique market today, most of the perfect pieces are disappearing. What is left will have to be those pieces passed over in former years, the slightly chipped Waterford compote for instance, or the handsome Portobello pitcher which has been skillfully mended or riveted together. No mended piece, of course, will bring the same price as a proof piece if you should want to dispose of it in the near future, but over the years, as good pieces get even scarcer, it may well be worth as much as you would pay for the same piece in perfect condition today.

Prices of antiques will probably remain high as the supply diminishes, so always buy the very best you can afford in whatever category you select. If your choice is good, you will never lose out, nor your heirs after you.

APOTHECARY BOTTLES AND JARS ENLIVEN A FAMILY ROOM

Deep blue, amber, green, and clear apothecary bottles are a sprightly color accent in the home of Bob and Betsy Dring of Prairie Village, Kansas. The colored bottles were once used to protect drugs from sunlight; the "show globes" were filled with colored liquid for display. The Drings also have an assortment of porcelain jars with lovely painted designs surrounding the Latin inscriptions, tin and pottery tobacco jars, a mortar and pestle, and a druggist's scale.

A TINY CLAPBOARD THAT GREW AND GREW AND GREW

This charming old-brick colonial wasn't always the beauty it is today. When it was built, about 1938, it was just a plain-Jane clapboard cottage. The Frank Willinghams, of College Park, Georgia, purchased it in 1951, and have been changing and remodeling it ever since. The advent of three small Willinghams—Carol, Stephen, and David—made it imperative to expand.

Although the cottage had a den and a screened porch, neither was large enough to provide play space for three active children. So the first project was to excavate the basement. A delightful playroom with plenty of room for toys and hobbies was the result.

The second step in remodeling was to combine the den and kitchen. This gave them a family room-kitchen with plenty of storage space including a place for TV. Since there had been only three closets in the whole house the new storage was a real boon.

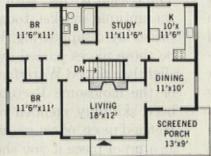

Next the living room, dining room, and porch were made into one really spacious area for living and entertaining. A small alcove in this room, near the entry, provided a perfect setting for the organ Mr. Willingham had been storing in the attic.

The last stage in the remodeling was the addition of a bedroom wing and brick siding. This wing has two bedrooms and a bath.

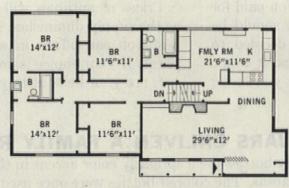

Unpretentious clapboard house, bought by the Willinghams in 1951 soon after they were married, was perfect for their needs then. But three children later, the house seemed to have shrunk considerably.

New wing gives the Willinghams all the room they need for a family of five. The second bath is convenient to both bedrooms.

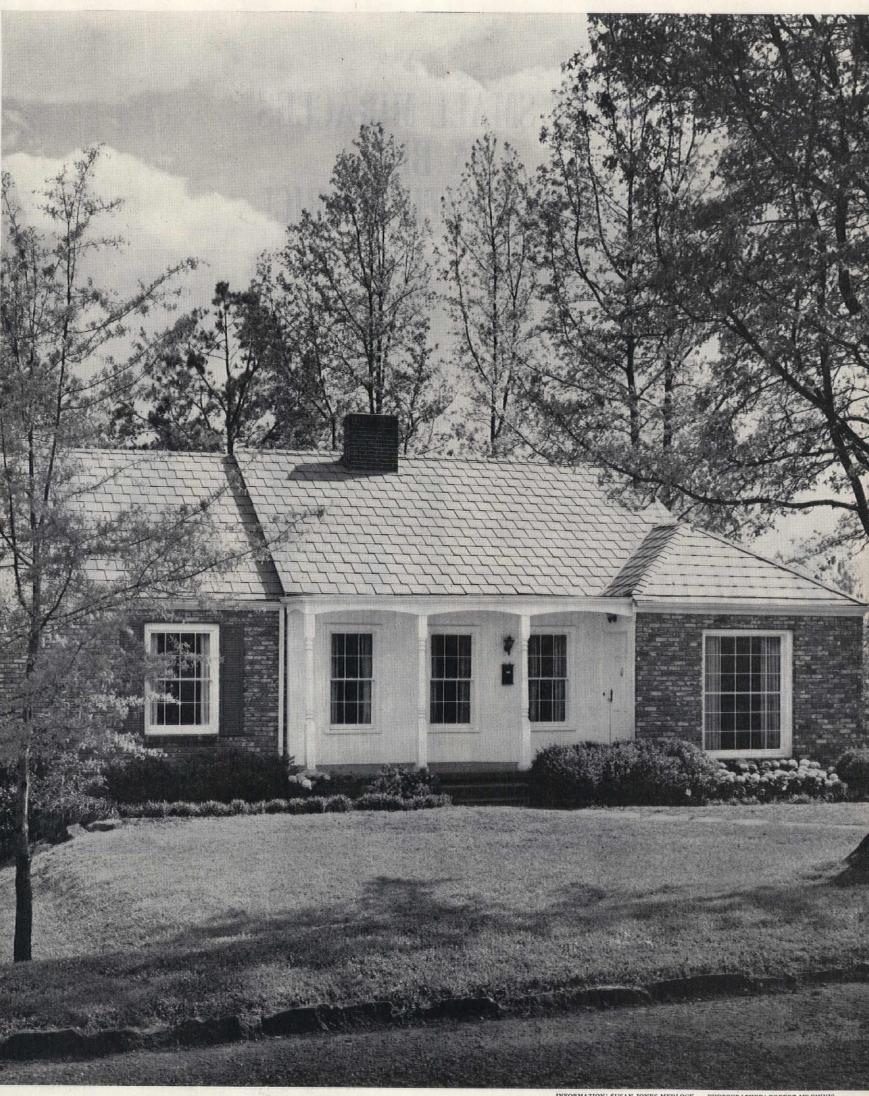

Original plan had only two bedrooms, three small closets. The first change was to excavate the basement and build a playroom—perfect place for the children to play in a small house.

The new look. You'd hardly believe this is the same home. A complete face lifting with old brick, small-paned windows, green shutters, white vertical siding, and carved posts provides an authentic colonial flavor. In order to keep remodeling costs at a minimum, the Willinghams did most of the work themselves.

WHAT SMALL MIRACLES CAN BE WORKED WITH FABRIC!

Crisp plaid chintz used for café curtains, and for dado, door, and shutter panels, gives this bright nursery a perfectly co-ordinated look. Amusing shutters have "paper dolls" cut out and backed with felt. To adapt, you might cut dolls from felt and paste them on.

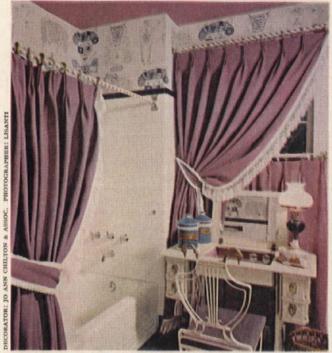

A lovely traditional print enhances these furnishings, but the genius stroke is the way an ordinary window has been handled to create the high, elegant lines of yesteryear. The valance, contoured to the fabric pattern, is mounted well above window. Soft fringe adds richness to the cotton print.

There's more to choosing fabric than picking something pretty to suit your color scheme. How much you use, and the way you cut, drape, and trim it, these are what make the difference. If you're handy with scissors and needle, you'll have no trouble duplicating or adapting these ideas. Consider ways you might use fabric and matching wallpaper. Choose contrasting or matching piping, fringe, or braid to give your work a professionally finished look. Use fabric in unexpected places—on door panels, as a dado, as a ceiling border. Let these suggestions help you to create bright, attractive fabric effects with shaped valances and bed canopies.

A pumpkin-colored lambrequin at the window and a canopy over the bed give color and design to a young girl's room. Striped fabric has been quartered and fit for perky twin pillows and used again to bind the lamp shade. The same stripe covers a little chair (not shown).

Make a big splash in your bathroom décor with felt and fringe. (Don't forget to line your shower curtain with clear plastic.) Felt comes 72 inches wide, and is easily pinch-pleated. Old sewing machine was painted for a dressing table; blue apothecaries add a bright accent.

A little fabric goes a long way when combined with matching wallpaper. In the home of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Woods of Pacific Palisades, California, a fringe-trimmed cotton taffeta swag, with tambour curtains, makes a graceful window treatment. Two matching Victorian chairs stand by an antique desk, painted the blue of the fabric.

DECORATOR: HARRY GLADSTONE INTERIORS PHOTOGRAPHER: GEORGE DE GENNARO

Hand quilting adds richness and texture to fabric. Here, eagles and stars have been outlined on a valance, which was cut to emphasize the pattern. Oval pillows, too, are shaped to frame the eagle. The blue piping on the valance makes a nice contrast to the deep red of the fabric. It's details such as these that make for decorating perfection.

EVEN GRANDMOTHERS NEED FAMILY ROOMS

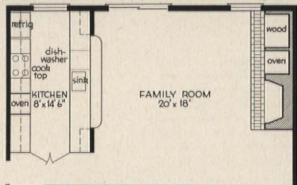

This hospitable family room belongs to decorator Mildred Newton Norton of Red Bank, New Jersey. Her granddaughters, Cathy, 4, and Susan, 8, spend many mornings playing here or on the adjoining patio. Her other grandchildren, Jane, 13, and John, 18, are apt to stop by at any time for news and snacks. The room is also a favorite meeting place for Mrs. Norton's own circle of friends. There's a large welcoming fireplace with built-in oven and grill, and a handy pass-through kitchen opposite.

The 18x20' room takes its color scheme from the print-covered club chairs which reflect the mellow tones of the used-brick fireplace. Accessories include a family portrait over the mahogany butler's desk, an old red French tole coalbin used as an end table, a tea canister which serves as a table lamp, and a Staffordshire Louis Napoleon figure.

Shopping Information, page 74

Dining table at one end of room is convenient to passthrough kitchen. Sliding glass door leads to the patio.

Family room could easily serve as an apartment wing.

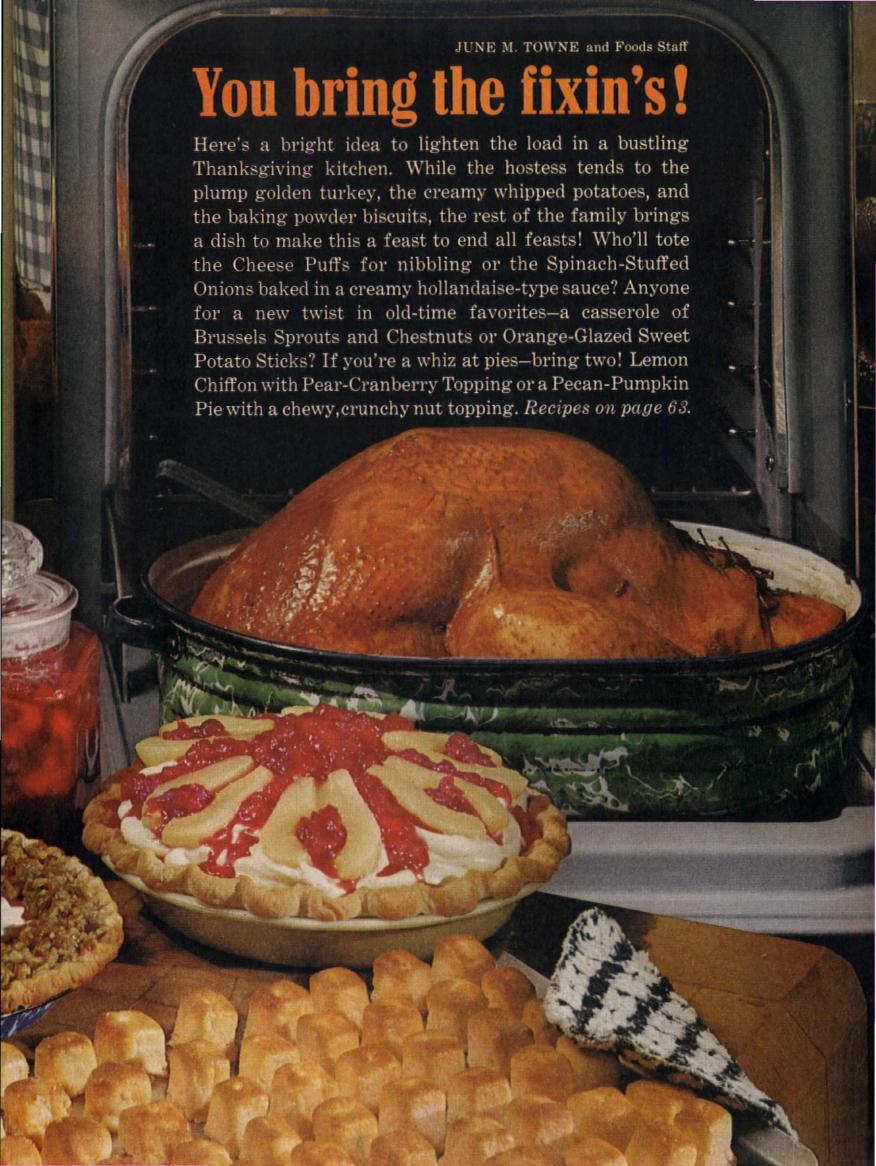

Fireplace wall of used brick has built-in oven and grill. Above the wood storage is a spotlighted niche for the imposing eagle which Mrs. Norton found in an old post office. Coffee table was formerly the top of a spinet piano.

■ Why do Americans drink over 400 million cups of coffee every day? We're a nation of coffee lovers. That's why. There are wives who won't lift an eyelid without it, husbands who pound tables for it. Secretaries won't type without it, truck drivers won't drive without it. The cheerful coffee break starts your day or ends it, peps you up or calms you down, stimulates good conversation or makes talk unnecessary. Why then is the art of brewing a decent cup of coffee such an elusive thing? Why do happily married couples squabble over it, hearty men re-enlist in the Navy for it? Why do some perk it, others drip it, still wave of ecstasy can make your kaffeeklatsch neighbor's hair stand on end. We've come up with some conclusions though—and we've our own American Home Testing Center to prove them. Whether your taste runs to strong, weak, or in between, there are four things every good cup of coffee should be. It should be clear, full-bodied, aromatic, and be served at a piping 185° F. How to brew such a cup of coffee? The answers are many but not complex, as the following pages will prove. We have found there are two major factors that determine the difference between good coffee and poor—the cleanliness of your coffee

How's the coffee at your house? If it falls short of what you call perfect, it's time to find out what you're doing wrong. As we've said, the unclean coffee maker is the most common cause of poor coffee. Oils in coffee do more than stain the inside of your coffee pot; they add a rancid or bitter taste to the cup, too. Just rinsing isn't enough, no matter how automatic your equipment may be. It takes hot suds, a brush for spouts and tubes, and an occasional treatment with one of the special stain removers. Be sure you follow the directions on the label, rinse well with hot water, and dry thoroughly.

The second major factor, your method of preparation, brings up several important points.

First, and foremost, is the coffee itself—the kind you buy, how you keep it, how you measure it.

The coffee you use is a matter of personal taste. Of the 100 kinds of coffee beans grown, no one is perfect in every way. Some are more flavorful, some more aromatic, and they vary widely in price according to how plentiful they are. Finding a blend and roast you really like is a matter of trial and error. If you like the coffee a friend serves better than you do your own, by all means ask what brand it is and try it.

Though there is some truth in the claim that more expensive coffees are more full-bodied or aromatic, price is no absolute guarantee of pleasure in your cup.

Make sure it's fresh. Fresh coffee makes the finest brew, so buy it in sizes you can use within a week, if possible. Heat, air, and moisture rob ground coffee of flavor and aroma, so cover it tightly and keep it cool, preferably in your refrigerator.

Buy the right grind for your coffee maker—coarse or regular for perked, filtered, or steeped coffee; fine or drip grind for dripolators and most vacuum pots.

If your brewing methods vary, consider grinding your own coffee with an electric coffee mill. Just dial the grind you want as you need it. You can also grind coffee in some electric blenders. The instruction booklet explains how.

How you measure, again, depends on individual taste. The Coffee Brewing Institute advises two level tablespoons (a standard coffee measure) per six-ounce cup, but you may prefer a bit more or less. Do measure, however, for consistent results.

Your coffee maker is the next important factor on the list. Take your choice of five basic types.

It all begins with a coffee maker! Here are a few of many you can buy (l. to r.): 10-cup automatic vacuum; 8-cup glass percolator; automatic percolators in 12- and 8-cup sizes; 8-cup percolator; 9-cup automatic; quart-size (9-cup) filter flask; 30-cup automatic perk; 10-cup enamelware boiler; 10-cup automatic perk; 9-cup dripolator. Shopping information, page 74.

A percolator is hard to match for aroma. It extracts flavor gradually by spraying hot water over coarsely ground coffee and fills the house with fragrance. Percolators come in all sizes, from two cups to over 40. Automatics rank high on gift lists, particularly with hostesses who love the convenience of brewing coffee and keeping it hot without clock-watching. But don't let all this lead you into bad habitssuch as forgetting to take used grounds out of the pot when perking is done or neglecting to unplug it when it nears empty. Read directions for filling, measuring, and cleaning, follow them faithfully, and you'll be rewarded with consistently delicious coffee.

Automatic features may include adjustable flavor controls to set for desired strength, "hold" or "reheat" settings, signal lights that announce coffee is done, and even gauges that show how much is left. Most hold the brew at nearperfect serving temperature, so long as they contain at least two cups. And many are immersible.

You can also brew a wonderful cup of coffee in a nonautomatic percolator, of course, but you'll have to keep one eye on the clock. To avoid over-perking, allow six to eight minutes on low heat.

A vacuum coffee maker leaves no room for the error of forgetting to remove used grounds, for water and coffee (fine grind) go into separate containers and bubble together for only one to three minutes. You can't pour without removing the top bowl.

Electric automatic models are generally chrome-plated. Rangetop models, most often made of glass, come in sizes up to 12 cups. Major difference, of course, is in timing and regulating the heat.

A dripolator eliminates clockwatching altogether, since it operates on the law of gravity. You can buy one in any size, from one cup to 20 or more. Most are made of aluminum, though some have ceramic bottoms that can double as teapots. The drip method makes excellent coffee, so long as you use the right proportions of drip grind coffee and boiling water. The equipment is also easy to clean.

The filtered method produces the clearest coffee of all, but takes a little more time and attention. The equipment consists of a glass flask, available in sizes from one pint (1-3 cups) to three quarts (6-20 cups), and special paper filters that are used only once. Regular grind coffee goes into the filter and hot water is poured over it very gradually to extract flavor. Because filtered coffee is so clear, it can be held at serving temperature almost indefinitely without flavor change. Boiling will ruin it, however, so a special "waterbath" is used to keep it hot. The flask stands in a low pan of simmering water. Even if the water boils, the coffee in the flask won't. Therefore, you can reheat coffee or keep it hot indefinitely.

A coffee boiler for making boiled or steeped coffee is usually reserved for camping out these days, but there are those who insist nothing can compare with it. Real experts add an egg, shell and all, to make the brew clear. Another trick is to add a dash of cold water to the boiler to settle the grounds before pouring. If you're a novice, check your favorite cook book for a steeped coffee recipe.

Here are some more points to think about:

Start with cold water fresh from the tap. Hot water lines may add an off-taste. Water you like to drink makes the best coffee.

Timing is critical in brewing coffee to taste the same every time. Controlled timing is one of the big selling points of automatic coffee makers. The idea is to extract all the good coffee flavor, but none of the bitterness. In a range-top percolator it takes six to eight minutes, but only one to three minutes in the vacuum method. If you're brewing another pot of coffee in an automatic, however, cool it down by filling it with cold water first. Otherwise, the timing will be affected, making the coffee weak.

Temperature also affects coffee flavor. Too much heat makes the brew bitter, cloudy, and acrid-smelling. Electric coffee makers regulate heat automatically, of course, but range-top equipment needs close watching. Though most methods start with bringing water to a boil, it's time to reduce the heat the moment water and coffee get together.

Remove the grounds immediately after brewing. Used grounds tend to cloud coffee, make it bitter, and absorb its fine aroma.

Serve coffee freshly brewed. If it must wait, keep it over very low heat. Ideal holding temperature is 185° F., well below simmering. Most automatic coffee makers maintain about this temperature unless contents are very low. For the same effect in ordinary coffee makers, try the waterbath idea. In any case, don't let coffee boil and ruin the flavor.

Does it have aroma? Aroma may be affected by the coffee itself or your brewing method and technique. Freshness guarantees fragrance. Exposed to air, ground coffee loses aroma and even picks up foreign odors. Aroma varies according to blend and roast, too. If you're dissatisfied, experiment with a new brand.

The way you brew coffee affects aroma, though not necessarily in the cup. A dripolator gives off practically no aroma, compared with perking. If, instead of mouth-watering fragrance, your percolator is emitting a scorched odor, you may be perking too fast or too long. And, incidentally, did you really wash it last time?

Weak flavor could mean too little coffee, but not always. If you use a drip or filter coffee maker, the brew may just need stirring to distribute flavor evenly. In an automatic percolator, failing to use cold water or dropping coffee down the stem will make the brew weak.

If your coffee is bitter, it usually means you've extracted too much from too little coffee. Try more coffee, less time, and perhaps a coarser grind or lighter roast. Bitterness could also be a sign that your coffee maker needs thorough cleaning. Often it's just the result of keeping coffee too hot or too long. (continued on page 70)

TURKEY ROUND-UP

Of course you're having turkey for Thanksgiving—it's the traditional fare—and as American as Plymouth Rock or apple pie. The size of the gathering at your house determines the kind and the amount of turkey you will buy. The small family may choose a small turkey or parts from a bigger bird. For larger families there is a wide range of turkey sizes. Newest among turkey choices is the class called "Turkey Fryer-Roasters," marketed when about half grown—3 to 4 months old. Ready to cook, these very young birds may weigh from 3 to 8 pounds. The smaller sizes may be disjointed and fried, or split and broiled, like chicken—by adjusting cooking time to thickness of pieces. Any of these, stuffed and roasted, is a fine choice for any dinner.

Those who wish to concentrate on all dark or white meat will find the quarters their best choice. Whichever you buy, remember the rule of thumb—for each generous serving of roasted whole turkey (you may need more than one serving per person) allow ¾ to 1 pound of ready-to-cook weight for birds weighing less than 12 pounds; ½ to ¾ pound for birds weighing 12 pounds and over. For each serving of roasted turkey quarter or half allow ½ to ¾ pound of ready-to-cook weight.

Servings needed Pounds of turkey

4 to 10	4 to 8
10 to 20	8 to 12
20 to 30	12 to 16
30 to 40	16 to 20
40 to 50	20 to 24

THAWING

Follow package directions, or use one or a combination of these methods:

1. Thaw the bird in the refrigerator in its original wrapping. Allow 2 to 3 days for whole birds, halves, or quarters.

2. Place the bird in its original wrap under running cold water. Allow 2 to 6 hours.

Thawing may be started in the refrigerator and finished under cold running water.

It is preferable to cook the turkey promptly after you have defrosted it. A defrosted ready-to-cook or a fresh-drawn turkey can be kept for two or three days in a refrigerator at 38° F. or less.

CLEANING

Ready-to-cook turkey should need little cleaning. If additional cleaning is necessary:

• Remove pinfeathers, using tweezers or strawberry huller, or by catching them between thumb and paring knife. To loosen stubborn pinfeathers, place bird in sink under stream of cold water and scrape spots with knife.

Remove bits of lung, kidney, etc., remaining in cavity.

• Rinse outside thoroughly.

• Rinse cavity with cold water.

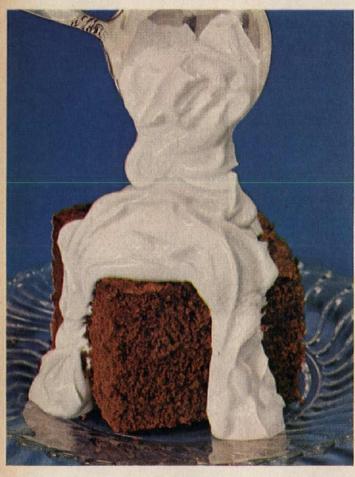

• Dry bird with a clean cloth.

STUFFING

Turkey should be stuffed just before roasting. Stuffing a turkey and refrigerating or freezing it at home for later use is not recommended. You may start preparing the stuffing a day or so ahead of time if you like, but refrigerate the

fresh Sour Cream

America's newest, smartest flavor idea

New flavor for desserts. Delightfully easy, too. Just spoon fresh dairy Sour Cream directly from carton onto devil's food or chocolate cake or gingerbread. Sweeten slightly with confectioners sugar, if you wish. Delicious!

New flavor for salads. Spoon fresh dairy Sour Cream right from carton over crisp vegetables or fresh fruit. Add a little lemon juice, if desired. Only 1/3 the calories of mayonnaise.

New flavor for dips. Just blend fresh dairy Sour Cream with Onion Soup Mix or other seasonings. Garnish with pimiento, chopped olives or green pepper. Enjoy with potato chips and crackers.

New flavor for baked potatoes. Top with plenty of fresh dairy Sour Cream. If desired, garnish with paprika or crumbled Blue Cheese. Serve while piping hot.

Here's why fresh dairy Sour Cream adds so much flavor to so many foods Something wonderful happens to food when you discover how to use dairy Sour Cream! Sour Cream adds a sparkling tangy flavor that's delicious and creamy smooth. And did you know that modern Sour Cream is always made fresh at your dairy from pure, sweet, country cream? It's easy to use. Keep Sour Cream on hand for luscious ideas like these.

dry ingredients and broth separately until time to use, then combine the ingredients just before stuffing the bird.

Allow 1 cup stuffing per pound ready-to-cook weight or 3/4 cup stuffing per pound dressed weight to fill body and neck cavities. A 1-pound loaf of white bread will make about 2 quarts (8 cups) of half-inch crumbs. Pull the bread apart or cut it into cubes. Pile it lightly in the cup to measure.

Spoon the stuffing into the bird lightly—don't pack! Packing may result in a soggy stuffing or cause the bird to burst when stuffing expands during cooking.

A word of caution to those who prefer a moist stuffing—add broth lightly to the dry ingredients. A few tablespoons is enough, for stuffing takes up moisture from turkey during roasting.

After stuffing the neck cavity, skewer the neck skin to the back. When the body cavity has been stuffed, push the drumsticks under the band of skin at the tail, if it is present. Or skewer and lace the opening closed and tie the legs to the tail.

ROASTING

Place the turkey on a rack in a shallow roasting pan. Have the bird breast side up unless it is to be turned during roasting. Small birds roast well without turning. Heavy birds (18 pounds and over) cook more evenly if started breast down and turned when half done. If a roast meat thermometer is used, insert it so that the bulb is in the center part of the inside thigh muscle or the thickest part of the breast meat. Be sure the bulb does not touch bone.

Brush the skin of the turkey with soft or melted fat. Do not cover pan; do not add water. Cover the top and sides of the bird with a loose tent of aluminum foil or a fat-moistened piece of clean white cheese-cloth.

Place in a slow oven (325° F.) and roast, using the table below as a guide.

Timetable—325° (slow) oven 6 to 8 lbs. 2½ to 4 hrs. 8 to 12 lbs. 4 to 4½ hrs. 12 to 16 lbs. 4½ to 5½ hrs. 16 to 20 lbs. 5½ to 7 hrs. 20 to 24 lbs. 7 to 8½ hrs.

You will note the chart gives approximate time to roast fresh or completely thawed birds. (Do not use it for commercially frozen stuffed turkeys. Follow directions on package for roasting them.) Unstuffed turkeys require approximately five minutes per pound less time. It is well to plan the roasting time so that the turkey will be done 20 to 30 minutes before serving time. Letting the turkey "rest" helps make the meat juicy and carving easy, and gives you time to make the gravy.

Baste the turkey with the pan drippings or melted fat several times during roasting. When the turkey is two-thirds done, cut the cord or bridge of skin to release legs—the bird cooks better and looks better.

To test the turkey for doneness, move the drumstick up and down.

If it moves readily or twists out of the joint, the turkey is done. Or press the fleshy part of the drumstick, using a cloth or paper towel to protect the fingers. If the meat feels very soft, it is done. A meat thermometer should register 190° F. Data: Poultry and Egg National Board, United States Department of Agriculture.

Coffee

Don't confuse "bitter" with "strong." They don't mean the same thing at all, though you may hear the words used interchangeably. Good, full-bodied strong coffee can be diluted with hot water and please the taste of a person who likes it weaker; but if a brew is bitter, no amount of diluting or even disguising with cream and sugar will improve the flavor.

Cloudy coffee is often a result of using the wrong grind, probably too fine, so tiny particles filter through the coffee basket. Or it might be caused by perking too fast or forgetting to remove the coffee grounds afterward. Clarity is more than an aesthetic plus. The same sediment that makes coffee cloudy also tends to make it bitter. A clear brew can be kept hot longer with less change in flavor. You might like to try the disposable filters made to fit inside some percolator baskets. Don't make the mistake of pouring cloudy coffee back through the grounds to filter it. This makes it bitter rather than better.

A metallic taste, most common in chrome-finished coffee makers, could be a sign that plating inside is thin in spots. Ask the manufacturer about refinishing. Off-flavor could also be due to natural oxidation if equipment isn't used often. To avoid this, rinse a coffee maker well before you use it and store it with the lid off, leaving parts out to "air."

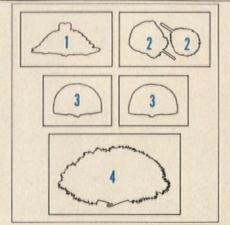

Coffee maker capacity influences flavor. Most types make the best coffee when filled to at least ¾ capacity (six cups in an eight-cup size, for example). It's no luxury, therefore, to own at least two coffee makers—a small one for every-day use; a larger, automatic model for company occasions; and even a party-size model, if your friends are real coffee lovers.

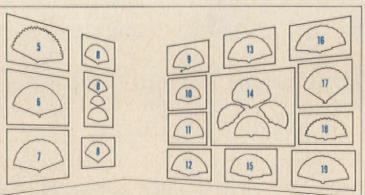

In buying a coffee maker, either for yourself or to give, look for these signs of good design and quality: A handle you can grasp firmly without scorching fingers. Safe, easy pouring. A base broad enough to resist tipping. Cleanability-smooth surfaces with few seams, tubes, and crevices. (You can scour aluminum or stainless steel; plated linings call for special stain removers only.) Parts that can be replaced easily if lost or damaged. Understandable use and care directions. Clear markings for measuring water. In electric models: a signal light or glass top to show when coffee is done; a well insulated base to protect a table.

Shrinks Hemorrhoids New Way Without Surgery STOPS ITCH - RELIEVES PAIN

For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain - without surgery.

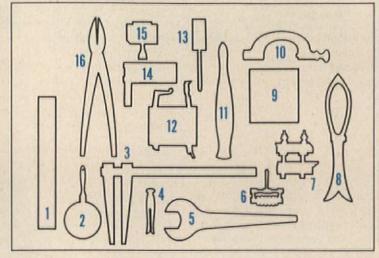

In case after case, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place.

Most amazing of all-results were so thorough that sufferers made astonishing statements like "Piles have ceased to be a problem!"

The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne®)-discovery of a world-famous research institute.

This substance is now available in suppository or ointment form under the name Preparation H®. Ask for it at all drug counters.

The FHA Answers Your Questions

Why is it that the new FHA home improvement loans carry interest at only 6 per cent but the old Title I loans are still being made at a higher rate?

Two different kinds of credit are involved. Title I loans are consumer credit loans—that is, they are made for relatively short terms, on the borrower's signature, usually without collateral or co-signers. This kind of loan always carries a higher financing charge than a long-term loan for which security is taken by the lender.

The new home improvement loans, which are intended for larger repair and improvement jobs, are made in amounts up to $10,000 and can be repaid over terms as long as 20 years. Security is taken and the borrower's note is recorded. In addition to the 6 per cent interest, the borrower pays an FHA mortgage insurance premium of ½ of 1 per cent on declining balances. He also pays a $20 application fee and closing costs. The lender, in addition, is allowed to make an initial service charge of not more than 1 per cent of the loan amount

Is it possible to get an FHA-insured improvement loan if you bought a home with no down payment and are paying for it like rent? We are buying on contract and will not have the deed to our home until we have paid another $300 toward the down payment. The house has no bathroom and we want to put one in.

Yes, it is possible for a family that is buying a home on contract to get an FHA-insured Title I home improvement loan. These loans are made in amounts up to $3500. They can be repaid in monthly installments over terms as long as 5 years. Collateral and co-signers are usually not necessary. The chief requirements are that you have a good credit record and can show that you are able to make the monthly payments on the loan without too much trouble.

But if you are thinking of the new home improvement loans that FHA can now insure in amounts up to $10,000, repayable over terms up to 20 years, the answer is no. To obtain this kind of loan, you would have to own your home (even though there might be a mortgage on it), and the property would have to meet FHA minimum property standards.

I have a Title I home improvement loan partly paid off. Would it be worth while to refinance with one of the new 20-year FHA improvement loans?

It would not be possible to do this. The new loans must be used to pay for proposed improvements. They cannot be used to pay for work already done or to refinance an outstanding debt.

I live in an older neighborhood that has been designated as an urban renewal area but the mortgage on my home is not insured by FHA. Would this prevent me from getting one of the new FHA home improvement loans?

The fact that your home is mortgaged—whatever type mortgage you have—would not prevent your getting a loan, but it might limit the amount you could borrow.

The owner of a home in an urban renewal area who wants to repair or improve his home can borrow as much as $10,000 or as little as $1000 (or even less, if a small amount is needed to bring the property into compliance with neighborhood standards prescribed by a local public agency). There is a limitation, however. The amount of the improvement loan cannot be greater than the estimated cost of the proposed repairs. Also, the improvement loan plus any outstanding debt related to the property cannot add up to more than the amount of the mortgage FHA could insure on the property.

For example, suppose FHA estimates the present value of your property at $15,000, and that the outstanding balance of your mortgage is $13,000. The cost of the proposed repairs is estimated to be $10,000. Adding the $10,000 to the present value of the property, we have a total valuation of $25,000. On this valuation, FHA could insure a mortgage of not more than $22,800. But your outstanding mortgage, plus the $10,000 needed for improvements would total $23,-000. Your loan, therefore, could not be more than $9800. If your mortgage balance were $200 less, you could borrow the full $10,000.

Unfair Real Estate Assessments

a correct record of what you paid for your house.

"Now and then we find homes which actually cost only half of what our records show," one assessor reports.

HOW TO APPEAL YOUR ASSESSMENT

Even if the assessors in your community are reputable, you may still feel your assessment is unfair. If this is the case, here's what you can do.

When the assessor raises the valuation on your home, he is supposed to notify you by mail. If you think it's too high, your first recourse is the assessor himself. Go see him, state your reasons, and ask him to come and look at your home again. Back up your visit with a letter.

He may comply unless his books are already closed. If that's the case, you should wait until the "grand list" or "assessment roll" is ready. This is a public list and you're entitled to see it and compare your assessment against those of your neighbors. Some newspapers publish it; some towns print and distribute it.

You can appeal this figure to a Board of Review (sometimes called a Board of Relief). You are entitled to a private hearing and you may have a lawyer. "I feel sorry for the taxpayer who goes before the average Board of Review today," says one assessor. "You know what our board does? They simply telephone me and say, 'Your assessment is being appealed by Mr. and Mrs. Jones. What should we do?' And I say, 'Don't change it.' So the board hands down its 'impartial decision'-'No change.'"

The board may cut your assessment, leave it alone-or even increase it. If you lose, you have the privilege of going to court. You may hire your own appraiser who will testify in your behalf. You will need a lawyer, and in some states you must deposit $200 to show you really intend to carry through with the case.

Now comes another problem. You may win your case in court, but the satisfaction could be shortlived. The court's ruling is good for only one year. Then some boards may become vindictive and whack you with a higher assessment.

WHAT YOU CAN DO

So what can you do? The only answer, leading assessors agree, is this: begin a fight right now for an honest, businesslike assessment system in your town, if you don't have one. "The old three- or fiveman, part-time boards must go," says one leader. He believes every municipality-even the smallestmust have a highly trained, fulltime professional assessor who is honest and beyond the reach of politicians. If necessary, small communities can share the cost and services of such a man.

Waterbury, Connecticut, once a hotbed of tax scandals, now has such an assessor in the person of Aldro Jenks, who has his appointment for life. "If anyone tries to put political pressure on me, I will broadcast his name at once," Jenks has warned.

Also consider the aforementioned Peter Marsele. His honesty and ability are so trusted by his community of 14,000 that he had only 27 appeals last year. (By contrast, a city of 88,000 had 4000 appeals.)

How can your town get such an assessor? Only by steady pressure from property owners, civic clubs, and women's organizations.

In the meantime, more and more communities are hiring outside firms. These assessment engineers are being hired by an increasing number of cities to make evaluations, and are paid between $25,000 and $500,000, depending on the size of the town. By and large such companies have honest and able men. Yet some have been known to take orders from local politicians.

To make sure this doesn't happen in your city, a nonpartisan citizens' committee should investigate all firms being considered. Once a firm has been hired, this same committee can act as a watchdog on procedure.

How much higher will assessments go? "The end is not in sight," says Aldro Jenks. "So long as we keep asking local governments for more and more services, taxes will keep going up."

If it's inevitable that your taxes will continue to keep rising, be sure that you are only paying your fair share. This brings up another point, which bears watching by everyone who must pay real estate taxes.

Many properties are exempt from taxation. Every time a property is exempted, you wind up paying a larger share. There have been so many abuses of the exemption rulings that some states have tightened their controls. Louisiana limits exemptions to properties mentioned in its constitution.

In Kentucky exempt organizations are required to file annual returns. The object is to prevent such mistakes as reputedly occurred in Illinois where a home owner had an exemption because his name was M. E. Church.

ALBUM OF READERS' HOMES

We would like to share with you some of the snapshots that come to us in the mail. We'd like to hear from you, too. Please include pictures.

Cour stone ranch house was built ten years ago on two acres. We have favored Early American decorating, with colonial hanging lamps and a stone fireplace in the paneled den. Our small collection of antiques fits well into this setting. Though the atmosphere is Early American, the floor plan is modern and has proved very comfortable.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Miller Milwaukee, Wisconsin

66 Two years ago Oregon celebrated its 100 years of statehood and we were reminded that our house has a history, too. It was completed on June 1, 1905, the day the Lewis and Clark Centennial Exposition opened in Portland. When we bought it 12 years ago it was badly run down, but we've refurbished it inside and out.

Mrs. R. D. Du Frene, Portland, Oregon

6 Myhusband, an architectural and mechanical drawing teacher, designed and built our home. He took the best features of three homes in which we'd lived and came up with a plan that suits our family perfectly. One special pleasure: sliding glass doors in the family room.

Mrs. J. P. Johnston, Benton, Louisiana

old apple orchard. We designed and built most of the house ourselves, and have tried to blend it into its typical New England setting.

Inside we have used pine for the walls, pine furniture (some of which we made ourselves), and braided and hooked rugs.

Mr. and Mrs. James H. Murray, Georgetown, Massachusetts

66 There are very few houses like ours in Florida many people are surprised to see a New England type house surrounded by palm trees. We've used French provincial throughout, with the exception of the Florida room, which has rattan furniture and a tile floor.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Higgins, Homestead, Florida
