This issue of Housing is published in national and separate editions.

A milestone for housing

For the first time in our 27-year history—first as HOUSE & HOME and now as HOUSING—we are publishing a directory in addition to our other 12 issues. And as a result, for the first time the housing industry has a comprehensive source of the manufacturers who serve the industry and of the products they manufacture.

There is an obvious need for such a directory. Over the past decade, while the average number of housing units built each year has not risen appreciably, there has been a marked rise in both the quantity and complexity of products that go into those units.

Part of this rise is due to the demands of an increasingly affluent market, part to the growing need for energy efficiency, and part to just plain technological progress. But whatever the cause, the result is that it is very difficult for the builder, the architect and the property manager to know what's on the market and who makes it.

The vital statistics of this issue prove the point. We list nearly 1,700 manufacturers in more than 800 product categories and subcategories; 117 home manufacturers; and 85 trade and professional associations.

We'll be updating the directory each year, adding and deleting as the occasion demands. Meanwhile, because our purpose is to help you run your business, we'll be interested in any suggestions you may have toward making the directory even more useful. —M.C.H. Jr.

Models can look grand long after opening day

The secret: regular room-by-room inspection tours.

But—and this is a very important “but”—you have to take a checklist with you while touring. No one’s memory or eyesight is sharp enough to keep track of all the model-maintenance details. And everything from plants to wallpaper must be spic-and-span and placed just as the decorator intended. Otherwise you’ll lose that opening-day freshness.

What’s more, once you’ve got a checklist formalized, you can confidently hand over inspection chores to a senior field manager.

In designing a checklist for your model complex, you may want to study the sample model-maintenance list shown here. It’s based on the one I use personally. Following are some of the areas that need special attention. Items can be added or subtracted to suit your needs, of course.

Entry. There’s truth in the saying that first impressions are lasting ones—especially when it comes to model homes. So your first job is to clean and polish the front door and doorknob and shake or wash the dust mat.

Once you step inside, make sure hard-surface flooring in the entry area is damp mopped or polished—but don’t get it too slick. You don’t want a slip-and-fall liability suit on your hands.

Any handrails in evidence should be dusted and polished. Likewise, bulbs in lighting fixtures—chandeliers, especially—should be checked for dust and the fixture itself cleaned.

Check also to see whether bulbs need to be replaced. (Note: Despite the energy crunch, lights should be on at all times. This gives your models a brighter, more homey look.)

Make sure entry wallpaper isn’t torn or covered with fingerprints. Prospects will often fall in love with a wallpaper pattern the minute they walk into a model, and they will rub their hands over it to see what kind it is.

Is any entry paint chipped or marred? Scrub it or repaint it pronto.

If you have decorator items in the entry—a built-in shelf, for instance—be sure an upgrade sign is prominently displayed. Don’t build your prospects up for a letdown later.

A final word: the grandest entry can be killed by dying plants. Make sure yours are alive and flourishing. And if they’re plastic, get rid of them!

Kitchen. Many homeshoppers gravitate toward the kitchen first, so it’s got to be in mint condition.

Make sure all cabinets are free of fingerprints; they should be gleaming. If there’s hardware on cabinets and drawers, check that it’s screwed on tight.

Appliances displayed on countertops and drainboards—mixers, blenders, toasters, etc.—should be plugged in. This gives the kitchen a functional, home-like look.

Naturally, the major appliances—refrigerator, oven, dishwasher—should be free of fingerprints and waterspots. But don’t forget to watch out for any dust buildup on top of the refrigerator or other reachable surfaces. An accumulation of dust can ruin the feeling of warmth you’re trying to achieve. Remember, everyone likes to think of himself as tidy.

And don’t forget to look inside appliances. Make sure the refrigerator isn’t storing up any unpleasant odors. People invariably open refrigerator doors and a sour smell can be a real turnoff.

Kitchen drapes or shades should be wrinklefree and spotless; mini-blinds should be dustfree and operate easily.

Glass on light fixtures should be cleaned and metal parts polished.

A final inspection tip: Any kitchen merchandising setup, such as a baking scene with mixing bowls, flour, spoons and cookbook, should be intact. It’s natural for people to study these little scenarios, so make sure they’re believable. If the setup looks even halfway staged, prospects may judge the builder guilty of cutting corners on design. Hence, they fear, he may have cut corners on construction, too.

Living room. People—youngsters, in particular—love to try out sofas and bounce on pillows. Some shoppers rearrange furniture to hold a little family pow-wow to discuss the merits of a home. Others move pieces around to see how their own furniture would fit.

So you must check carefully for spots, stains, tears and other damage to furniture. And try running a white glove over tabletops, fireplace mantels and any ledges or railings that can collect dust. A fine model interior can look like a Salvation Army thrift shop in less than a month if the builder lets it happen.

Of equal importance: Make sure you’ve asked for a copy of the decorator’s floor plan, so you can see that furniture is placed as it was originally. Don’t forget that your decorator deliberately arranged the room to create a conversational mood. The spell is broken if furniture is shifted around by prospects or, unintentionally, by salespeople and maintenance workers.

Carpeting should be vacuumed and raked to fluff up the pile. And make certain there are no spots or stains—a job that takes an eagle eye.

Draperies should be hanging straight to exactly one-half inch from the floor. If they don’t, make sure your drapery installer comes and remedies the situation.

Are the bulbs in lamps and lighting fixtures the same wattage as your decorator specified originally? Low wattage won’t throw

Some like it hot

...or cold...or warm.

With the new Price Pfister washerless kitchen faucet, just set the handle at your own desired temperature and it stays that way, off or on, until you decide to change water temperature by simply moving the handle to another position.

OTHER FEATURES ARE:

Longer spout for greater sink coverage. It's so much easier to clean your whole sink with one sweep of the spout.

Higher spout for cleaning and filling large containers. No more banging of pans or spilling water, because the spout is too close to your sink.

Plus

- Light fingertip single-handle control.
- Full 180° handle rotation for a wide temperature adjustment range.
- Water and energy saver.
- And...no washers, ever!

off the desired amount of light. This can, depending on the color scheme, make a living room look dark and foreboding. A 200w bulb, on the other hand, can scorch the lampshade.

Are pictures straight?
Are plants watered and healthy looking?

What about the books or magazines your decorator displayed to give your models a lived-in look? If they're torn or ragged, your new product will look too lived in—another turnoff. And if someone has walked off with them, they should be replaced.

Dining room. For some reason dust seems to settle most quickly in the dining room. If you have set the table for a meal, make sure the glassware, plates, bowls and flatware (no sterling, please) look as if they've just been put out.

Chances are you have used more accessories in the dining room than anywhere else. Be sure to replace any that have been damaged or stolen. It's a mistake to ignore a missing tablespoon or a cracked cup. As far as I'm concerned, that's like going out to dinner wearing only one sock. Not everyone will notice, but enough people will to spoil the evening.

Bedrooms. The master bedroom must convey an image of warmth, total security and elegance. Any dirt or disarray will not be tolerated here.

The bed should be made, of course, and the spread should be taut and wrinkle free. Pillows should be fluffed up.

All bric-a-brac and collectibles should be thoroughly dusted—as should the whole room. You should pay special attention to dresser tops and lampshades.

Clean the mirrors and check the wallpaper to see whether it's perfectly clean. Can you spot small tears or unravelling seams? If so, patch them at once.

Carpet should look as if it had just been installed.

Bathrooms. As we all know, people touring model homes think the bathrooms are there for their own use. If the toilet flushes, they use it. They wash their hands with the decorator soap and dry them on the color-coordinated towels.

For this reason, bathrooms should be checked frequently—several times a day, at least—to make sure they are spotless. But knock first if the door is closed. One sales manager told me that during one of his inspection tours, he interrupted a couple taking a shower.

When you're dealing with a hole-in-the-wall this big, you'd better think insulation.

In most cases, the patio doorway is the biggest opening in the house—and therefore the biggest gap in thermal efficiency.

The new Therma-Tru French Patio Door System closes this gap. With magnetic weatherstripping that seals like a refrigerator door. Ford Sunglas[®], which reduces heat transmission. And a perfect thermal break, which eliminates frost and condensation.

It all adds up to an insulation value of R 8.5—about 3-times that of a conventional wood or aluminum sliding patio door. And more insulation means lower fuel consumption.

Other important features include center hinging, for better wall space utilization. And an exclusive strike plate^{} for added security.

The Therma-Tru French Patio Door System. The best thing that ever happened to a hole-in-the-wall.

For more information write Therma-Tru, 4747 Holland Sylvania Road, Sylvania, Ohio 43560.

Therma-Tru products manufactured at: Colorado Springs, Colorado; Van Buren, Arkansas; Toledo, Ohio.

How to cut time off your laps.

New Sturbridge lap siding

Introducing a beautiful edge in the race to sell homes: Weldwood® Sturbridge™ lap siding, from Champion Building Products®

Unlike single lap siding, Sturbridge goes up three laps at a time, in convenient 1' x 16' strips. What it means is simply this: it can save you from $\frac{1}{3}$ to $\frac{2}{3}$ the installation time and still give you all the warmth and colonial beauty of traditional lap siding.

Sturbridge will save you more than time, too. You won't need wedges or shims—simply use nominal 1" corner boards. And it's easy to work with. Sturbridge goes right up over plywood, lumber or structural fiberboard. It saws and takes nails beautifully. And it comes factory-primed.

Sturbridge isn't just fast and easy. It's good: it's a genuine Weldwood hardboard siding. Which means it'll look great over the years, will resist denting, checking and cracking, and won't ever rust or corrode. And it meets or exceeds the requirements of all national building codes and most local ones.

The point is this: when you want a classic colonial lap siding and you want it fast, look for new Sturbridge at your local Headquarters/Champion Building Products Dealer.

Or, for further information, call your local Champion Building Products Sales Office.

Traditional exteriors (right) of condo project in Wayland, Mass., feature stained clapboard siding and white trim. New-England look was important to sales since most buyers came from within 20 miles of site.

Village-like siting of 430-unit project is seen in partial site plan at right. Attached and detached houses are grouped in small clusters that look inward to landscaped grounds (near right) or outward to untouched open space (far right). Since 260 of site's 360 acres are public parkland or private common area, overall density is a single-family-like half-unit per acre. Maintenance is performed by condo association, which charges from $85 to $115 a month.

Smothered by regulations? Look how this developer hurdled restrictive zoning Turkey Hill Associates* had to conform to just about every restriction a town can levy in getting Mainstone Farm off the ground.

The developer had a great site—360 bucolic acres in Wayland, Mass. But conservation-minded town fathers demanded that 129 acres be deeded for public parkland and 137 more be set aside for private open space.

And there were plenty of restrictions on what could be built on the remaining 100 acres. No conventional detached houses, said the town—that would chop up the site with roads and subdivided lots. No clustered detached homes, either—that would still bring in too many school-aged children.

“We could build townhouses,” says Jay Grossman, a partner in The Codman Co., Boston marketing specialists called in to handle sales. “But these could not exceed a density of five per acre or average more than two bedrooms a unit. We didn’t think we could sell anything like that.”

But the 430-unit project has sold well, thanks to a development plan that satisfies town requirements and still offers a competitive edge in attracting buyers. Here’s how Turkey Hill Associates pulled it off.

Attached and detached. Instead of townhouses, the developers created small clusters of attached single-family houses (site plan at left). A few detached houses were included for buyers who want more privacy and these were accepted by the town as long as they did not exceed 10% of the units.

Buildable density pencilled out at 4.25 per acre. And hardscaping and utility runs were kept to a minimum.

Architect Ned Collins of Lincoln, Mass., designed six diverse layouts (1,276 to 1,827 sq. ft.) that offer plenty of single-family variety and privacy (plans on pages 20 and 21). Two-story homes are joined so that their multiple wings, recesses and projections screen outdoor patios; ranches are attached through their garages or are freestanding.

Exteriors (above left) use the clapboard siding and wood trim that are common to the area. Explains Grossman:

“Three-quarters of our buyers are empty nesters coming out of large detached houses. They’re comfortable with layouts and a design that are similar to what they once had. But they’re also delighted with the maintenance-free living that our condo ownership provides.”

Strong sales. The project’s initial 75-unit phase sold out in three months at prices from $65,000 to $90,000. Another 20 homes have sold in the 68-unit second phase, which opened last month at $85,000 to $120,000.

“It took four years to get Mainstone Farm through its approval process,” says Grossman. “Now all that effort and patience are paying off.”

—JOEL G. CAHN

*A joint venture of the partners of Boston Properties, real estate developers; and Devens Hamlen, owner of the site.

L-shaped layout of 1,620-sq.-ft. house above screens private rear patio off dining room. Most glass is along rear wall to take advantage of views. Garage is next to kitchen for convenience. House opened for $74,500.

Ranch layout (left) can be joined to other units through its garage or can serve as freestanding house. Rear patio off living room is part of sales package; second patio off bedroom hall is optional. Master bedroom is particularly secluded at end of long wing.

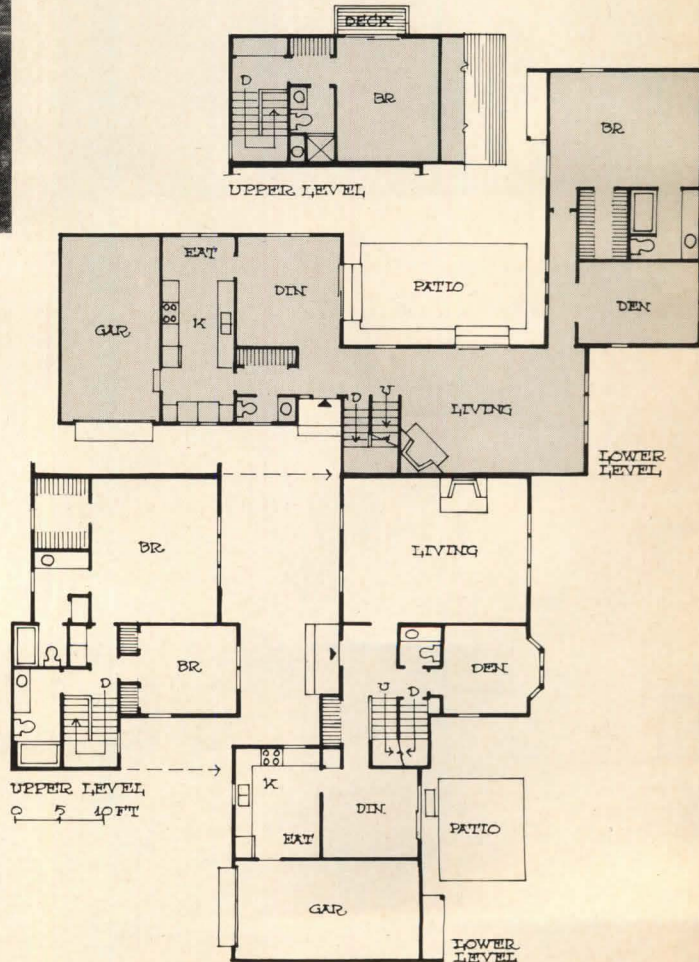

This house has 1,553 sq. ft. and opened for $70,500. Not shown is smaller, more compact version (1,276 sq. ft.) that opened for $65,000.

Rear yards (above) of two joined units (plans at right) are given privacy and visual distinctiveness by staggered walls and broken rooflines. Both houses have single-story wings sprouting from sides of two-story element. Since units are joined at their two-story sections, the overall impression is of a large, detached house.

Unshaded unit in joined plans has 1,800 sq. ft. and opened for $85,000. Shaded unit has 1,672 sq. ft. and sold for $77,500.

Central court is formed by double wings of house shown in photo above and in plan at right. Court is accessible from both living room and unusual dining/family room option. House's eating wing is actually a multipurpose entertainment area. Buyers can choose an informal family room open to the kitchen, or a formal dining room closed off from the kitchen by bifold doors.

At 1,827 sq. ft. and $90,000, this house is project's biggest and most expensive offering.

Why were these houses sold as townhouses?

But until they were promoted as such, sales lagged at Manitou, a community of attached houses in Wayne, N.J.

"We sold only 20 homes in five months," says developer Noah Berley. "Buyers couldn't understand the concept we were offering."

Here's why.

New idea. The type of development plan used here—which made Manitou look like a detached-house community—had never been seen in the area. The project's 120 units are sited in small groupings on a wooded 80 acres. Floor plans are large (1,800 to 2,400 sq. ft.) and diverse; density is low (1.5 units per acre). And entries, decks and landscaping all impart single-family privacy. (See photos and plans on these and next two pages.)

"We figured we'd beaten the competition by coming in with a totally different idea," says Berley.

But the project's prospects, mostly affluent empty nesters, were strangely reluctant to buy. They had been shopping townhouses and condo apartments and they were unprepared for a move-down home that looked so much like the house they wanted to leave.

Buyers were also confused by a sales package that includes fee-simple ownership and a homeowners association. Says William E. Becker of Teaneck, N.J., Manitou's marketing consultant:

"People here equate maintenance-free living with condo ownership. They didn't think their style of living would change at all after buying a Manitou home."

Changeover. So Becker and Berley switched their promotion program in midstream. Instead of stressing "attached single-family living" in ads and brochures, they called the Manitou units townhouses for the first time. And they underscored the point that the project offers the same low maintenance as condo communities.

Result: 40 sales at $102,000 to $118,000 in the three months after the new promotions appeared.

"We knew our houses were superior to conventional townhouses," says Becker. "But we had to show buyers the similarities before we could point up the differences." —J.G.C.

Attached houses look like detached houses in Wayne, N.J. (Model area is shown above.) Project's 1.5-per-acre density was mandated by town, which required same density as detached houses built on 30,000-sq.-ft. lots.

Traditional design features clapboard siding and colonial-style chimneys and shutters. Recessed entries such as the one in house at left offer single-family privacy. Architect: Richard E. Martin & Assoc., Philadelphia.

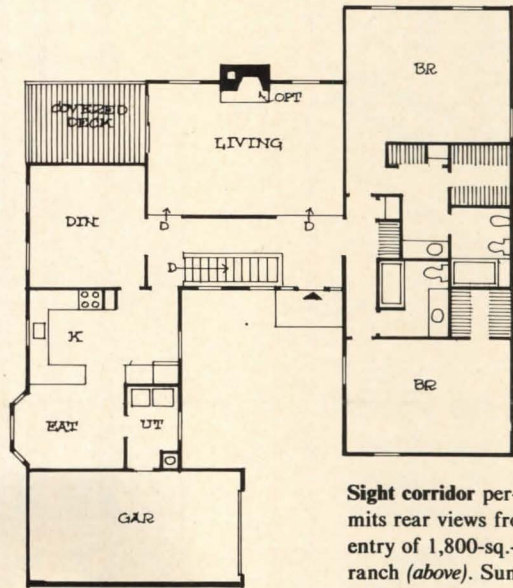

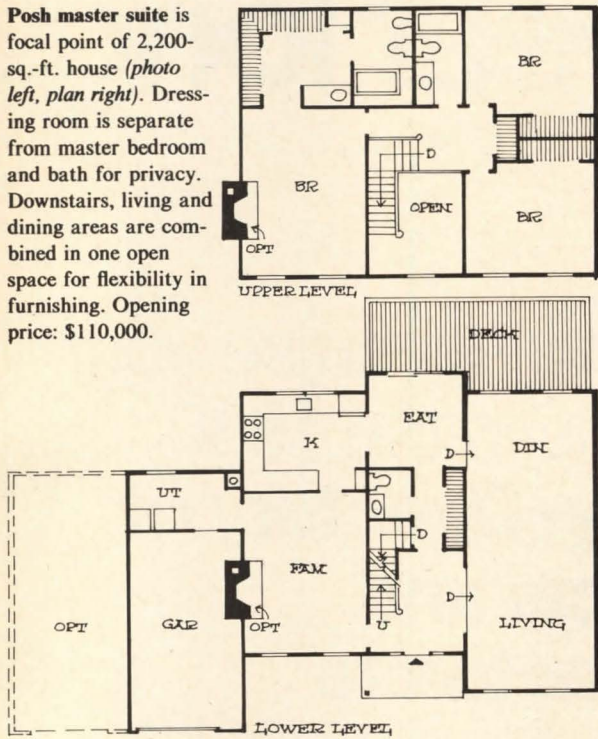

Breakfast nook (left) is open to kitchen, den and rear deck of 2,400-sq.-ft. house (plan at right). First-floor master suite suits buyers who don't wish to climb stairs. Project's largest house opened at $118,000.

Four different floor plans have a single-family feel

Posh master suite is focal point of 2,200-sq.-ft. house (photo left, plan right). Dressing room is separate from master bedroom and bath for privacy. Downstairs, living and dining areas are combined in one open space for flexibility in furnishing. Opening price: $110,000.

Sight corridor permits rear views from entry of 1,800-sq.-ft. ranch (above). Sunken living room opens to covered deck. Project's smallest plan opened at $102,000.

Vaulted foyer (left) gains entry impact for 2,000-sq.-ft. house at right. (Feature is also found in project's other two-story plans.) Curved stairway offers view of entry from upper level.

Plan at right also has corner rear deck that is accessible from den and breakfast nook. Arrangement turns entire area into informal outdoor/indoor entertainment center. House opened for $102,000.

Project's interior designer was Paula Greenberg, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

"With Carrier's Energy Saver Program, our buyers can swing an extra $4,000 mortgage money."

"When you can show prospects monthly cost comparisons—real savings—in black-and-white," says Wayne Ausmus, President of Elmhurst, "suddenly they see expanded buying and borrowing power for themselves."

"Our Island Club Homes here in Orlando are unique in Florida, and they're all Carrier Energy Savings Opportunity Homes," adds Mr. Ausmus. "Each home has been evaluated by Carrier's computer. And the printouts show the monthly savings comparisons among several Carrier energy-saving options. Everything is taken into consideration—types of doors and windows, weather stripping, the amount of wall and roof insulation, and how much the monthly energy savings are for each option."

"On our Outrigger model, for instance, the Carrier high-efficiency heat pump saves $40 a month compared to standard electric heat with air conditioning," continues Mr. Ausmus.

"Those savings can be boosted another $14 a month by adding Carrier's heat reclamation unit. Now a prospect can seriously consider a pool or other luxury option."

"Carrier's Energy Savings Opportunity Home Program is a proven way to enable a homeowner to buy all the house he can afford," says Mr. Ausmus.

Unnecessary duct work seized! - by the "Boys" from W.W.P.A.

The big Packard eased to a soundless stop. Quickly, the sleuths from W.W.P.A. stepped from the car and nabbed the duct work. It wasn't needed, because the builder was using the Western Wood Plen-Wood System. You know how Plen-Wood works: it uses the entire underfloor area as a plenum to distribute warm or cool air throughout the house.

It makes ducts unnecessary. And, it eliminates the concrete slab. So, it saves on every house, depending on location and local codes. And Plen-Wood cuts homeowners' energy costs. The "Boys" have the facts—just the facts—on Plen-Wood. Watch for 'em. If you don't see a big, black Packard around your homes, call (503) 224-3930, or send the coupon, today!

Property managers: Here's a publication designed specifically for you. Back to Basics with Basile takes you through all aspects of property management, from sample report forms to problem-solving techniques.

Consider, for example, the pie chart shown above. Part of an "Expense Analysis" form utilized by the Gene Glick Management Corp. of Indianapolis, Ind., the diagram shows how each rent dollar is apportioned for various expense categories. According to the author, a rental manager could use this form to help convince a skeptical tenant that a pending rent increase is justified.

The author, Frank Basile, is a columnist for "Concepts," the monthly publication of the Apartment Association of Indiana. This useful primer is a compilation of excerpts from his speeches and writings. The soft-cover edition is priced at $13.25 (plus 4% sales tax for Indiana residents). Write Charisma Publications, Box 40321, Indianapolis, Ind. 46240.

A new manual of procedures for choosing wood wall systems that comply with new Farmers Home Administration insulation standards has been compiled.

The workbook, published by the National Forest Products Assn., shows builders how to select wood wall systems under either a component option or a wall envelope option. Both energy-saving methods meet FmHA 1978 Thermal Performance Standards. Worksheets for determining wall systems, using data contained in the publication, are included. Copies of "Wood Wall Systems That Meet Farmers Home Administration 1978 Thermal Performance Standards" are $10 each from NFPA, Technical Services Div., 1619 Massachusetts Ave. N.W., Washington, D.C. 20036.

Did you know that, according to recent parking surveys and studies, between 80 and 90% of all parking demand in the U.S. is satisfied by surface parking facilities rather than multi-level structures? This is just one of the interesting facts in The Dimensions of Parking, a book that can assist you in planning and constructing a nonresidential parking facility that will best fit your specific needs.

One section deals with functional design of the parking development. The book, jointly published by the Urban Land Institute and the National Parking Assn., also covers construction details and financing methods. Appendices include a glossary and "Parking Demand at the Regionals," a discussion of the amount of parking facilities needed in relation to gross leasable area. Available from ULI for $12.00 for members and associates and $16.00 for nonmembers.

Color this publication useful—and interesting. The Use of Color in Interiors (2nd edition) by Albert O. Halse AIA, ASID contains an in-depth study of the psychological effects of color: data which may prove helpful in creating the proper mood for your model-home decor. Some ideas on conserving energy through new techniques in lighting are also presented. Price: $24.95. Write McGraw-Hill Book Co., 1221 Ave. of the Americas, New York, N.Y. 10020.

HOW TO USE THIS DIRECTORY

This is a quick guide to manufacturers who make the products you need for your homebuilding and light-construction business.

Manufacturers are listed two ways: alphabetically and by product. In addition, there is a section on manufactured housing producers and another on trade and professional associations.

When you want to reach a particular manufacturer

Look in Section 1, beginning on page 38. This is simply an alphabetical listing of housing product manufacturers, their full address and telephone number.

A bold-face listing means that manufacturer has advertised in this issue, so you can find information about its products by turning to the page indicated.

When you want to know who makes a particular product

Look in Section 2, beginning on page 64. This section is arranged much like the Yellow Pages in a telephone directory. Products are listed alphabetically, with the manufacturers arranged alphabetically under each product category. An index of the products included begins on p. 63.

To help you find exactly the product you are looking for, many general product categories have been broken into specific subcategories by means of codes inserted after the manufacturers' names. These codes, which describe product types, features and materials, are explained in a box at the beginning of the various product listings.

Thus, for example, if you were looking for aluminum louvered bifold closet doors, you would first turn to the category marked "Doors—Closet." The key at the beginning of this entry would tell you the designation for aluminum is (al), for louvered, (l), and for bifold, (b). Only those door manufacturers with (al, l, b) after their names would make precisely what you wanted.

This section shows the manufacturer's name and address. The telephone number can be found in the manufacturers' listing in Section 1.

Again, as in Section 1, a bold-face listing means the company has advertised in this issue, and further information about its products can be found on the page indicated.

When you need information on manufactured housing

Look in Section 3, beginning on p. 159. This is an alphabetical listing of the names and addresses of major producers of manufactured housing. Codes indicate the system used—modular/sectional, panelized/prefabricated or precut—and whether the units are designed for single-family or multifamily use.

When you don't know where to get the information you need

Try the trade and professional associations listed alphabetically in Section 4, beginning on p. 161.

These associations are excellent reference sources, particularly for information on government and industry standards and regulations. Most also offer technical specifications and research materials.

Openings

Pride and Nicolai entryway doors. They've made lasting first impressions in homes like yours for more than a hundred years. Because there's no substitute for wood, our renewable resource, Nicolai's choice grades of vertical-grain fir and hemlock are selected for beauty and durability. Still, grand openings take more than the finest woods. So time and skilled Nicolai craftsmen have evolved more than three dozen designs from simple patterns to richly carved panels and leaded-glass inserts . . . all crafted for increased insulation, reduced heat loss and better home security. See the inviting elegance and durability of all-wood Nicolai doors at your building materials dealer. Then share the pride of grand openings.

Our new VISTA[®] patio door leaves the others standing in their tracks.

Because unlike most patio doors, Vista doesn't slide along a track. Vista swings open instead. So you'll never have to worry about Vista coming off the track or getting stuck in a halfway position.

And unlike most French doors that swing back against the wall, Vista can hinge in the middle. So it doesn't take up interior wall space.

Give your patio door the same advantages you give your front door. Advantages like a frost-free threshold. An insulating system that combines insulated glass with a foam-filled door for many times the energy savings of most sliding glass doors. Magnetic weatherstripping that seals tight just like a refrigerator door. And rugged steel construction that means no warping, twisting, swelling, cracking or call-backs.

But Vista also provides a new dimension in patio door strength. Unlike sliding doors, Vista features a double rabbeted jamb in the center. Which combines with our patented Benchmark steel lock and deadbolt preparation to make a patio door that'll cure anyone's feelings of insecurity.

This easy-to-maintain door is also easy to install. Vista is also unequalled when it comes to ease of installation. Because we've spent long hours designing the Vista door system, you need to spend just a short while putting it up.

And Vista comes in 2 or 3 panel models that can be combined to fit almost any size opening. Screens are optional.

So if you'd like to profit by installing a problem-free patio door, make tracks to your nearest Benchmark dealer. And leave your competition standing in theirs.

There are a kitchenful of reasons to put Hotpoint in your kitchens.

The most important one is your customers' satisfaction. When you install Hotpoint, you're installing quality appliances that will please them now. And for years to come.

1 Hotpoint has everything you need. We make a full line with the kind of features today's buyer is looking for. And our nationwide distribution system makes it easy to get the appliances you need, when you need them.

2 You'll like Hotpoint's ease of installation. For instance, our large capacity refrigerators can be installed almost flush to walls and cabinets. And that's just the beginning. Hotpoint makes a variety of ranges for every kitchen style: hi-low, drop-in, free-standing, surface sections, plus 24" and 27" wall ovens. And Hotpoint dishwashers' front panel allows easy access to leveling legs and electrical and plumbing connections. You can install our dishwasher and disposer on a single 20 Amp circuit where local codes permit. And our washers and dryers can even be installed on an inside wall.

3 Service that's a selling point, not a sore point. We have factory service centers in over 800 cities plus over 5,000 franchised service organizations across the country. Knowing service is always available takes a load off your shoulders.

4 If you'd like to know more about all the benefits of dealing with a single source supplier, get in touch with your Hotpoint builder representative. Or write Hotpoint Contract Sales Division, Appliance Park, AP4-256, Louisville, Kentucky 40225.

We hustle for your business. And it shows.

Humidity. Fungus. Insects. Weather.
Georgia-Pacific's pressure treated
Southern Pine resists them all.

Give termites exactly what they deserve. Build decks and foundations —all above-ground and in-ground installations— with Georgia-Pacific treated Southern Pine lumber. Humidity, fungus, and weather just roll off. Bugs just back off. G-P Southern Pine takes treatment as well as or better than any other softwood. And it retains treatment: it doesn't leach out.

SOUTHERN GOLDTM

If you have questions about treated lumber—what types to use for given applications—call us.
Of course, for applications where you need treated lumber that's odorless, that can be painted, that won't leach out, there's nothing better than our treated Southern Gold. It's so good, it could change your mind about Southern Pine.

"After 1,158 days under the searing Arizona sun, Ruf-Sawn 316 looks nearly as good as the day we put it here."

—results of a three-year weathering test in Black Canyon Stage, Arizona

When Desert Sunshine Exposure Testing Laboratory began testing Simpson Ruf-Sawn 316 exterior siding for its ability to perform under extreme weather conditions, we were confident that it would do pretty well.

But when the test samples came back for some hardnosed evaluations, even we were surprised.

Ruf-Sawn 316 looked too good to be true. For over three years, Ruf-Sawn 316 was subjected to the prolonged heat and ultraviolet radiation of one of the country's severest testing grounds. Black Canyon Stage, located about 35 miles north of Phoenix in the Arizona desert, gets an average of 3,785 sunshine hours a year—substantially more than the national average. And, it gets more Langley units of solar radiation (the major cause of paint and surface breakdown) than any other area in the U.S.

Under this kind of torture-test exposure, Ruf-Sawn 316 outperformed our greatest expectations. In appearance retention. Bond adherence. Finish holding ability. And resistance to checking.

Ruf-Sawn 316 after seven years of exposure New Ruf-Sawn 316

In short—Ruf-Sawn 316 proved to withstand the worst kind of weathering in every performance category—day in and day out.

Look closely at the test samples.

Seven years ago, we began a prolonged exposure test on Ruf-Sawn 316 under another extreme in weather conditions. We placed Ruf-Sawn 316 samples on testing fences in rainy Seattle, Washington.

From October 13, 1972, to May 30, 1979, Ruf-Sawn 316 was subjected 24 hours a day to the moist, salt-laden climate that produces more incidences of mildew than any other area in the country.

As you can see from the actual untouched photos of the samples tested, it's tough to tell the old Ruf-Sawn 316 sample on the left from the new sample straight from our mill. The Ruf-Sawn 316 overlay, after more than seven years of exposure, hasn't split or checked. The paint finish hasn't peeled or blistered. And there's no problem with the overlay separating from its backing. That's what we call weathering!

All the structural advantages of plywood. Aside from weatherability, Ruf-Sawn 316 offers our customers a lot of other advantages. For one thing, paint lasts up to three times longer on the tough overlaid surface than it does on raw wood surfaces. And it takes only about half as much paint to cover a Ruf-Sawn 316 surface.

It's more dimensionally stable than hardboard sidings. It's lightweight, so it's easy to handle. Plus, it doesn't require additional sheathing.

For more information about Ruf-Sawn 316 and Stucco 316, an equally weather-resistant wood siding with an attractive stucco look, write Simpson Timber Company, 900 Fourth Avenue, Seattle, WA 98164.

THE INNOVATORS IN FASTENERS

SPOTNAILS

THE INNOVATORS ARE AT IT AGAIN!

In recent years, SPOTNAILS, the pioneer in pneumatically driven fasteners, has introduced the Spot Cartridge—the large load coil of pins and brads, the lightweight but rugged MNS Round Head Nailer, and power driven corrugated fasteners.

Now, SPOTNAILS presents the new HL Series of pneumatic tools. The HL family includes a heavy duty stapler, a bradder/pinner, a corrugated tool, and a wide crown stapler. Each is unique...compact, yet powerful. HIGH in performance, speed and reliability, but LOW in noise, weight and air consumption.

Wherever quality fastening equipment is required—in construction, factory built housing, furniture and woodworking, packaging—SPOTNAILS offers a full line of nails, staples, brads, pins, corrugated fasteners and carton closing staples, plus modern power tools to drive these fasteners more efficiently.

What will we think of next? Something to make your fastening job easier.

What should you think of the next time you need fastening equipment? SPOTNAILS, the innovators.

CASH IN ON THE SUN WITH GRUMMAN.

The Grumman Sunstream™ solar hot water system lets you build extra, easily recognizable value into your homes. And you can add hundreds of additional profit dollars to every sale.

Best of all, you can offer buyers a home that will help reduce energy bills—for a lower net out-of-pocket cost than the same home with a conventional hot water system.

A $100,000 home with a 90% mortgage would require $10,000 down. The same home with a Grumman Sunstream solar system, if priced at $102,500, would require $10,250 down.

The buyer of a solar home, however, would qualify for a $700 tax credit applied against the $2,500 cost of the system. So net out-of-pocket cost of the down payment, once the refund was received, would be just $9,550. And in certain states, additional tax incentives further lower the net cost of the system.

A COMPETITIVE EDGE FOR YOUR HOMES.

More and more buyers are becoming attracted by the energy-saving potential of the Grumman Sunstream solar system.

Depending on location and water use, a Grumman Sunstream system can provide up to 80% of the energy to make hot water for a typical family of four.

FAMILIES ACROSS THE COUNTRY KNOW THEY CAN CASH IN ON THE SUN.

Grumman Sunstream solar systems are already in operation in many homes across the country.

In addition, consumers are reading about this system in newspaper and magazine ads, and seeing it in TV commercials in a number of major markets.

NEW FLAT PANELS CAN BE RECESSED IN THE ROOF.

Now you can actually recess the panels so as not to disturb the clean lines of the roof. Or you can select the more traditional curved panels.

In either case, you offer your customers the security of our 5-year limited warranty, including parts and labor.

THE SOLAR MODULE. AN IMPORTANT STEP FORWARD.

A special Solar Module eliminates a second hot water tank in some cases, and gives your customers a completely integrated system.

Users can monitor the functioning of the system at a glance. And the Solar Module also greatly simplifies servicing requirements.

ASK GRUMMAN HOW YOU CAN CASH IN ON THE SUN.
